COX IN CALIFORNIA PORTRAYS HARDING AS A REACTIONARY

Says He Was Nominated and Is Sponsored by Group Whom Johnson Fought in 1912.

HITS "CHAMELEON" POLICY

Asserts Rival Reversed Himself in a Day to Meet Gov. Stephens on Oriental Question.

PLEDGES AID TO CALIFORNIA

Promises Full Co-operation When Question of Japanese Settlers Comes Up in Washington.

Special to The New York Times.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 17.—Governor Cox invaded the home State of Senator Hiram W. Johnson today, talked progress in Government and the League of Nations, promised to co-operate with California when the question of Japanese exclusion should come before the Federal Government, and went in detail into his charge that Senator Harding was actually nominated in the room of a Chicago hotel by the same group of reactionary leaders whom Johnson assailed so bitterly in 1912.

Tonight Governor Cox spoke in the great convention hall where he was nominated by the Democratic National Convention last July. He was given a noisy and prolonged demonstration. He plunged first into a comparison of the scenes which had marked his selection "as a result of the unfettered and free expression of the delegates," and asserted that he went into the campaign a free man. The people of San Francisco who watched the convention, Governor Cox said, knew that to be the fact.

And then the Governor took the crowd over the ground at the Republican Convention in Chicago, quoting from a statement which he said Colonel George Harvey made "more in pride than in caution" an hour after Harvey's return to New York following the Republican Convention. It was in Colonel Harvey's room at Chicago, Governor Cox told the people, that Senators Smoot, Brandegee, Lodge and others whom he termed the "Senate oligarchy" cast Wood and Lowden and Johnson aside, and selected their own reactionary candidate.

"Custodians" for Harding.

"The small group of men that made the nomination," said Governor Cox, "has been the custodian of the candidate, sponsored and censored his spoken word and outlined his whole course. In grateful recognition Senator Harding, in his speech of acceptance, promises a plural government in contradiction to the conscience and personal responsibility of the President himself.

"The performance at Marion throughout the weeks has been the greatest political farce in the history of the country. Certain types of men are sent for, and as they leave the front porch prepared interviews are handed to the press. Everything works with mechanical precision. The hand of the masters is supreme, and the one objective is to deceive the public as to what is actually going on behind the scenes."

Taking up the Japanese question, Governor Cox charged that Senator Harding had altered his convictions on that, as well as on the League of Nations and other issues, to satisfy a delegation which came to him from California headed by Governor Stephens. Senator Harding's final statement was quite different from advance copies of his proposed address.

Says Harding Has Chameleon Policy.

"It all promises to the country a chameleon policy," said the Governor. Of his own position, Governor Cox said:

"If California does not desire her lands to come into the possession of Orientals, she may expect, in consequence with the established Democratic principle, the genuine co-operation of the National Government in the working out of a plan whereby she excludes the Oriental settler. There is nothing evasive about this."

Prior to speaking here, Governor Cox made an address to 5,000 people in the public plaza at Sacramento, the home of Senator Johnson.

In his address at San Francisco Governor Cox said in part:

"You can well imagine how deeply my emotions are stirred as I come into this great auditorium. Here it was that our platform was written and leadership in this campaign was established. It would seem fitting that the circumstances attendant upon this convention be recalled in order that a contrast based upon actual fact might be made in the public mind as between the San Francisco and the Chicago convention."

Bomb on Genoa Exchange, But Causes No Casualties

LONDON, Sept. 17.—A time bomb was exploded at the Stock Exchange in Genoa today, says a dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph from Genoa.

Some damage was done, but there were no casualties.

BOTH LOWDEN MEN LEAD IN ILLINOIS

Error of 6,463 Votes Puts Small Behind Lieutenant Governor Oglesby.

But Official Canvass Will Probably Be Needed to Decide the Winners.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.—The result of Wednesday's voting in the Republican primary is still in doubt, and it will probably require an official canvass to determine the successful candidates for the gubernatorial and senatorial nominations. John G. Oglesby, the Lowden candidate for Governor, jumped into the lead today over Len Small, in the incomplete election returns.

An error of 6,463 votes was discovered by the City News Bureau in its totals for Small in the Thirty-second Ward, and reduced his city lead by that much.

Representative William B. McKinley, another Lowden candidate, increased his margin for Senator over Governor Frank L. Smith.

Returns from 5,372 out of 5,737 precincts in the State, including all except 97 precincts down-State and 268 in Cook County, give for Governor: Oglesby, 349,795; Small, 348,649. Oglesby's lead, 1,146.

Oglesby's managers assert that official figures will give him 10,000 plurality. Small's managers make similar claims for him.

Small issued a statement that he had won by more than 30,000, stating that "false reports to the contrary are being circulated for the purpose of encouraging the stealing of votes from me and the falsifying of returns."

Returns from 5,330 precincts, including all except 139 precincts down-State and 268 in Cook County, give for Senator: McKinley, 344,398; Smith, 329,824. McKinley's lead, 14,574.

On Attorney General, the latest figures indicate that Edward J. Brundage, anti-Thompson candidate, has a plurality of about 7,500 in the entire State.

The General Assembly remains Republican and dry. There will be no chance for a revocation of the State search and seizure law or amending it to increase the alcoholic content of averages to more than half of 1 per cent.

Action by the City Council of Chicago to take from Mayor Thompson the power to control the Police Department in connection with election returns was urged today by James Sullivan, Chief Clerk of the Election Commissioner's office. Plans are under way to call a special meeting of the Council to pass an ordinance to be put into effect before Election Day.

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.—Final revision of returns on the Republican ballots in the Congressional primaries outside of Cook County today showed the successful aspirants were as follows:

10th District—Carl R. Chindbloom.
11th District—Ira C. Copley.
14th District—William J. Graham.
16th District—Clifford Ireland.
17th District—Frank H. Funk.
18th District—Joseph G. Cannon.
19th District—Allen F. Moore.
21st District—Loren E. Wheeler.
22d District—William A. Rodenberg.

Of the five Democratic contests for Congressional nominations, only one, that in the Tenth District, was settled today. John H. Haderlein was nominated to oppose Representative Chindbloom in November.

MACSWINEY 'VERY LOW,' SAYS LATEST BULLETIN

Prisoner Rallies in the Afternoon and Then Relapses—He Is Still Conscious.

LONDON, Sept. 17.—The condition of Lord Mayor MacSwiney of Cork was described as very low in the Irish Self-Determination League's bulletin issued tonight. The bulletin says: "Lord Mayor MacSwiney is very low indeed. He is suffering from severe pains in the head. He is still conscious."

An earlier bulletin said:

"Mrs. MacSwiney, who was with the Lord Mayor all afternoon, said he rallied in the early part of the afternoon but later collapsed again. She reported he was conscious, but very exhausted and in great pain."

MacSwiney passed a somewhat better night and had a little sleep, said a bulletin issued at 10 o'clock this morning by the Irish Self-Determination League.

In his report to the Home Office, the physician at Brixton Prison declared there was no change in the Lord Mayor's condition except that a gradual deterioration was noticeable daily.

Hamilton, Ont., Doctors Recommend Sending Him to Asylum.

HEARD "MESSAGE FROM AIR"

Deportation Warrant Asked For—Prisoner Held to Await Our Demand.

WARNED FIVE FRIENDS

Sent Post Cards to Three Here and Predicted Explosion Verbally Before Leaving City.

Special to The New York Times.

HAMILTON, Ont., Sept. 17.—Edwin P. Fischer, the New Yorker who sent post cards to New York friends warning them of an impending catastrophe in Wall Street, is under arrest here. He was placed in custody at the request of his brother-in-law, Robert A. Pope, also of New York and formerly a resident of Hamilton, who has been in this city lately as a landscape gardener for a syndicate laying out a model residential site. Pope based his action on the ground that Fischer is mentally irresponsible and wants him committed to a sanitarium. Several Hamilton doctors have testified that Fischer is mentally unfit to be at large.

H. S. Sweeney, Canadian Immigration Agent here, applied tonight for an order for the deportation of Fischer to the United States. The reason given in the application is that Fischer is illegally in Canada, having previously been confined in a sanitarium for mental diseases in the United States.

No request for extradition has yet been made by New York or United States authorities, but that may come with the officer now on the way to Hamilton. Pending this officer's arrival the charge against Fischer will remain as that of insanity.

In the meantime he is held in the Barton Street Jail here, awaiting the arrival of a detective from New York, who is on his way here in the hope of taking him back as a witness before the Grand Jury. There may be a hot legal battle over the disposition of Fischer, his brother-in-law and his friends desiring that he be sent to a sanitarium or asylum, while the New York authorities want him in that city as soon as possible.

Strangely enough, both Fischer and Pope are in accord on one thing. They believe that Fischer received messages "through the air" warning him of a plot for the explosion in Wall Street. Pope heard last night of Fischer's eccentric actions in a Toronto hotel and his reported threats against millionaires. He motored to Toronto in search of Fischer, found that he had gone to Niagara Falls and followed him there. He persuaded Fischer to come to this city, where both have a number of friends, and had him placed in custody.

"I am convinced," said Mr. Pope today, "that my brother-in-law while in his abnormal mental condition received impressions communicated from the minds of men who were plotting the outrage. On the other hand, in view of the unrest prevalent in the world today, it is just likely that a man in that condition would predict such a disaster to the financial centre of the continent, and a coincidence is possible."

Fischer, himself, when taken before a lunacy commission, consisting of Magistrate Jelfs and Drs. McGillivray and Rosebrough, immediately after his arrest, declared his belief in the theory advanced by Pope.

"I don't know where the message came from—through the air, I guess. I have lived a life of hopefulness and unselfishness. I have never held a grudge against any one, and have always tried to do good to everybody. For this reason I think that God has perhaps given me a power that has not been given to those who lead selfish lives."

"I know when anything awful is going to happen. I know that something terrible is happening right now, because I have that same pain across my forehead which came before the Wall Street explosion."

Magistrate Jelfs asked:

"How did you know exactly when the explosion was going to be?"

"I know," Fischer answered, "because Wall Street is the centre of evil in the world. There is the Stock Exchange. My brother-in-law got in with a firm there. They gave him a buy-and-sell agreement and took all his money. That cost him $15,000. There are stockbrokers there who change their books every three months—get rid of the old books and the old customers."

The two physicians on the commission agreed that Fischer was not responsible. They examined him privately as well as at the hearing. Dr. McGillivray says that Fischer appeared to have an antipathy to J. Pierpont Morgan and President Wilson; that he thought was of recent date and entirely the result of his present mental condition.

This evening Pope conferred with his legal adviser, T. R. Sloane, and Vincent Paul Creighton and William L. Buchanan, two special agents from Buffalo, representing the United States Department of Justice and Charles Arlen, a

Ex-Service Men Organize To Seek Punishment of Reds

William J. Burns, head of the Burns Detective Agency, last night at his home, 42 West Seventy-second Street, issued the following statement:

"Today I was approached by a group of ex-service men of various former divisions of the United States Army wanting to employ my services to run down the perpetrators of yesterday's dastardly bomb outrage.

"They expressed their deep and intense indignation at the fact that several of their former comrades were killed and injured. They also pointed out that this outrage was apparently not aimed at any individual or group of individuals, but at organized government, and recalled that the Reds have frequently denounced our form of government and declared their intention of bringing about a revolution by terrorism.

"These former soldiers further told me they had raised among themselves $326 as a starter for a reward for the apprehension of those responsible for this outrage, and stated they were determined to increase this sum through contributions from the thousands of ex-service men throughout the country."

Mr. Burns said that he expected to confer with the men today, when he will make known his decision.

PALMER COMES HERE TO DIRECT INQUIRY

"TERRORIST" PLOT IS SEEN

Federal Officials Believe Explosion Was Work of Anarchists—Experts Coming.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—Attorney General A. Mitchell Palmer and Francis P. Garvan, assistant Attorney General in charge of the Government's anti-radical campaign, left Washington for New York City today to direct the main investigation of the explosion in Wall Street. They were to confer with William J. Flynn, head of the department's Bureau of Investigation, regarding the evidence so far obtained.

Chief Flynn has made preliminary reports to the Department of Justice and officials here are abreast of the evidence so far uncovered by him. The Government officials here are convinced that the explosion was caused by an unusually powerful time bomb deliberately placed at Broad and Wall Streets by an anarchistic group.

They are satisfied that the bomb was hauled to the vicinity of the United States Sub-Treasury and the Morgan bank on a wagon, splintered fragments of which were found after the tragedy, and that the infernal machine was timed for explosion at noon. This wagon, which was not a "red" vehicle as at first reported, was drawn by a horse which was killed in the explosion, but there is no evidence indicating that those who were responsible for placing the wagon and its load of danger at the designated spot were injured by the bomb.

Believed an "Act of Terrorism."

All the evidence that has been gathered by Flynn and operatives working with him in New York City has been rather carefully sifted and has convinced Government officials that the bomb was exploded as an "act of general terrorism," believed to have been aimed against the Federal Government as well as against American capital.

There is no evidence, however, it was asserted today, to show that this explosion was to be accompanied at this time by any widespread series of similar acts in other cities. Reports to the Department of Justice show that extra precautions have been taken in various parts of the country for the protection of Federal structures and financial institutions. No extra guards, so far as Federal officials will admit, have yet been placed around Government buildings in Washington, but instructions have been given to Government watchmen, guards and to the police in the nation's capital to be especially on the alert.

As a result of the developments there is every indication that there will be an early roundup of anarchists and "Reds." It was pointed out that the only Federal law violated in the explosion of the bomb was that which provides punishment for injury to public property—the Sub-Treasury being Government property—and it was indicated that the Federal Government's investigation will deal chiefly with the extent to which radicals were implicated.

One official, when asked whether any "Red" or anarchistic literature had been discovered in the vicinity of Broad and Wall Street, replied:

"I hope you will not press that question."

Explosive experts were assigned by the United States Bureau of Mines today to

CIRCULARS CLUE TO PLOT

LIKE BOMB ATTACKS IN 1919

PALMER ORDERS PUBLICITY

Threats Dropped in Mail Box by Men Who Planted Explosive, Investigator Asserts.

Evidence that has convinced Government investigators that the explosion in Wall Street was caused by a bomb planted by the same group of anarchists who perpetrated the bomb outrages of June, 1919, was made public in New York late last night by William J. Flynn, Chief of the Bureau of Investigation, Department of Justice.

This evidence was in the form of five rough sheets of paper on which had been printed in red ink:

> Remember
> We will not tolerate > any longer.
> Free the political > prisoners or it will be > sure death for all of you.
> American Anarchist Fighters.

Some of the words in this warning were misspelled. The misspelling is not given because it varied on the different sheets.

These circulars, which Chief Flynn referred to as a "challenge to the American Government," were found by a letter carrier in a mailbox at the southwest corner of Cedar Street and Broadway, about two and one-half blocks, or four minutes' walk, from the spot where the bomb exploded, at 11:58 A. M. on Thursday. They were turned over to Chief Flynn by Chief Post Office Inspector Cochran and were made public by order of United States Attorney General A. Mitchell Palmer, who arrived from Washington last night to take charge of the investigation by the Federal Government.

"It will be recalled," Chief Flynn said, "that the circulars in connection with the bomb outrages of June, 1919, were similarly misspelled, and similarly printed by single rubber-typed stamps. It also will be remembered that those bombs pitted walls as did this one.

Found Just Before Explosion.

"The letter carrier had opened that box at Cedar Street at 11:30 and had found it empty. When he found the five circulars stuffed into it, without wrapping of any sort, at 11:58 he went on to Church Street. He heard a noise which he later learned was the explosion. He turned the circulars over to Mr. Cochran.

"This makes the plan of the bombers fairly clear. They left the wagon with the horse attached in Wall Street, having set the timing device a few moments ahead. They didn't want to take a chance of mailing them. They didn't want to throw them into the street. As they walked away from the scene of their crime, which resulted in the death of so many innocent and law-abiding citizens, they stuffed them in the box. Three minutes later their bomb had exploded.

"There is no doubt at all in my mind that this is about what happened. The fact that the box was empty when the letter carrier visited it at 11:30 and that the circulars were in it at 11:58, so close to the time of the explosion, and so close to the scene of it, carries conviction.

"This is one of the most important clues we have, but, of course, the identification of the horse and wagon that carried the infernal machine to Wall Street is paramount. If we can identify that we should have clear sailing.

"The witnesses thus far examined have told us that the horse was facing east, which is against traffic regulations. However, terrorists would be in a hurry under the circumstances, and probably wouldn't care much about traffic regulations.

"No clockwork has been found—and it shouldn't be expected that any would be left. No metal parts were found in the debris left by the bombs of June 2, 1919, either. But we are reasonably sure that a time device was used. A fuse would have smoked. Some one might have smelled it. The clock arrangement would be safest.

"You might add as an expression of my personal opinion that the bomb was not directed at Mr. Morgan, any member of the Morgan firm, or any other individual. It was planted in the financial heart of America as a defiance against the American people and the American Government. That is my opinion.

"The other circulars we have found have been signed simply 'anarchist fighters.' You may see from these copies that they have added 'American' to their title now.

"The printing indicates that the work

Horseshoes a Clue to the Explosion Truck; Give Lead That May Identify the Owner

HACKENSACK, N. J., Sept. 17.—The horseshoes found on the shattered animal when examined after the Wall Street explosion may furnish the clue to the identity of the driver of the truck believed to have carried the bomb. Detectives are reported to have found a blacksmith who had partly identified the shoes found on the dead horse.

This information was furnished today by Colonel William Mead, chief clerk for J. P. Morgan & Co. He lives at 52 Euclid Avenue, Hackensack.

"We feel that the explosion was premeditated and that a delibcrate attempt was made to destroy the building of J. P. Morgan & Co. and to kill and injure as many people as possible. Cast iron slugs and other evidences of a bomb have been found. The most likely story of the explosion is that a red wagon drawn by a horse stopped on the left side of the curb facing east on Wall Street and directly in the centre of the Morgan Building. A man most likely then set the large bomb in the wagon to explode at 12 o'clock noon and then walked away.

"We have found parts of the wagon and shoes of the horse. These shoes are expected to aid materially in solving the mystery attending the tragedy, for we have found the blacksmith who shod the horse and who claims to know the man who owns the animal."

PATRIOTIC SPIRIT STIRS WALL STREET

Noonday Crowds Turn from Murder Scenes to Observe Constitution Day.

VOW JUSTICE TO ASSASSINS

Brig. Gen. Nicholson Denounces Outrage and Calls for Plotters' Deaths.

Noon and the murder hour had come again to Wall Street and, at the spot where enemies of America twenty-four hours before had slain and maimed, this is what happened:

At the base of Washington's statue on the Sub-Treasury steps, maybe twenty feet from the jagged mark of the bomb, a tall soldier, with a single silver star on each shoulder, was standing at the salute. Down Broad Street to the point where the street seemed to touch the sky, thousands and thousands were standing with bared heads. East and west through Wall Street and north into Nassau Street were other thousands.

Welling in thousand-throated chorus up between the skyscraper cathedrals of commerce, pocked by the assassins' work, the last bars of "America" were going—the preliminary to the observance by the Sons of the American Revolution of the 133d anniversary of the adoption of the Constitution of the United States.

The anthem ended. A silence, complete, significant, was on the great throng. The Brigadier General, William J. Nicholson, turned and faced them. Alluding to Constitution Day and what it should mean, the overseas leader of the 79th Division told of the rights and responsibilities of freemen in such a country as America. The greatest trouble in this country, he told them, is that people think more about their responsibilities. Then he seemed to stretch himself taller. And leaning forward in his earnestness he said:

Nicholson Denounces Outrage.

"Yesterday one of the greatest outrages ever committed against society was perpetrated on the very spot on which we stand. Are we, as American citizens, going to close our eyes to things like that? I say no, a thousand times no!"

"No!" came the mighty response and cheering started. The speaker checked them at once and continued:

"If a crime really has been committed it is the duty of every man here to take a solemn oath to do all he can to bring these vampires to justice. No man who would take part in such a crime has any right in any community, not even in his own. Those who would do such a thing should be killed every time they show their heads. They should be killed like a snake!"

Swelling, rising, thrilling came the answer, a sound so great it could almost be seen. The answer was "Yes!"

The speaker ended. A man sprang up in his place. Waving his hands he began "The Star-Spangled Banner," and again the vast harmonization of thousands rang out.

"O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave!" came the anthem's close and from the base of the statue came the roll of a drummer and the shrill notes of a fifer, both in Revolutionary costume. Two hundred Sons of the American Revolution fell in back of General Oliver B. Bridgman and Colonel Louis Annin Ames and marched off—leaving the spirt of '76 where the day before had been the spirit of hate.

That was the climax and the contrast of the day after in Wall Street, a street which made valiant efforts to get back to normal and almost succeeded, although from early to late hundreds of thousands filtered through the canyon to see the effects of the explosion.

Working throughout the night, city and private laborers managed to clear the streets of debris. Thirty big acetylene arcs, at strategic points, threw powerful beams on the toilers carrying

CITY-WIDE SEARCH FOR TRUCK OWNER

200 Detectives Canvass Farrier Shops for Clue to Identity of Bomb Driver.

WAGON YELLOW, NOT RED

Story Vehicle Was Dynamite Delivery Cart Discredited—Time Bomb Theory.

Failure of anybody yesterday to admit ownership of the horse and truck blown up in the Wall Street explosion convinced detectives, operatives of the Department of Justice and Secret Service agents that the blast was due to a time bomb placed in the vehicle by radicals. Evidence of that belief was presented in the attitude of officials of the Detective Bureau, who early yesterday morning established a miniature museum at Police Headquarters, where the remnants of the horse's harness, as well as shattered pieces of the vehicle recovered by the police soon after the explosion, were placed on exhibition in the hope that somebody would come forward to identify them.

If the motive for the explosion ever is discovered, detectives said yesterday, it is more than likely it will be through the identity of the owner of the vehicle. They pointed out that, unlike most of the bomb outrages in this city, the police in this case have something to work on to establish the identity of the perpetrators through the possession of the pieces of harness and the twisted mass of axles and other parts of the truck as well as the head and hoofs of the dead horse, which recently had been shod.

200 Detectives Engaged in Canvass.

More than two hundred detectives yesterday continued the canvass of stables and horseshoeing establishments in the five boroughs which was started by Captain John Coughlin, Acting Inspector in charge of the Detective Bureau, less than an hour after the explosion. Each detective was instructed to notify Inspector Coughlin by telephone if he obtained information which might establish the identity of the owner of the horse and wagon. A special force of detectives was assigned to handle reports from detectives assigned to the work as well as those from Captains who, under an order from Chief Inspector Lahey Thursday afternoon, instructed the uniformed men under them to aid the detectives in the quest.

That the ownership of the horse and wagon was considered the most promising clew of the police and Government officials engaged in the investigation was evidenced by the fact that agents of the department, on instructions from William J. Flynn, former Deputy Police Commissioner and head of the United States Secret Service, visited many farriers and stables in different parts of the city, and it was said that in most instances the Government agents acted on mysterious tips and anonymous letters received by Chief Flynn at his office during the day.

Clew in Horse's Hoof.

It was learned at Police Headquarters yesterday that expert horsemen in the Police Department had been called on to aid the detectives in establishing the identity of the owner of the vehicle. These policemen were called on to decide whether it would be possible for a person to identify the head of the horse, which is being preserved by the police. It was said that all of the horsemen said that the owner of the animal would have no trouble in identifying it as the head was the one part of the body not affected by the blast. These policemen, it is understood, measured the head and estimated the probable height of the animal.

Farriers in the Police Department as well as policemen who were horseshoers before they joined the force, were called in to aid in running down the owner through the shoes taken from the

DEATH LIST MOUNTS TO 33

ACCIDENT IS ELIMINATED

GRAND JURY BEGINS INQUIRY

Palmer and Garvan Here to Direct Federal Investigation—First Funerals Today.

All competent investigating authorities yesterday reached the conviction that Thursday's disaster in Wall Street was a willfully criminal bomb explosion.

With the whole weight of expert opinion solidly against any hypothesis of accident, the entire energy of Government agents, the District Attorney's office and the police was directed to tracing the horse and wagon on which they are virtually certain the infernal contrivance stood before the new Assay Office.

Colonel William C. Mead of 52 Euclid Avenue, Hackensack, N. J., chief clerk for J. P. Morgan & Co., whose banking house shared with the new Assay Office the greater brunt of the terrific detonation, announced last night that the man who shod the horse had been found. Colonel Mead said this blacksmith asserted he knew the owner of the horse. The Colonel did not amplify this information, and in official circles there was impressive reticence regarding it.

The authorities did not even verify the discovery of evidence of such profound importance, though throughout their first full day of investigation they frankly had regarded the identity of the vehicle's ownership as the pivotal point upon which must hinge any successful effort to find and punish the guilty.

$20,500 Rewards Offered.

So much emphasis was laid upon the need for finding out who owned the horse and wagon, who drove it, and from where it had come, that the Board of Estimate, at a special meeting called by Mayor Hylan after offering a reward of $10,000 for the arrest and conviction of the single criminal or the conspirators involved, proffered an additional $500 to any one who could solve that question of ownership. The Preferred Accident Insurance Company offered another $10,000 for identification and conviction, making a total of $20,500 to stimulate the hunt.

The conclusion that the explosion was a piece of calculated, cunningly planned and deftly executed wholesale murder rested upon the results of three lines of investigation—study of the aftermath by men with wide knowledge of explosives and their behavior, autopsies by skilled pathologists on the bodies of many victims, and the elimination by the Fire Department's Bureau of Combustibles of any tenable belief in an accident connected with the lawful transport of explosive.

Minute consideration of the iron slugs, the bits of curved, caplike metal, the scars on buildings, the hole under the spot where stood the wagon, the nature and direction and force of the blast, the heat and light accompanying the detonation and other technical minutiae left no doubt in informed minds that a bomb did the deadly work.

Experts Reconstruct Bomb.

British experts long familiar with air raids in London and elsewhere went further and reconstructed by deduction a powerful torpedo-like bomb, loaded with TNT and equipped with detonator and time device, very similar except for the time device to the aerial torpedoes which wrought such havoc abroad. There appeared to be no foundation for published reports that clockwork was found near the Sub-Treasury.

The autopsies and examination of the wounds of many injured in the hospitals removed the last trace of doubt from the minds of such men as Dr. Charles Norris, the city's chief medical examiner, and Dr. Otto H. Schultze, District Attorney Swann's medical expert. They reached the conclusion that only missiles incorporated, shrapnel fashion, in a device deliberately constructed to kill could have inflicted such injuries.

The Fire Department's careful inquiry led to a report that all explosives lawfully in the city were accounted for and neither unavoidable accident nor criminal carelessness longer could be taken into consideration. At the same time it developed that the DuPont "powder" wagons, the reported presence of which in the vicinity caused such confusion, in reality were trucks carrying non-explosive by-products. They, too, are accounted for.

Flynn Convinced It Was Bomb.

Heeding the opinions of these various experts and weighing all evidence gathered by his own men and the police, William J. Flynn, former head of the Secret Service and now Chief of the Department of Justice Bureau of Investigation, announced that he too was converted definitely to belief in a criminal outrage.

Neither Mr. Flynn nor his subordinates, the police nor the District Attorney's office was prepared yesterday to go beyond that. Whether a single depraved character, with a madman's ability in carrying out a scheme of destruction, perpetrated, unaided, the greatest crime of the kind in the nation's history, or whether there was a far-reaching radical conspiracy to demonstrate against government, organized society and wealth, they are yet in doubt.

In this connection some interest attached to threatening circulars demanding the freedom of political prisoners found stuffed in a mail box at Cedar Street and Broadway, and believed to have been placed there a few minutes before the explosion.

So far as the radicals themselves were concerned, the loose talk of destruction and death so often heard since the war again was strikingly replaced yesterday by violent repudiation of all such doctrines of extreme direct action. Not only those groups known not to advocate the bomb and the torch, but others with leanings in those criminal directions offered a new philosophy of mildness for public consumption.

While Flynn will remain in immediate charge of the Federal investigation, which is concerning itself primarily with the radical phase, Attorney General Palmer and Francis P. Garvan, his assistant, who has charge of criminal investigations, arrived last night to exercise general supervision over the inquiry.

Another investigation started yesterday when Judge William H. Wadhams of General Sessions instructed the September Grand Jury to examine into the explosion. The Grand Jurors went to Wall Street, looked things over and questioned a few eyewitnesses.

District Makes Rapid Recovery.

They found, as did many thousands of other visitors, that the whole financial district had made a splendidly rapid recovery from the shock. The Stock Exchange was going at full tilt, banks and trust companies and brokerage houses were a trifle more than normally busy, and under the willing hands of swarms of workingmen the physical damage was disappearing with a rush. Hundreds of shattered panes had been replaced, the big windows in the Morgan Building were covered with canvas and those in the new Assay Office were boarded.

The raw scars in masonry and some traces of twisted and broken steel window frames and metal grills remained and these were the chief objects of interest to the greatest crowd that ever passed through the Street in one day. So e er and unending was the rush of visitors, once the police had relaxed their lines, that it was necessary to establish rigid traffic regulations with both sidewalks as "one-way" streets.

The crowds were curious, solemn, orderly, wondering. Their talk was all of Thursday's sensation, and through it ran pity for the victims, wonder at at tales of surprising escape, appreciation of the quality of emergency work that ensued and admiration for newly learned deeds of plucky loyalty, particularly on the part of young messenger boys. One of them whose bravery was celebrated was a lad on his way to make a bank deposit. Sorely hurt he was carried into the bank, and there he refused absolutely to surrender his firm's pass book until he was assured that the President of the institution himself was bending over him.

Death List Grows to Thirty-three.

The sad, mad futility of the whole affair received new emphasis yesterday when the death list grew to thirty-three and word came from the hospitals that others of the hundreds of injured probably could not survive. In all these institutions there was a repetition of the pitiful incidents of Thursday as friends and relatives of the more seriously injured sought to give them comfort, or learned from physicians and nurses that many of those who recovered would go marked through life.

One of those who died yesterday was John A. Donahue, an employe of J. P. Morgan & Co. He was the second employe to die, while the partners in the firm were unscathed. Coupled with a study of the earlier death lists, which showed that most of the victims were hard-working men and women of small means, the passing away of Donahue brought from all quarters renewed comment upon the insensate cruelty of such a deed if it was intended as a flaunting gesture of defiance toward wealth.

By a coincidence New York, and particularly financial New York, found opportunity yesterday for a dramatic reply to the murderous deed, whatever may have been its meaning. By arrangement perfected long before the tragedy a huge throng gathered at noon at the Sub-Treasury, within a few feet of where the bomb let got just twenty-four hours before, and celebrated the one hundred and thirty-third anniversary of the signing of the Constitution. The added fervor of the patriotic outburst was manifestly detectable, and when Brig. Gen. William J. Nicholson of the regular army asked the thousands there to vow a just vengeance of death upon the perpetrators there came an outburst that thrilled all who heard.

Losses Covered by Insurance.

Once this celebration was over, Wall Street found time to take stock more adequately of the damage. Estimates varied widely, but it appeared that at least $600,000 worth of plate glass had been shattered. Virtually all of it was covered by insurance, a few large buildings carrying their own risks. It developed that much of the special "explosion, riot and civil commotion" insurance with high premium rates which would have afforded protection under Thursday's circumstances was allowed to lapse after the armistice, renewed during the disorders of the Boston police strike and discontinued once more as that was forgotten.

The loss in securities proved to be almost negligible. Between $250,000 and $300,000 was missing immediately after the explosion. Most of that was refurned before nightfall, and by last evening there remained unaccounted for only about $20,000 worth. This much probably was destroyed, and eventually will be replaced. Throughout the district there were many expressions of slightly astonished admiration for the honesty of the ordinary citizen, as one after another men and women and youngsters of that general type drifted in with precious bundles picked up in the street.

Checks for Relief Offered.

While no definite movement for a fund to relieve distress incident to the disaster was started, Mayor Hylan received a number of checks, some offered for that purpose and others to be used in case the Estimate Board did not offer a reward, and it was believed likely a subscription list would be opened today.

A few of the victims will be buried today, and the bodies of a number will be interred tomorrow.

There were interesting new discoveries yesterday of the force of the explosion as more slugs were found on upper floors of office buildings, a piece of iron pipe, melted together at the ends some distance away and it was learned that one slug landed on a ferryboat leaving the Cortlandt Street slip, nearly a mile distant.

The police got further proof that a number of persons in New York were warned in advance that a disaster of the general nature of that on Thursday would occur either on Sept. 15 or Sept. 16, the actual date of its happening. Whether these were of the "crank" variety or bore more serious import they were trying to determine.

FISCHER WARNED FIVE FRIENDS

Prophesied Explosion in Conversation with One Before Leaving City.

TOLD SISTER TO BEWARE

He Sent Three Postal Cards—Believed to Have Cautioned Passenger on Tube Train.

Edwin P. Fischer, who was located in Hamilton, Ontario, yesterday and committed to an asylum on the application of relatives, sent a number of warning messages, forecasting the explosion in Wall Street, it became known yesterday. The additional messages were similar to those received by Captain Leonce Arnaud of the French High Commission and George F. Ketchledge of 2 Broadway, which were published in THE TIMES yesterday. In each instance but one, the warning was sent to a friend or relative. Fischer predicted that the explosion would occur on Wednesday, Sept. 15, or Thursday, Sept. 16.

Fischer is known to have given warnings to Sheppard Homans, head of the insurance firm of Prosser & Homans, 120 Broadway; to his sister, Miss Ethel Fischer, 33 West Ninety-second Street; to Thomas Delehanty, caretaker of the West Side Tennis Club, Ninety-third Street and Amsterdam Avenue, of which Fischer is a member, and to Joseph T. O'Neill, an employe of George La Monte & Son, bank note paper manufacturers, 61 Broadway. The warnings to the two last named were verbal. Those conveyed to his sister and Mr. Homans were on post cards.

Although, from stories told by relatives and friends, there seems little doubt that Fischer is subject to a slight mental disorder, the authorities found the accuracy with which he had predicted the time of the explosion too close to be explained offhand by the theory of coincidence. At the request of District Attorney Swann, the Police Department sent a detective to Hamilton to try to bring Fischer back to New York as a witness. Alfred J. Talley, Assistant District Attorney, said that if Fischer refused to return to New York willingly an application would be made for his extradition. There is no suspicion in the minds of the authorities that Fischer had any direct connection with the explosion—his presence in Canada at the time would disprove that—but they do desire to examine him closely and ascertain why he was so certain that an explosion would occur.

Warns Tennis Club Caretaker.

In giving his verbal warnings Fischer placed stress on his conection with the French High Commission, which, he said, had made it his duty to run down anarchists. Delehanty told how Fischer had gone to him at the courts at Ninety-third Street and Amsterdam Avenue two weeks ago and had inveighed against J. P. Morgan & Co. and Wall Street and had predicted an explosion.

"Fischer came to me early one morning and said, 'Tom, I want to tell you a secret,'" said Delehanty. "He acted very mysteriously, but was very serious. As near as I can recall his words, he said: 'We are going to blow up Wall Street on the 15th. We've got them where we want them. We're going to get England, too. We've got England where we want her, too.'

"I am not positive that he said 'we.' He may possible have said 'they,' but as I recall it, he said 'we.'

"He went on to say that he told me this as a warning, because I was an old friend and he did not want me to get hurt. He told me to be sure not to go down to Wall Street that day. I took it as a joke, and told him not to worry, because I wouldn't go there."

Delehanty said he told some of the other members of the club about the incident, and said they all dismissed it lightly, as they knew that Fischer was, as Delehanty described it, "a bit light in the head."

"He always took sides with the Bolsheviki and the anarchists," Delehanty continued, "and often talked about such matters. Nobody took him seriously."

Delehanty, like all the rest of Fischer's friends, described him as a splendid, well-bred man when not suffering from periodical attacks of mental disorder.

Sheppard Homans, who frequently played tennis with Fischer, was formerly the partner of Seward Prosser, President of the Bankers' Trust Company, who narrowly escaped being hit by a flying slug, sent through his office window by the explosion. Accompanied by Edward Robinson, one of his associates, Mr. Homans, formerly President of the West Side Tennis Club and once a famous Princeton full back, called on Assistant District Attorney Talley and gave him the following post card, dated Toronto, Sept. 13, 11 P. M.:

"Dear Shep—Keep away from Wall Street this Wednesday afternoon. There never was a road that didn't have a turn. Good luck. ED."

A picture of the City Hall in Toronto was on the postcard. Mr. Homans said he glanced at the picture casually when he received the card and laid it aside without reading it. He said that at the time of the explosion, which killed William F. Hutchinson, an employe of Mr. Homans's firm, the postcard was lying on his desk. It was not until yesterday morning, when a friend called him on the telephone and told him of the warnings sent out by Fischer that he recalled the postcard.

Advised French Mission to Close.

Mr. Homans told Mr. Talley that no one who knew Fischer would suspect him of having any connection with radical organizations. He added that Fischer used to have irrational outbreaks during the war and said occasionally that the Reds were making so much progress that they would soon be destroying everything.

Mr. Robinson told Mr. Talley that at the time the Bolshevist armies seemed about to take Warsaw Fischer said to him:

"Get rid of everything you have. They are going to blow up the Stock Exchange and wreck everything."

Fischer never mentioned, in conversations with them, the Morgan building as one of those to be blown up, Mr. Homans and Mr. Robinson said.

Captain Arnaud said he had considered Fischer slightly deranged or he would have paid more attention to his letter. Fischer, he said, was a "charming fellow" when normal, and described him as capable and efficient unless afflicted with what seemed to be a periodical attack. The letter to Captain Arnaud was made public at Police Headquarters. A piece of the letter, which was torn up by Captain Arnaud, could not be found, making the last part meaningless. As restored at Police Headquarters the letter reads:

"The Queens, Toronto.

"My address may always be obtained at my N. Y. Home, 33 W. 92d St. Riverside 2688." "Sept. 13, '20.

"Dear Mr. Arnaud,

"Greetings.

"I think I am doing good work in making the people know France and in planting in them a strong blessing the desire in them to see France get her square deserts.

"There is a rumor that something is going to happen after 2:30 P. M., around 3 to 4 P. M. daylight saving time in the Wall Street district. I'll advise the Mission close at 2 P. M. for that day and everybody go home. It may be all bull, but the world is a great place. Know and millions fell then. Have a just grievance so I think. The Mission ought to play safety first. I hope you feel that what I am doing is of value to France and if it pleases, write me at once to the Hotel Pontchartrain, Detroit, Mich., where I will go some time Thursday. I think somebody is in clean in the world of

"fail to wash their hands.

"Want me to

"I St. Paul settled that war

"Good Luck, Ed. Fischer."

The following statement concerning Fischer was issued yesterday by the French High Commission on behalf of Maurice Casenave, Minister Plenipotentiary:

"Edwin Fischer joined the staff of the French High Commission in New York on Sept. 30, 1918. He was employed in the Transportation Department and was an excellent worker, never giving cause for complaint, and a good mixer. He was on friendly terms with all his colleagues.

"Fischer left the French Mission on Aug. 2, 1920, for his vacation, but did not return. After a month's absence he was automatically discharged. Since Sept. 1, 1920, he has had no connection with the French High Commission, either in New York or elsewhere.

"For a short time before Fischer left his colleagues noticed in him signs of mental derangement.

"Fischer was 42 years of age when he joined the French Mission. He was a man of athletic build, weighing about 200 pounds."

Predicted Explosion on Train.

O'Neill received his warning from a man whom he believed to be Fischer on a train in a Hudson tube train a little more than a week ago. The man set the time of the predicted explosion as Sept. 16.

"The man got on a train at Manhattan Transfer," O'Neill said. "The train, which was due in New York at 8:52 A. M., was delayed slightly and the man, who entered into conversation with me, expressed concern lest it cause him to miss a train for Buffalo. He then told me that he was a Secret Service Agent and was engaged in running down anarchists, about whom he said he knew a lot. He leaned forward and said:

"Keep away from Wall Street until after the 16th. They have 60,000 pounds of explosives and are going to blow it up.

O'Neill said the man asked him where he was employed. When he learned it was at 61 Broadway, the stranger said:

"I am near you at 65 Broadway, where I work for the French High Commission. You and I will be safe there, I think, but keep away from Wall Street."

O'Neill said he had mentioned the incident to a few friends, but thought nothing more of it than that it was peculiar. He was convinced of the man's earnestness and belief in his prediction. He described the stranger as about 42 years old, six feet or more in height, of athletic build, with gray hair. He was wearing a light gray suit and a straw hat, had no baggage and was carrying a tennis racket. At the office of the French High Commission Captain Arnaud and others said this answered Fischer's description perfectly. Captain Arnaud also said that although Fischer's name was undoubtedly of German origin, he understood that his family had been Americans for generations and that Fischer had no German sympathies.

Fischer lives with his father, P. A. Fischer, 83 years old; his sister, Miss Ethel Fischer, and his brother, Robert Fischer, at 33 West Ninety-second Street. Another sister, Mrs. Robert A. Pope, lives at 134 Continental Avenue, Forest Hills. None of these could be found at home last night.

It was learned from friends that Fischer is a graduate of the College of the City of New York and the New York Law School and that he was admitted to the bar but never did much legal practice. He is described as having shown indications of mental derangement for sevelal years. Several years ago, it was said, his brother made an attempt to have him adjudged insane, but Fischer argued his case so well in the West Side Court that the Magistrate dismissed the case.

Won Many Tennis Championships.

Several telegrams asking for money were received by his relatives during the last week, it was said. This was one of the reasons, it was said, which induced Mr. Pope, his brother-in-law, to go to Canada to find him.

The family, until the receipt of the telegrams, believed that he was on a trip in Canada for the French High Commission. He is known to have attended the national tennis championship matches at Forest Hills and to have started for the East and West tournament at Philadelphia last week. Members of the family told neighbors yesterday that they never knew him to have any radical associates and that, on the contrary, most of his friends were of the prosperous and conservative class. It was said, however, that recently he had told some of his relatives that he did not believe the "common people were getting a square deal," and that it would have to be remedied.

Fischer, although never a national tennis champion, was well up in the first ranks of players for five or six years. He was ranked among the first ten in the country in 1901, being placed as No. 9. He won the Metropolitan championship in 1896, 1898 and 1899, and was beaten in 1900 by Raymond D. Little.

He held the Metropolitan doubles championship in 1898 with R. D. Thurber, in 1897 with W. Gordon Parker, in 1898 with O. M. Bostwick and in 1902 with Harold H. Hackett. With Mr. Parker he held the Southern States and Middle States doubles championships in 1894. He was runner up for the national indoor tennis championships in 1906, the last year in which he figured in a championship tournament, and was beaten by Wylie C. Grant.

He is said to have suffered a sunstroke while playing tennis at Seabright, N. J., several years ago and his friends assert his attacks of mental disorder became more frequent after that time. In tennis circles he was said to be still regarded as an excellent player and a good companion when normal and to have many friends in the West Side Tennis Club.

BANKER GOT WARNING SEVERAL MONTHS AGO

Post Card Writer Declared Banks Would Be Blown to Pieces.

A warning which, it is thought, may indicate that the Wall Street explosion was aimed at the group of international bankers of which the Morgan firm is a member, was received several months ago by Mark O. Prentiss, President of the United States Clearing House of Foreign Credits, 111 Broadway. The warning was on a post card, postmarked at the Grand Central Terminal Post Office May 25, 9 P. M. The card, which Mr. Prentiss turned over yesterday to Police Commissioner Enright, read:

"Unless you put sterling, francs and marks down to where they belong at once, every bank interested in foreign credits will be blown to pieces. I do my work right. We make a clean job in a new way. (Signed) AMERICAN."

Mr. Prentiss believed the card was written by the left hand of a right-handed man in an attempt to disguise the handwriting. The sequence of "sterling, francs and marks," which is the way these terms come over the ticker tape, and the use of the phrase "foreign credits" indicated, he thought, a familiarity with financial methods.

Mr. Prentiss, who said he had received a number of threatening letters as well as many of the "crank" variety, pinned the card in front of his desk.

"I was standing in front of the desk talking with my partner when the explosion occurred," he continued. "I rushed to the window and saw the crowd surging out of Wall Street and then thought of the post card. I felt at once that some one had thrown a bomb into the Morgan offices, and felt myself to blame that I had not sent the card to the police. It might have caused them to take some precautions."

Mr. Prentiss was told that his warning had been so indefinite as hardly to have value. He thought that many similar letters and post cards had been received in the financial district and expressed the hope that all would be turned over to the authorities so that the writing and statements might be compared.

EDWIN P. FISCHER.

Fischer sent three postal cards to friends in this city warning them of the Wall Street explosion, and predicted the disaster to another friend and to his sister before leaving the city for Canada, where he was taken into custody yesterday. He was several times holder of the Metropolitan lawn tennis championship.

FISCHER CALLED INSANE

representative of the Burns Detective Agency, who claimed to represent the Morgan interests and members of the Fischer family.

Fischer is now held in the local jail on a remand of three days, pending receipt of instructions from the Department of Justice at Ottawa. After he had been adjudged insane by the Lunacy Commission an effort was made to have him committed to the local asylum, but the Chief Magistrate here refused to move so quickly, taking the stand that it would be better to retain Fischer in jail pending developments. That this is in line with the wishes of the New York police is evident from the following message received by the Hamilton police from New York this evening:

"Information received here that E. P. Fischer is in a sanitarium in Hamilton. If correct, hold him pending an investigation into explosion here Sept. 16. Lahey, Chief Inspector."

Fischer, having been adjudged insane, under the Canadian laws cannot be charged with any crime. With regard to his deportation as an undesirable, his lawyer intimates that he will insist upon an inquiry before any such effort is made.

Forced to Cause Arrest.

Pope stated that his one desire when he left New York on Wednesday was to induce Fischer to go to a private sanitarium for treatment. When he induced Fischer to come to Hamilton this morning it was on such an understanding. With that purpose in view he went to the law firm of Lees, Hobson & Lees and endeavored to have Fischer placed in a private sanitarium at Guelph, Ont. This effort failed. The assistance of the police was then sought in a move to have Fischer placed in the Provincial Asylum for the Insane near here. The police refused to take any action unless Pope swore out a warrant for Fischer's arrest. This was reluctantly done with the result that the whole affair became public property. Until that time Pope had been endeavoring to prevent publicity.

It is understood that he was in long-distance communication with his New York office this evening and that he gave it information regarding one of the post cards which Fischer sent from Toronto. He refused to divulge the nature of his information, but it is known that he recommended investigation of the party to whom the post card was directed.

Creighton and Buchanan put no faith in the theory of mental telepathy advanced by Pope, and plan to subject the prisoner to a rigid examination tomorrow if they are allowed to interview him. Their plans will be opposed by Fischer's counsel.

When arrested Fischer had a copy of "Soviet Russia," a pamphlet published in New York, certificates showing that he had passed law examinations in that city and several post cards similar to the ones he mailed to friends in New York from Toronto warning them to keep away from Wall Street.

One of the cards is dated Toronto, Sept. 14, and reads: "To Fred E. Fish, care of Bert Fish, Produce Exchange, Bowling Green, New York City. Dear Fred and Bert. A Bolshevist professor says that Wall Street is to be blown up tomorrow, Sept. 15, at 3 or 4 o'clock. All had better go home. Good luck. Ed."

Another, although dated Sept. 14, reads: "Monday, 8:07 P. M. Greetings. At present I have 7 cents. As I write Mr. Moody is returning $400. If I had money this afternoon I would not now be incurring expense here. Harry is being slowly killed in Detroit. I am going to bring him back."

Across the end of the card is written: "Bob. Be away from Wall Street this Wednesday afternoon."

The prisoner chatted affably with the officials and others this evening. He disclaims any idea of being mixed up in a plot, though he still sticks to his belief that he had mental warning of it. He also asserted tonight that he had once been a sparring partner of Jack Dempsey and that a man he struck in a bout had died.

Fischer, whose excellent physical appearance and quiet bearing belied the idea that he is insane, spent several weeks in the Northern woods this Summer. He began some weeks ago to worry his friends about "things that are going to happen on Wall Street" and to warn them to keep away from New York. He became so insistent that they tried to persuade him to go into a sanitarium. This he refused to do and instead went to Niagara-on-the-Lake, at the mouth of the Niagara River, and subsequently to Toronto.

In Hamilton his circle of friends is among prominent people, and he has been well known in the city since he won the Ontario championship at the tennis tournament played there in 1895.

PALMER COMES HERE TO DIRECT INQUIRY

participate in the investigation. George S. Rice, chief mining engineer of the bureau, who was in New York yesterday, has already begun a study of the nature of the explosion. The bureau has also ordered to New York Dr. Charles E. Munroe, an authority on explosives, whose services were utilized by the Government in connection with the bomb that was exploded in the Senate wing of the Capitol Building in Washington on July 2, 1915, by Frank Holt, who committed suicide in Mineola jail after having made an attempt on the life of J. Pierpont Morgan.

Postmaster Burleson missed the blast by half an hour. Postal officials said that the Postmaster General visited the United States Sub-Treasury in New York City yesterday and was in front of the offices of J. P. Morgan & Co. about half an hour before the explosion occurred. Mr. Burleson returned to Washington last night.

BOMB PLOT, SAYS PALMER.

Attorney General, on Arrival Here, Inquires Into Work of His Men.

Attorney General A. Mitchell Palmer on his arrival here last night immediately inquired into the work of his men in the Wall Street explosion investigation. Mr. Palmer was accompanied by his family and Assistant Attorney General Francis P. Garvan. Mr. Palmer said he believed the explosion to have been caused by a bomb.

"At the present time," he said, "I believe this to be the result of a criminal conspiracy. I hope that further developments will tend to prove that it was an accident. I sincerely hope so, but present indications point to the contrary."

Mr. Palmer was asked if reports received by him from other sections of the country indicated a general radical terroristic movement. The Attorney General said he did not think so.

He was asked whether the action of Congress in cutting three-quarters of a million dollars from the appropriation of his department had any bearing on the present situation. Mr. Palmer replied that because of the cut he had been forced to reduce his operating staff by one-third and had lost that much efficiency as a result.

"Therefore," he said, "we are not able to keep in as close touch with ultra-radicals as we were some six months ago or keep as well informed on what is taking place or about to take place.

"If it is found that this was a criminal act, beyond question we may, with the support of public opinion, be enabled to take more drastic action with relation to deportations of alien criminal anarchists, which is the only class we have been deporting."

animal. They made a careful examination of the hoofs and the shoes and reported that the only marks on the latter were the letters "J. U.," which are used by union horseshoers to show that the shoes were put on the animal by union men.

The farriers, however, discovered in one of the hoofs of the animal an ailment which, it was believed, would aid a horseshoer to recall having shod the animal. It is understood the farriers and policemen were sent out with detectives to canvass horseshoeing establishments in an effort to find the man who shod the animal.

Inquiry in Nearby Cities.

The hunt for the owner of the vehicle and the man who shod the horse is not being confined to this city, however. It was learned that Police Commissioner Enright had ordered detectives sent to cities and towns in the metropolitan district outside of the city to interview stable proprietors and horseshoers. Each detective, it was said, was equipped with data compiled by the horsemen and farriers of the Police Department, and he was instructed to read the description of the horse to them as well as those of the shattered harness and the wreckage of the vehicle.

It is known that while the police and the Department of Justice operatives bank considerably on identifying the owner of the vehicle through the horse, they hold out hope that the harness may furnish the clew sought. The collar found on the animal's neck was well worn, and policemen said it must have been in use at least ten years. The hames were of the type used in drawing small vehicles, and the breeching was revealed to belong to a stronger set of harness.

Policemen called on to examine the harness said it was made up of several sets and that some of the straps originally belonged to carriage harness. Little hope is held out by the detectives of establishing the owner of the vehicle through the two bent axles from the shattered truck. They said that they only establish that the truck was not of the kind used for transporting heavy loads. It was more like the trucks used by small business men, such as butchers and grocers, they explained.

Truck Was Painted Yellow.

The hubs of the wheels of the vehicle were intact, however, but most of the spokes had been snapped off at the hub. In three of them pieces of the spokes about three inches long protruded, and examination of the wheels and the spokes convinced the detectives that the wagon was built no less than twenty years ago, and had not been painted in more than ten years.

The years' accumulation of dirt was scrubbed from the axels and hubs when they reached Police Headquarters Thursday afternoon and revealed that the last coat of paint put on them was of a yellowish hue. A detective scraped the paint and found another coating under it of a greenish color, but it was admitted that that discovery was not expected to help the investigation.

Twisted particles of iron which the police believe were a part of the superstructure of the truck were scrubbed by the detectives and they, too, it was said, revealed a faded yellowish paint. It was explained by one of the detectives that because of the heavy coating of dirt on these parts of the vehicle it first was believed that the vehicle was a red-painted affair, but it was decided that the last coat of paint was of a dull yellow.

The belief that the explosion was due to a bomb further was fortified by the announcement of Fire Commissioner Drennan that none of the three vehicles used by two dealers in explosives in this city delivered any dynamite, the only explosive permitted to be transported, to the lower part of the city on Thursday. Detectives in discussing the Fire Commissioner's statement, said that stories to the effect that red painted wagons believed to contain explosives were seen within half an hour of the explosion in fornt of the Assay Office, had been investigated and found to be wanting in corroboration.

Not "TNT," Colonel Dunn Says.

Police Commissioner Enright yesterday requested Colonel V. W. Dunn, inventor of "Dunnite," a powerful explosive, and a member of the United States Commission on Explosives, to call on him to discuss the probable kind of explosive used in the bomb. Colonel Dunn, it was learned, was in Washington when he received the Police Commissioner's request, and hurried to this city.

After he left the Police Commissioner's office Colonel Dunn said he did not believe "TNT" or picric acid was used in the bomb, and when pressed for an opinion of just what explosive was used he said he was not prepared to say.

Later, at Colonel Dunn's office at 30 Church Street, William S. Topping, his assistant, explained that the Federal Explosives Commission is in charge of the transportation of all the "TNT" taken over by the Government. He said there was no "TNT" stored in the city, and that the nearest magazine in which the explosive is stored is on the Raritan River, near New Brunswick, N. J. He said there is another "TNT" magazine at Fort Wingate, Sparta, Wis.

It was learned last night that Seward Prosser, President of the Bankers' Trust Company, Wall and Nassau Streets, turned over to detectives several pieces of metal which were blown into his office by the explosion. One of the fragments was of steel, about two inches long, and it is the belief of the police and inspectors of the Bureau of Combustibles that it was part of the casing of the bomb. The metal was curved in such a way as to lead the police to believe that it was part of the collar of the bomb on which a time device mechanism was superimposed.

Another piece of metal was oval in shape and the police said it was similar to metal used in shrapnel. The latter, it was understood, was found on the window of Mr. Prosser's office. Employes of Mr. Prosser's office found several pieces of sash weights, such as were found in the street and in other offices in the vicinity after the blast.

Chief Assistant District Attorney Alfred J. Talley, who is conducting an investigation into the explosion, was in communication with Chief Inspector Lahey and Fire Commissioner Drennan most of the day. It is understood that Chief Inspector Lahey informed him of several important developments in the investigation of the detectives, but Mr. Talley refused to discuss them.

"All we can do," he explained, "is to wait and pick up gradually all we can. We will examine witnesses obtained by the police as soon as possible. The big thing is to establish the ownership of that truck. Every livery stable and private stable in the city is being canvassed to learn if a horse and truck are missing.

"I feel that we can state very conclusively that the bomb either was set off by contact provided by somebody willing to sacrifice himself in doing so or was fired by a timing device."

During the day Mr. Tally questioned John W. Mutch of 214 Main Street, Astoria, Queens, who, a few minutes before the explosion, got out of his automobile in front of the Morgan banking house.

Mr. Talley later said that Mutch insisted that as he drove his machine up to the curb outside the banking house he saw the horse and wagon which was later shattered in the explosion standing in front of the banking house about thirty feet to the east of him. The horse was unattended, he declared, and was facing the East River.

Bomb Mechanism Reconstructed.

Mutch told Mr. Talley that he walked around the corner to 20 Broad Street and was just about to enter the building when the terrific explosion threw him against the entrance. When he ran around into Wall Street soon after, he told Mr. Talley, he saw the horse lying in the centre of the street between the Assay Office and the banking house, with his head in the direction of Trinity Church to the west. He said there was no sign of the truck he had seen a few minutes before. Mr. Talley expressed the belief that the explosion did not occur in front of the banking house because there was no depression in the street on that side, while on the east side of Wall Street and directly in front of the entrance to the Assay Office, there was a depression showing that the explosion occurred there.

Inspector Campbell, local Chief of the United States Bureau of Mines, accompanied by experts in explosives sent from Washington, yesterday called at Police Headquarters and was in conference with Chief Inspector Lahey, Acting Inspector Coughlin and several of the detectives of the bomb squad who are in charge of the task of trying to establish the kind of explosive used in the bomb.

Wagon Manufacturers Questioned.

While they were in conference with the two police officials, Captain Carey of the Homicide Squad was questioning six wagon manufacturers whom he had called to his office in an effort to get an idea of the construction of the shattered vehicle. Later he said that, after examining several small pieces of oak wood, the men gave it as their opinion that the pieces were parts of the ribbing of a covered wagon, and that it was not of the rack variety as had been contended by the police. However, they confirmed the detectives in the assertion that the wagon was of an obsolete type and that it had been repaired many times with parts of other vehicles.

Several witnesses were questioned by the police yesterday, who substantiated the statement of Mutch, the owner of the automobile which was standing in front of the Morgan banking house when the explosion occurred. Lawrence Servin, a peddler, said he saw the wagon going in an easterly direction past Wall Street less than two minutes before the blast felled him. He said that he was selling candies from a wagon at the corner of Wall and Nassau Streets, less than 200 feet from the scene of the explosion, when the vehicle passed him, and the driver in a rich Scotch accent yelled to him to get out of the way, as his vehicle couldn't pass. He paid no more attention to the man after the vehicle passed the entrance to the Sub-Treasury on the opposite corner, he said.

Independent Inquiry by Bankers.

When Mayor Hylan reached the City Hall yesterday morning he found on his desk a preliminary report of the investigation of the explosion, conducted by Fire Commissioner Drennan. In the report Commissioner Drennan declared that pieces of sash weights, weighing about 150 pounds, were retrieved by the police and members of the Fire Department following the explosion. He said that the pieces varied in length from two to six inches and about two inches in diameter. Other pieces of lighter metal were found, some of which had been fused by an intense heat, he declared.

Commissioner Drennan explained that permits had been issued by the Fire Department to the du Pont de Nemours Company and Carl M. Ditmar, dealers in explosives, to transport dynamite from their docks in this city to contractors engaged in excavating, but that neither firm had delivered explosives to the financial district on Thursday.

He also stated that permits had been issued for the use of dynamite in blasting operations by the Underpinning and Foundation Company in Wall Street, between New and Broad Streets; George M. Fuller & Co., in Beaver Street, between Wall and Pearl Streets; Andrew V. Neil, at 98 Broad Street, and the Foundation Company, at 91 Maiden Lane, but said that investigation revealed no explosives had been transported to those contractors Thursday.

Members of the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co. yesterday held a conference in their offices, which was attended by representatives of the Police Department and the Department of Justice. It was said that the bankers are undertaking an independent investigation of the explosion with a view to learning whether it was due to an accident or a bomb placed in the shattered wagon by radicals.

Pure Ice For Pure Food
Knickerbocker Ice

An impure Lollypop started the Westfield pure food movement that has swept the country. Now absolute purity is the demand—from water to canned goods. But how many consider the purity of the ice supply? Realize how useless it is to buy sterilized water and milk and then use impure, unclean ice?

Knickerbocker Ice is made from four-times filtered water, frozen in sanitary containers, and delivered in clean wagons drawn by clean horses that live in clean snow-white stalls.

PROPERTY DAMAGE PUT AT $2,000,000

WINDOWS AT $1,000 EACH

One Glass Company Has Contracts Aggregating $400,000—Explosion Causes Boom In Insurance.

Estimates of the property damage wrought by the explosion were vague yesterday, though the general opinion seemed to be that $2,000,000 would cover it.

Approximately $600,000 will be required to replace the broken glass in the windows, doors and skylights. This estimate includes the wages of workmen as well as the cost of glass, and is considered as very conservative. One man said that it would be in the neighborhood of $1,000,000.

J. J. Richardson, Superintendent of the glazing department of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company, is in charge of the installation of glass in most of the large buildings. He said yesterday that his company had the contract for putting in new glass for the Stock Exchange, Equitable Trust Company, J. P. Morgan & Co., the Bankers' Trust Company, and the buildings at 10 Wall Street and at 7 Pine Street. During the day, he said, 100 men are engaged in setting the glass, while at night forty men are employed. The contracts of his company, he said, aggregate $400,000.

"I expect to have all the glass in the Morgan Building, the Stock Exchange and the Bankers Trust by Monday morning," Mr. Richardson said. "We are driving just as hard as we can."

Mr. Richardson said that the contract for replacing the twenty shattered windows in the Assay office had not yet been awarded, but thought that his company might get this job also. In the Sub-Treasury two windows in the front were destroyed and have not yet been replaced.

Windows Valued at $1,000 Each.

A telegram last night from Hartford, Conn., said that the insurance companies there were still without definite information regarding the glass loss. It was said, however, that the Travelers Insurance Company, which covered the Morgan property, placed the value of the cathedral windows at $1,000 each. There are five of these windows on the Wall Street side of the building, all shattered.

Many of the pieces of plate glass being unloaded yesterday afternoon were valued by the workmen at $500 each.

At the Bank of America, a block away from the explosion, seventy-one panes of glass were broken, while across the street, at the Atlantic Bank Building, fifty-one panes were smashed. Much of this glass from the front window's crashed down on the sidewalk, but inside windows were broken also. At 34-36 Wall Street, leased by D. E. Ducios, $10,000 worth of glass was broken, in addition to at least $6,000 worth of damage to the woodwork. This is an office building, but Mr. Ducios uses one side of the entrance for a gent's furnishing goods store, and the Schulte Cigar Company uses the other.

J. Marks & Bros., 1,119 First Avenue, have the contract for replacing the broken glass at 49 Wall Street.

Among the other glass firms which had wagons in the vicinity unloading glass yesterday were David Schulder, Inc., 319-321 East Fifty-third Street, Smith & Rosenfeld, 141-143 Fourth Avenue, and Goldberger Bros. It was said that so much glass had been required that the contractors had to call on many firms throughout the city to furnish their requirements.

Many Policies Lapsed.

Many of the buildings which were damaged had allowed policies covering them for such damage, to lapse, according to opinions expressed in insurance circles yesterday. Fire insurance policies do not cover damage from explosions, either accidental or intentional, nor damage from riot and civil commotion. Such insurance was common during the war and many of the downtown office buildings obtained it but allowed it to run out after the signing of the armistice.

At the time of the Boston police strike there was a lot of reinsuring of the financial district's skyscrapers, but this was allowed to lapse again when the industrial and civil unrest resulting from the war appeared to have subsided.

At the offices of the Home Insurance Company yesterday it was stated that less than an hour after the explosion occurred on Thursday an application had been handed in for a $1,000,000 policy on one of the big office buildings in the downtown district. At the same time the demand for riot and civil commotion and explosion policies increased heavily, and it is considered that the insurance companies, as a whole, will write a large amount of such business all over the city.

Accident insurance companies have not yet been able to estimate what the explosion will cost them, as full information regarding losses has not been obtained, and such losses as have been reported are not considered as representative. In the case of the plate-glass insurance companies it was asserted yesterday that many of the big office buildings write their own insurance.

OVER $200,000 IN LOST SECURITIES RECOVERED

Picked Up in Stricken Wall Street District, They Are Voluntarily Returned to Owners.

Reports to the New York Stock Exchange yesterday indicated that from $250,000 to $300,000 worth of securities had been lost in the explosion, but that all except $21,000 worth had been recovered. Stocks and bonds were picked up throughout the stricken district, the majority of the recoveries and returns being made by individuals in no way connected with the police.

Johnson & Wood, whose two messengers were killed in the explosion, were the heaviest individual losers. For a time securities valued at $170,000 were missing, but last night this had dwindled to about $20,000. The missing securities include 100 shares of American Telephone and Telegraph, a $1,000 Ontario & Western bond, $5,000 in St. Louis & San Francisco bonds and $6,000 Great Western 4's.

Parkinson & Burr of 7 Wall Street lost 100 shares of Reading and 100 shares of Pittsburgh & West Virginia. Harris, Winthrop & Co. lost 100 shares of Anaconda stock, and Callaway, Fish & Co. of 37 Wall Street lost $5,000 Liberty Third 4¼'s. Webb & Co. report the loss of 70,000 marks City of Cologne 4's, and Moore & Schley lost 100 shares of Caddo Oil and $4,050 in Tobacco Products dividend scrip.

Otto Bailer, a jeweler of Memphis, Tenn., turned over to the police two negotiable $1,000 bonds. He said he had picked them up in Wall Street immediately after the explosion and had been unable to find the owner in the resulting panic.

It is believed some of the securities were burned in the explosion and never will be recovered. One of the bonds recovered was burned so that only a small part of it was left and this bore the imprint of bloody fingers. The National Surety Company said that so far as its records showed the loss of securities had total $212,000, of which the great proportion had been recovered. It is believed that practically all of the missing securities can be replaced in time through the transfer offices. Most of them are non-negotiable.

Clifford Velsor, a messenger employed by Chisholm & Chapman, brokers, 71 Broadway, who was reported after the explosion to be missing with negotiable securities valued at $5,000 to $6,000, returned to the offices of the firm yesterday with the securities intact.

The boy said he was at the loan window of the Equitable Trust Company, 37 Wall Street, when the explosion shook the building and threw him down. Dazed from the shock, he made his way to his home at Oyster Bay. The firm made inquiries through the police and the hospitals, but no trace of the boy could be found. Later on Thursday afternoon the boy telephoned from his home.

When he reported at the offices with the securities he still showed the effects of the shock. He was immediately sent back to Oyster Bay and told not to report before Monday.

GRAND JURY BEGINS EXPLOSION INQUIRY

Ordered to Determine Whether Cause Was Crime or Criminal Negligence.

The September Grand Jury, organized in General Sessions yesterday, and directed by Judge William H. Wadhams to make a thorough inquiry into and determine responsibility for the Wall Street explosion, went immediately to the scene of the disaster and inspected and examined all who were at hand and the damaged pavement and buildings able to impart information. In his charge to the jury Judge Wadhams suggested that the handling of high explosives for private purposes of any nature should be under the supervision of responsible governmental officials. He said:

"I have summoned you before me because of the disaster which has occurred in Wall Street. It is common knowledge that upwards of twenty-eight persons have been killed and a large number seriously injured. In view of these circumstances, I consider it my duty to charge you immediately to make inquiry and examination for the purpose of ascertaining whether, first, any crime has been committed in this county in connection with the explosion, either in instigating it or in perpetrating it.

"Second, whether the existing law is sufficient to protect the public.

"Third, whether there has been any neglect of duty in the administration of exising law on the part of any official or any individual charged with an obligation to the public.

"This inquiry on your part will divide itself, naturally, into two phases; first, as to whether or not a crime has been committed, and in that connection I call your attention to Sections 1894 and 1895 of the penal law, concerning the possession and use of explosives and combustibles and the endangering of life through explosion.

"Your examination should go to the root of the matter. You have power to summon before you any who have already made investigation for the different newspapers, the officers of the city, police officials or representatives of the newspapers, or individuals who were present at the time or who have examined conditions subsequent to the explosion.

"In this investigation you should very carefully examine the question as to whether there is any attempt to conceal the true cause of the explosion and place the blame on any one who was not responsible for it. You will approach this examination without fear and without favor.

"On the branch of the investigation with respect to whether a criminal act has been performed, I should also have you prepare any suggestion which may occur to you for the amendment of existing law for the protection of the community against such disaster.

"Second: This branch of your inquiry will have to do with the question of criminal negligence. It seems apparent from the reports that are current, and common knowledge, that the disaster was caused either by a direct criminal act on the part of those who wished to destroy property and life, or was due to negligence.

"Were any persons transporting TNT or dynamite or other high explosives through the streets of New York—through one of the most crowded streets at an hour when it was most crowded? Have the rules and regulations with respect to the possession and transportation of high explosives been fully complied with? In that connection I call your attention to the provisions of Chapter 10, Code of Ordinances of the City of New York, with respect to explosives.

"An examination of this chapter will show you that it contains sections prohibiting the manufacture of high explosives, regulations for the sale and transportation of explosives, with respect to magazines, respecting delivery by vehicles, respecting reports to be made of such deliveries, and with respect to the use of high explosives for blasting or other purposes.

"This disaster has made it clear that no one outside of governmental agencies should be permitted to have in his possession high explosives of any kind unless the authorities know where they are and exactly what they are being used for in some legitimate building or other operation or improvement where the use of such explosive is necessary.

"It is obvious from what has occurred that a large quantity was in the possession of some one. Where did it come from? How is it possible that any one could obtain such explosives?

"In general, upon the subject of your inquiry I would advise you to consider whether or not any person would be permitted to have in his possession explosives or be permitted to manufacture the same, except a Government agency, and if it be necessary to use it in private undertakings that it be constantly under the supervision of a responsible public servant.

"Gentlemen, this is a most important inquiry. It is part of your duty willingly to inquire whether a crime has been committed and bring to the bar of justice those who have offended. You will use every means in your power. You will have the co-operation in full of the powers of this court. You will go to the bottom of the situation and you are advised by the Court to proceed forthwith with the inquiry."

In reply to the foreman, William M. Douglas, the Court announced that he had asked the District Attorney to assign legal assistants to aid the jury.

In response to a request from the jury for presentation before it on Monday of any and all of the evidence obtained by the District Attorney's investigation, as well as from other sources, Alfred J. Talley, chief Assistant District Attorney, went before it and outlined the probable course to be followed in the investigation. He said the inquiry would include an effort to bring out from the witnesses who were in or near the explosion testimony concerning the color of the exploding flame, smoke and possibly odors with a view to reaching a determination as to the contents of the bomb or explosive. Several witnesses have told Assistant District Attorney Dineen that they had seen a "blue flame" at the instant of the explosion.

Mr. Talley, accompanied by R. C. Murphy, H. W. Hastings and M. R. Ryttenberg, Assistant District Attorneys, and Special Deputy Commissioner Shaw, went with the jurymen to the financial district. They rode in automobiles from the Criminal Courts Building with a mounted police guard. The jurymen examined the spot where one of the two wrecked automobiles and the bomb wagon were demolished and the broken part of the street in front of the Assay Office. They also inspected damaged buildings, including the banking house of J. P. Morgan & Co. Mr. Talley told the jurors he had learned the pavement which was supposed to have been broken by the explosion had been damaged some time before.

The jurors entered the Morgan offices and viewed the place where John J. Joyce, a clerk, was killed at his desk by one of the slugs hurled through a window.

was done hurriedly by two different men, each using single rubber stamps. In two several words are misspelled exactly the same way and in the other three other mistakes in spelling prevail throughout. That is, there are two sets of circulars—two in one set and three in another.

"In one set the following words are misspelled as follows: 'Remimber,' 'prisoner' for 'prisoners.' In the other set, 'remember' is 'rememer,' 'prisoners' is 'prisoniers' and 'fighters' is 'fighter.'"

It was on Tuesday that Attorney General Palmer had told two delegations that he would not approve a general proclamation granting amnesty to all political prisoners. Samuel Gompers and other labor representatives were received in the morning, when their pleas were heard. Three representatives of the Socialist Party presented their petitions in the afternoon.

In the conversation with Chief Flynn a newspaper man recalled that Mr. Gompers was one of the petitioners before Mr. Palmer, and Chief Flynn said:

"Yes. That's right, he was, but I don't want it understood that I would mention his name in connection with this terrible thing."

It was pointed out that his name was referred to only because he chanced to be there on that day, and Chief Flynn nodded and said, "And that's all."

On Tuesday the Attorney General told both delegations that the Government would proceed with the task of examining each case of those now held in prison for the violation of war laws, and this would accomplish the same end as the granting of a general amnesty. He took the position that if a proclamation were issued it would not obviate the necessity of examining each case.

Mr. Palmer at that time announced that there were 174 persons now in prison under conviction for offenses in the category covered by the appeal, and of these fifteen would be released within the next three months. Approximately 180 prisoners had already been released, Mr. Palmer said at that time. Among the so-called political prisoners is Eugene V. Debs, on whose behalf both delegations made a special plea, and who is a candidate for President of the United States on the Socialist ticket.

Robert T. Scott, private secretary to Mr. Palmer, said in Washington last night: "On June 30 a cut in appropriations for the Bureau of Investigation amounting to substantially one third of the amount requested of Congress became effective. Acquiescing in the direction of the Republican-controlled Congress this department reduced its operating forces to meet the amount of money provided. Inevitably this cut became public. Three weeks after it became actually effective this outrage was perpetrated in New York City.

"On June 2, 1919, on the same night and at the same hour, the homes of eleven Government officials were bombed and certain pamphlets headed 'Plain Words' and signed 'The Anarchist Fighters,' were found in the neighborhood, part of which pamphlets read: 'There will have to be bloodshed; we will not dodge; there will have to be murder; we will kill, because it is necessary; there will have to be destruction; we will destroy to rid the world of your tyrannical institutions.'"

Agents of the Department of Justice, their number augmented by agents taken over from the Flying Squadron, which has been curbing profiteers, however, were working hard at checking up all information that came into the office. They started out yesterday to visit all livery stables in the city in an effort to discover if a horse and light wagon were missing. They already had checked up on powder companies and learned that no powder wagon, under permit anyhow, was in the Wall Street district on the day of the catastrophe.

Denial also was made of an early newspaper report that J. P. Morgan & Co. were making a separate inquiry on their own account. Chief Flynn visited the Morgan offices early yesterday morning and made a thorough inquiry there, as he did also in the Assay Office, across the street. It was believed that this visit gave rise to the rumor.

It was while on this visit that one of Chief Flynn's agents found on the sixth floor of the National City Bank Building, at Wall and William Streets, two steel slugs, of the sort that were tossed broadcast from the bomb. A granite pillar outside the window through which the two slugs had hurtled was found to have had a piece about seven inches long and two and a half inches deep chipped out of it by another and probably larger missile. The granite pillars are stained and show all signs of age. The chipped spot shone fresh and bright.

Investigators pointed to this discovery as only one more bit of cumulative proof that the damage could not have been done by an explosion of powder, but was done by a bomb loaded with chopped-up window weights and steel slugs. They also said it was an example of the terrific force of the explosion.

A rumor that the numerals "16" have been appearing in radical literature and conversations reached the Department of Justice investigators yesterday. They said they knew nothing of it.

BROKERS HELP HOSPITAL.

Plea of Broad Street Nurses Finds Prompt Response on Curb.

In appreciation of the good work done by the Broad Street Hospital, brokers engaged on the Broad Street Curb market responded yesterday most generously to an appeal made by nurses from the hospital for immediate financial assistance. During the forenoon several nurses visited the Curb market and stated that the institution had been practically cleaned out of supplies and was in urgent need of funds to purchase medicines, drugs, &c.

The plea of the nurse resulted in a collection, probably the most remarkable and spontaneous ever had in the financial district. For a time business was practically suspended while Curb brokers made out checks, all of generous size, and many who did not have check books with them turned over every dollar they had in their pockets.

53 BOMB VICTIMS STILL IN HOSPITALS

Several Die During Day, but Majority Show Improvement and Many Are Sent Home.

PATHETIC STORIES TOLD

Girl Makes Round Seeking Missing Brother—Parents "Identify" Wrong Body.

Fifty-three victims of the Wall Street explosion were still under treatment in the various hospitals last night. A number, it was said, had been transferred from Broad Street and Volunteer Hospitals to private institutions in Manhattan and Brooklyn. Several of the injured died during the day, but most of those under treatment showed improvement, and scores of them were sent home.

One of the callers at the Volunteer Hospital in the afternoon was a young woman who was searching for a brother who had not been home all night. She was making the rounds of the hospitals, she said, and though she had heard a report that he had been killed, hope grew as at each place she was told his name did not appear in the list of patients.

At the hospitals one gained fuller knowledge of the sorrow that came into many a family as a result of the explosion. Particular sadness was attached to the death of Catherine Dickinson of Elmhurst. Recently she lost her father and brother and she was the comfort of a widowed mother. She might have escaped, but she took her lunch hour an hour earlier on Thursday in order to help another girl get a position. She was standing at Broad and Wall Streets waiting for the appearance of her friend when she was killed. She was employed by G. H. Burr & Co. of 120 Broadway.

Miss Ruth Wynkoop of 170 East Seventeenth Street, Brooklyn, is in Roosevelt Hospital with severe burns. She told the hospital authorities that she had been walking with a friend near the Morgan Company office when the explosion came. She has heard nothing from this friend since the explosion and as she is so badly burned as to be unable to talk the authorities have not pressed her for the friend's name.

One of those who was transferred from the Broad Street Hospital to the Presbyterian Hospital was Howard Hubbard, a clerk in the National City Bank. He has a fragment of steel in his leg. Lying on the stretcher he told yesterday of the explosion. "I left the bank about 11:55 o'clock to go to Iselin & Co. and I was in Wall Street near the Assay Office when the explosion occurred. There was a tremendous flash and I and an acquaintance were thrown to the pavement. It was a miracle that we were not killed, for we were, I judge, not more than 25 feet from the wagon when it blew up."

In the excitement at the Morgue on Thursday night the relatives of Robert Westbay, an eighteen-year-old messenger who was killed, ordered a wrong body sent to their home, 232 West Twenty-fourth street. It was not until the body had been taken home and more careful examination made that it was found a wrong identification had been made. It was returned to the Morgue. In the meantime the body of the boy had been received from Volunteer Hospital, where he died. It was identified and later taken to the family home.

John A. Donohue of 1,093 East Fourteenth Street, Brooklyn, who died in Bellevue Hospital yesterday, was a certified accountant in the office of J. P. Morgan & Co. He was born in County Clare, Ireland, and came here twenty-eight years ago. Mr. Donohue met death while on his way to meet his brother Thomas in Court Street, Brooklyn.

"I was waiting at the Court Street building when I heard the newsboy shouting and I bought a paper and learned of the explosion," said Thomas Donohue yesterday. "I hurried over to Manhattan and though I saw some of the bodies in the street it was not until long after that I learned that my brother had been injured and was in the hospital."

The body of young William A. Joyce, who was killed in the office of J. P. Morgan & Co., will be buried from his home, 1,806 Ditmars Avenue, Brooklyn, on Sunday. His father, Thomas W. Joyce, is head of the gold shipment department of the Morgan banking house, and he was injured in the explosion. His boy was killed within twenty-five feet of him, and, though suffering many cuts from the glass shower, the father refused to go to the hospital, remaining to look after his son's body.

Another victim who died in the Broad Street Hospital was Harold L. Gillies, 27 years old, of 52 Storer Avenue, Pelham. He was associated with George H. Burr & Co., 120 Broadway, and he left a widow and one child.

Funeral services for William F. Hutchinson will be held at the Campbell Funeral Church, Broadway and Sixty-sixth Street, on Sunday afternoon. He was an agent for the Equitable Assurance Company. Mr. Hutchinson had been a member of the 7th Regiment and he saw service in the Spanish-American war.

Bernard F. Kennedy, who was killed while on his way to lunch by a metal slug which hit him on the head, saw eleven months' service overseas as a private in the 77th Division. He was gassed and wounded by shrapnel in the knee. He was 29 years old and lived at 443 Tenth Street, Brooklyn. He was employed as a clerk in the brokerage firm of Johnson & Wood, 115 Broadway.

MORGAN OFFICES LIKE A HOSPITAL

Business Resumed at Regular Hour, but Many of the Employes Wear Bandages.

ONLY THREE HOURS LOST

All of Staff at Their Posts Except Two Dead and Two or Three Seriously Injured.

J. P. Morgan & Co., apparently the target at which Thursday's explosion was aimed, resumed business yesterday, after being closed for only the three business hours from noon, the time of the explosion, to 3 o'clock, the time-honored hour for the closing of banking institutions.

Large sheets of canvas had been stretched over the windows, from which every atom of glass had been blown. The glass dome in the main banking room of the building was inclosed with scaffolding. The glass in the partitions of the various cages along the counters was missing.

The staff of the banking house were all in their places. With the exception of Thomas Joyce, killed outright by the explosion, and John A. Donohue, one of the executives of the Foreign Export Department, who died at Bellevue Hospital in the morning of his injuries, and two or three of the more seriously injured, every member or employe of the firm was in his or her place, from Henry P. Davison and Thomas Cochran, two of the partners who were out of town at the time of the explosion, and Junius Spencer Morgan, son of J. P. Morgan, who refused to permit minor cuts to keep him from work, to the humblest messenger and filing clerk in the firm's employ.

Great regret was caused by Mr. Donohue's death. Like Mr. Joyce, he was seated near the Wall Street windows, and, like him, he was struck by one of the flying iron slugs, which flew like a hail of shrapnel from the focal point of the explosion. Thomas W. Lamont, one of the partners, referred feelingly to the death of the second employe. According to Mr. Lamont, all but two of the injured had reported for duty.

Upon Mr. Lamont's invitation, a group of reporters entered the building and were shown the evidences of damages and the efforts made to repair it. It was a novel sight to enter one of the biggest financial institutions in the world and see dignified executives at work with heads bandaged, to see clerks operating typewriters and adding machines with one disabled hand, to be greeted by special watchmen, whose eyes and noses were the only parts of their features visible, to see everywhere persons looking like patients in the convalescent ward of an army hospital and to feel at the same time the calm yet steady impulse of a great business organization running with unimpaired smoothness.

Like all other buildings within the limits of the effect of the explosion, the Morgan Building was under heavy police guard. Uniformed patrolmen surrounded the building and half a dozen detectives in plain clothes kept in the immediate vicinity all day. No one was admitted unless he could show that he had business.

Mr. Davison, who was shooting on his Long Island estate on Thursday, discovered how strict a guard was kept when he tried to enter the building in a hurry early in the afternoon. A big policeman, probably from some remote precinct, tried to stop the banker, until several employes rushed out and told who he was. Mr. Davison congratulated the policeman upon his adherence to orders.

Thomas Cochran, another of the partners, who was out of town, had to travel all night by automobile and railroad from the Adirondacks to reach the office. Mr. Lamont, Dwight W. Morrow, George Whitney, Elliott Bacon and Junius Spencer Morgan, who were in the building on Thursday, all came in early. Mr. Morgan made light of his injuries, which were found to have been rather more serious than at first supposed. Dr. Thomas S. Darlton, former Health Commissioner, who has an office near by and was called to dress Mr. Morgan's injuries, said that Mr. Morgan had received more wounds than were at first reported. It was learned from other sources that Mr. Morgan was struck by at least five flying glass splinters which inflicted as many cuts, all of which were said to have been comparatively slight.

Mr. Lamont, who gave an interview to newspaper men, denied the report that the Morgan firm would offer a reward or had engaged in any independent investigation of its own. "We will not offer a reward," said Mr. Lamont. "It is a public, not a private matter."

Mr. Lamont also said he had heard nothing of a proposal by a group of banks to join in offering $100,000 reward for detection of the perpetrators of the explosion.

"Do you still adhere to your theory that the explosion was an accident?" Mr. Lamont was asked.

"I do not know as I ever held that theory," he replied.

"You were quoted as having expressed such a belief," he was told.

"I may have expressed that opinion informall, when the information that we received was that the explosion was caused by a dynamite wagon," Mr. Lamont said. "I have no theory. We accept the theories propounded by the police."

Mr. Lamont said the firm would have no statement to make concerning the explosion. "What can we say?" he asked.

He then expressed regret at the death of Mr. Donohue, whom he described as "another valued and trusted employe," and said he believed that the hurts of most of the rest of the injured were not serious.

Mr. Lamont said the company was doing business in all departments. In reply to a question, he said the explosion would not cause the firm to abandon the construction of an addition to the Morgan building.

The progress made overnight in the physical rehabilitation of the Morgan offices was remarkable. The big windows on the Broad and Wall Street sides had been covered with canvas stretched on light wooden frames, and some of the smaller windows had been glazed.

In the centre of the main banking room, just under the glass dome, a scaffolding had been erected and the dome boarded over. The dome, while not shattered, was perforated and cracked in many places and the boarding guards against the fall of pieces of broken glass. It was said that it would be a few days before the dome could be replaced, as the glass has to be specially manufactured and cannot be obtained on short notice.

All of the cages in the main banking room were in position. The plate glass partitions were missing, but all the ornamental metal screens were up and the desks were in order. Less damage was done the interior of the building than had at first been thought. A large part of the appearance of great damage arose from the large quantity of glass on the desks and floor and the dust and other litter blown in from the street. When this was swept away and the furniture cleaned, polished and replaced, the banking room presented an appearance that was almost normal.

Great cracks showed in the plaster ceiling of the banking room. The ceiling is heavy and of an attractive design. It has been pronounced safe for the present, but it was said that a new ceiling may be necessary for the sake of appearance.

During the day, the Morgan offices were visited by the Grand Jury, of which C. M. Douglas is foreman and which has undertaken an investigation of the explosion. The jurors devoted twenty minutes to an inspection of the building and in receiving first hand accounts of the explosion from those in the offices.

EXCHANGE REOPENS WITH STOCK ADVANCE

Turnover Is Heaviest Since Aug. 9 and Confidence Proves Keynote of Day.

The New York Stock Exchange opened at the accustomed hour yesterday, many of the marks of the disaster of the preceding day having been obliterated overnight. The only sign of the terrific explosion which had rocked the building at noon on Thursday was in the strips of white bunting which covered the big windows on the Broad Street and the New Street sides. It had approached the impossible to replace the plate glass in the short space of time intervening.

Brokers, before the opening, gathered in groups, discussing the disaster and expressing condemnation of the diabolical plot which caused such a heavy toll of life and threatened the lives of so many more. Most of the traders had been badly shaken by the blast, but it could not be learned that any one had been so severely shocked as to cause his absence from the floor yesterday.

With the opening gong the Stock Exchange, aside from the strips of bunting covering the windows and interfering somewhat with the light on the floor, assumed its customary busy air, and trading went on spiritedly throughout the day. The turnover was the heaviest since Aug. 9, and prices were on an ascending scale throughout the day, indicating that confidence had not been shaken.

Reassuring messages as to the position of the market were flashed broadcast over the country on brokers' wires during the hour or so preceding the market opening, and this word served to allay any fears that might have been felt at distant points. The result was almost no selling pressure during the first few minutes, except that which could be easily absorbed. It was understood that banking support for the market was to be had for the asking, provided there was any disposition to panic on the part of holders of securities. It is believed that some banking support was used, but the firm tone at the opening served to instill a buying movement, and prices advanced more buoyantly than in many weeks, some issues gaining as high as 10 points.

The fact that stocks advanced, rather than just held their own, indicated, it was held, that there was a demand for securities far in excess of what would exist were there only banking support to prevent a sharp break as a result of the explosion.

The Governors of the Stock Exchange issued no statement during the day, apparently feeling content that the character of the market was a sufficient answer to Red terrorism. Confidence was the keynote throughout the day, and this was true not alone in the Stock Exchange, but in the entire financial district.

smashed desks and other office furniture from the Morgan office—beams that now and then, as they were moved for additional light, caused dark stains and spatters to start out from battered walls and littered pavements.

Under the gaping windows and the shifting light the workers seemed grotesque figures, and their talk seemed uncanny, all in a place that ordinarily at night is deserted and still. Now and then a small cluster of night workers would gather at a corner to watch the work, only to be "moved on" quickly by some of the fifty policemen patrolling the area of destruction.

Strong guards were at the banking places, especially at the Assay Office and in front of the Morgan building. Six heavily armed Erie Railroad watchmen were stationed with the police at the Morgan office and the watch was strict. No one, no matter what his credentials, unless he were on duty, passed the "dead lines" established at Broadway and at William Street.

All through the night the labor went forward and then came dawn and the scrubwomen. Long lines of shabbily-dressed "somebodies" bound for the upper reaches of skyscrapers. Every morning they come with sunup to the financial district; the policemen know them, and they passed the wrack and ruin to their work without trouble.

Then the sun lightened the street, the arcs were turned off, 6 o'clock, 7 o'clock and then 8 o'clock and the first of the work-bound began to arrive. Word went to Police Headquarters and 150 men under Inspector William F. Coleman were hurried out for duty in the street. They speedily decided that no vehicular traffic would be permitted through the thoroughfare, and established a rule that pedestrians bound east through Wall Street must keep to the right, and in the opposite direction to the left.

Foundations Withstood Shock.

Shortly after 8 o'clock Redolph P. Miller, Superintendent of Buildings, with a staff of assistants made a tour of the section to ascertain whether any of the buildings were in danger of falling as a result of the explosion shock. Special attention was paid to the panels in the offices of the Morgan Company. Supt. Miller reported that all of the buildings were in good shape and that apparently property damage had been confined to glass. Trailing the building inspector came a corps of men from the Department of Public Works to inspect the condition of the streets. Aside from the hole in Wall Street made by the detonation of the bomb the streets were found unhurt. It was said that the hole caused by the bomb would not be repaired until the police and the Federal authorities had finished collecting evidence from it.

While the Street Cleaning Department's men were getting the highway in shape emergency windows were being put into the Stock Exchange, the Morgan office, the office of Post & Flagg and other offices. Here and there some farsighted business man had managed to get a glazier with honest-to-goodness glass and plate fronts were being put in rapidly. For the Stock Exchange and the Morgan offices, however, muslin had to do and this was stretched like masks over the twisted window frames, concealing the fringe of jagged glass that each held.

Sightseers Arrive Early.

By 10 o'clock the great throngs that were to pass slowly through the street all day had set in. Seemingly every clerk or "boss" who had a pretext for getting out of the office during the morning headed for Wall Street to see the effect of the outrage. And supplementing them were thousands of women and men from other parts of the city, come down to see the "sight." Until the police barred the practice Pine Street was a favorite parking place for the cars of folks who, if their license was an indication, motored from Connecticut and New Jersey. Hundreds of the sightseers came equipped with cameras, but the constant injunction of the policemen to "keep moving" prevented most of them from getting their photographic apparatus into action.

Steadily mounting in numbers, the great stream of the curious reached its greatest height when Trinity's bells announced that it was 12 o'clock midday and luncheon time. Then, with every building sending out stenographers, bookkeepers, bond salesmen, managers and bosses, Wall Street became the channel for a slowly moving mass of humanity. It required great work by Coleman's men to keep the crowd on the go and obeying the rules of one-way locomotion.

Sheet of Tin Scares Crowd.

Another great surging of people through the street came at the second luncheon hour—1 o'clock—and it was a few minutes after that time when a curious incident happened that showed that "nerves" had gripped some of the crowd. A workman, unloading sheets of tin at Nassau and Wall Streets, happened to let one of the sheets fall. It hit the pavement with a crash. Everybody jumped instinctively. "Oh!" came in relieved accents from many mouths when the grinning workman stooped down and picked up his "bomb."

Maintaining its unprecedented crowds—yes, Wall Street, with all its curb market and bustle, could and did have its record crowd—the street carried over into last night. Thousands, unable to get down there during the day, went down there last night instead of to a theatre. Twenty additional policemen were on duty and managed to handle the crowds without incident.

is rich in suggestions for the nest-builder in search of the decorative fitments that contribute so much to the attractiveness and "homeiness" of a school or college sitting-room.

Among them are all manner of pretty scarfs for the dresser and the small table; dainty boxes for gloves, handkerchiefs, veils and the hundred-and-one little personal frivols without which no girl or woman can exist; desk sets and waste baskets that are as ornamental as they are useful; couch pillows and sewing receptacles; laundry and shoe bags; and a host of other things—all of them charming, utilitarian and moderately priced.

PARIS MADE WARY BY EXPLOSION HERE

FRENCH RADICALS ARE SPLIT

But Extremists Have Been Made More Extreme by Lenin's Summons to Violence.

By WALTER DURANTY.

Copyright, 1920, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Sept. 17.—The New York explosion has aroused great interest here. There is much speculation as to whether it is to be attributed to the terrorist element who have been committing many bomb outrages of late in Italy and Spain.

Inner circles here have been whispering a good deal about terrorist plots hitherto nipped in the bud by the vigilance of the police who, during the past fortnight have conducted several raids on cafés and restaurants frequented by a certain class of foreigners. At one raid a few days ago in little Mont Parnasse Café every one present was compelled to go to the police station and submit to a searching interrogation.

The official uneasiness may be exaggerated, but it is pointed out that the present attitude of the Bolshevist leaders of Moscow is not without significance to those interested in the preservation of law and order. Moscow has recently taken the extraordinary step of addressing to the labor parties of Europe a series of rigid conditions with the purpose of forcing them to define their status.

"If you are revolutionaries," says Moscow, in effect, "then you must be real revolutionaries. Revolution means violence and bloodshed and bombs. We will accept no quibbling, no perversion of the word revolution to mean a radical change that can peaceably be achieved. To us there is but one meaning—a sudden, violent upset of the capitalist régime."

The name Socialist Party must be abandoned for that of Communist Party. Obedience to Moscow's decrees must be absolute and unswerving.

Sympathizers with the Bolsheviki in France, England and Germany have tried to attenuate the force of these conditions and introduce reserves and limitations. But it is clear to any one who reads the original that Lenin's whole purpose is to emphasize the paramount necessity of violence.

But it has come about that the extremism of Moscow and Lenin's demands for supereme authority and claim to infallibility have disgusted many of the western workers. German and British labor have refused to subscribe to his conditions, against which there is a strong and growing revulsion of feeling in France. A schism has been produced in the labor parties of Europe, but while the moderate elements have grown more moderate, the extremist elements have grown more extreme. If Lenin wanted an utterly clean-cut policy between those who are ready for violence and those who are not, he is surely getting it.

SYMPATHY IN BRITAIN FOR J. P. MORGAN & CO.

Copyright, 1920, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sept. 19.—Universal sympathy has been expressed here today in financial circles with J. P. Morgan & Co. over the explosion at their Wall Street office.

Morgan, Grenfell & Co., the London branch of the firm, nave been inundated with inquiries and messages of condolence from leading banks and financial houses of the city. They replied to inquiries by giving out reports from New York as to the casualties in their staff, but declined to comment on the outrage.

J. P. Morgan himself is in Scotland and is kept fully informed of the details as they are received. No information could he obtained at the Morgan-Grenfell office as to whether he would now return to London or hasten his departure for New York.

The Daily Mail says editorially that there can be little doubt the Wall Street outrage was the work of American Bolsheviki.

"The civilized Governments of the world," it says, "would act wisely in putting up an unclimbable fence against these criminals and announcing that their funds will be seized and they themselves will be treated as ordinary robbers and murderers and denied immunity of 'political offenders.' Then the Moscow banditti and their friends would realize that their own necks were in danger.

"They have rewarded the deplorable weakness of our Government by promoting strikes, conspiring against the State and endeavoring to create a venal reptile press to cause revolution. Krassin and his gang ought at once to go, after this ghastly example of the true meaning of their gospel."

The Daily Herald editorially says:

"The New York explosion was first attributed to accident, but in a country which is so nervously apprehensive about Reds, a second version was almost inevitable—a version translating a cruel accident into vicious design. There is no evidence of any such design. If indeed there was a deliberate attack on life it was abominable, just as every form of war is abominable. There is enough misery in the world without recourse to deeds of slaughter, whether such deeds be carried out by Governments or against them."

The Daily Telegraph says:

"If, as we are forced to believe, this was a plot to deal a deadly blow at capitalism, it has proved a complete failure. It can achieve no purpose except to arouse in every country, and not in the United States only, feelings of indignation against men who could plan such an infamous crime.

"It is nearly always the same with these crazy enemies of society. They hit out blindly, and they strike down scores of persons against whom they can have no possible grudge. The whole civilized world will hope that the miscreants will speedily be laid by the heels and duly punished. They have given a signal which, we trust, will not be without effect in other countries in causing effective steps to be taken to guard life and property against such diabolical crimes of diseased brains."

$20,500 IN REWARDS FOR BOMB PLOTTERS

Rewards totaling $20,500 for evidence leading to the arrest and conviction of the perpetrators of the Wall Street explosion were offered yesterday, while action was started toward establishing a fund for the benefit of the families of the victims. The Mayor also received several letters from citizens before the Board of Estimate took action offering a reward to the effect that the writers were willing to contribute to a fund making up a substantial reward.

The Board of Estimate took quick action at a special meeting and adopted a resolution offering a reward of $10,000 by the city, while the Preferred Accident Insurance Company of 80 Maiden Lane offered another $10,000. The Board of Aldermen also authorized a separate reward of $500 for information leading to the identity or ownership of the horse and wagon in which it is believed the bomb was carried.

The Mayor received several letters from brokerage houses in which firms and individuals offered to put up large rewards if the city found itself powerless to take action. Joseph McAleenan of 469 Fulton Street, Brooklyn, sent this telegram to the editor of THE NEW YORK TIMES last night: "Should the Board of Estimate be unable to offer a reward in the name of the city for the arrest and conviction of the Wall Street assassins, I will be glad to contribute to a public fund $250 for this purpose, conditions of payment to be governed by your ruling. All the citizens of the city owe something to those who have been needlessly sacrificed by this outrage."

American Legion members also urged citizens to offer rewards and the Jeff Feigl Post contributed $50 for this purpose.

Harold Daniels of the brokerage firm of Daniels & Co., 81 Broad Street and 36 South William Street, sent a letter to the Mayor offering to contribute $250 to a fund to be started by the Mayor for the "living dependents of the victims of the explosion." His letter read:

"As it appears that the victims of the 'Wall Street horror' were men and women workers, and not capitalists, most of them clerks and holders of similar positions, and were breadwinners for their respective families, it is but fair and fitting that something be done by 'Wall Street' for the living dependents in a practical and substantial way. The undersigned takes the liberty of starting through you a subscription list and hopes that all individuals who were in the vicinity of the explosion and who were fortunate enough to be spared will help swell the list to the end that a fund shall be raised in the financial district, the distribution of said fund to be under the supervision of a committee to be appointed by you, co-operating with the officials of the various exchanges. We therefore take the liberty of enclosing our check of $250 to your order to start this good work along."

EXPERTS TELL HOW BOMB WAS MADE

SCRAP IRON LIKE SHRAPNEL

Angle of Scars on Buildings Said to Show Bomb Exploded About Four Feet Above Ground.

A bomb fashioned after the aerial torpedoes used in Zeppelin and Gotha raids during the war—a metal casing of not more than two cubic feet in content, charged with thirty pounds of TNT—caused the explosion in Wall Street Thursday, two experts who were in the British service during the war declared yesterday.

One of them—Victor Beveridge, who, as an officer in the British General Intelligence Service, visited the scene of many air raids—made the more specific deduction, based on the angle of the scars made by flying pieces of metal on the buildings at Broad and Wall Streets, that the bomb was set off at a height of four feet from the ground, a hypothesis which would fit in with the theory that the bomb was brought to Wall Street on a wagon or automobile.

Mr. Beveridge's deductions agreed with those of Joseph Menchen, formerly a technical adviser to the British Minister of Munitions, in all respects but one—the manner in which the iron sash weights, which were thrown all over the financial district by the explosion, were used. Mr. Menchen thinks that the sash weights were inside of the container, so that they were used as shrapnel. Mr. Beveridge believes that the weights were placed around the bomb in a wooden box.

Hears Blast, Calls It TNT.

Mr. Beveridge, who is now Vice President of the J. Roland Kay Advertising Agency, was in the offices of the J. N. Willys Export Corporation at 165 Broadway at the time of the explosion.

"I was talking to Mr. Sturgeon of the Willys company when I heard the sound of the explosion," he said. "I remarked immediately to Mr. Sturgeon that if that was not a TNT bomb I had never heard one in my life.

"In the course of my service with British General Headquarters in France I had heard from 1,000 to 2,000 German bombs explode, so the sound was very familiar. I had not only seen raids in every town from Dunkirk to Peronne along the fighting front, but I had been in raids in London, Paris, Amiens, Calais and Boulogne, and was therefore familiar with the sound of such an explosive in an undamaged city.

"Today I had an opportunity to examine the damage done by the bombs, and to any one with a wide knowledge of the effects of such things there could not be an instant's doubt as to the cause. It was a bomb with a charge of from twenty-five to thirty pounds of TNT. There were certain peculiarities, however.

"From the detonation, as I heard it, the explosive was excellently comounded; from the scars on the walls I am certain the container was not so perfect. I do not think it was spherical in shape. More probably it was a cylinder, four or five inches in diameter. The head or percussion part lay inclined toward the Treasury Building, and there were comparatively few slugs or metal fragments in the bomb itself.

Bomb Placed in Wooden Case.

"The actual bomb was set, most probably, in a wooden case, and this was filled with the iron sash weights which would cover the machine from view. These weights, of course, were scattered widely when the explosion took place, but few of them flew higher than twenty feet, and at that height their force, as could be seen from the marks on the buildings, was almost spent. This would not have been the case had they been ejected from the bomb itself.

"The actual explosion took place about four and a half feet from the ground. I am absolutely sure of that. It may be of interest to explain why I am so specific.

"I spent a great deal of time at one period in Dunkirk, which was attacked by bombers two and three times every night, and made many investigations of the results of the explosion of the bombs. One of the favorite missiles was what we called a 'stick bomb.' This was constructed of two halves in the shape of wash basins welded together. From the bottom of one half a stick about three feet in length projected. The bomb was dropped from the planes with this stick pointing downward, and the explosion took place the moment the point of the stick struck the ground, when the body of the bomb was still three feet in the air.

"I examined the results of hundreds of these 'stick bombs.' Their TNT content was about twenty-five pounds and the damage they did was pretty much the same as that caused by the bomb which has brought home to New Yorkers one of the horrors that occurred night after night in cities and villages of Belgium, France and Great Britain during the war. The angle of the scars on the buildings gives unmistakable evidence as to the position of the bomb set off in Wall Street."

Menchen Visits the Scene.

Mr. Menchen, who lives at 701 Seventh Avenue and officially investigated the effects of many air raids in London, also visited the scene of the explosion yesterday. Following the visit he outlined his deductions to a reporter for THE NEW YORK TIMES. They agree in nearly every detail with those of Mr. Beveridge.

"The bomb was exactly the same as those used in aerial raids," he said. "There is no reason for the theory that it was a very large bomb. Probably it was a cylinder about two feet long and a foot in diameter containing TNT.

"Such a bomb might be made very easily by any one with an elementary knowledge of explosives. It is illegal to sell TNT without a permit, but it is not likely that the maker of the bomb had to buy the explosive. The chances are that it was stolen by a workman in an explosives plant. The casing might be constructed of a steel pipe with perhaps a coating of concrete on the outside.

"When I visited the scene of the explosion I was instantly struck by the similarity of the effects of the explosion there to those following air raids in the cities of Europe. The area of destruction at Broad and Wall Streets was about the same as that caused by an air bomb. A very small air bomb will do a great amount of damage over a large area. One bomb that dropped near the Bank of England, I remember, broke every pane of glass within a radius of several blocks.

"The indoor weights might have been placed inside of the steel cylinder, so that they had the effect of shrapnel. I understand that some of these weights were picked up at a distance of several blocks from the place where the explosion occurred, showing that they must have been sent through the air with terrific speed."

A. Stanley Fox, explosives expert for the Aetna Explosives Company, who arrived in Wall Street soon after the explosion, said he was sure that TNT was the explosive used. All the circumstances pointed toward the nitric compound, he said. He declared that he could plainly distinguish the odor of exploded TNT when he arrived.

DU PONT TRUCKS TRACED.

Manager Says One Seen on Lower Broadway Had Paint Materials.

The news that an affidavit had been made stating that a Du Pont Powder Company motor truck was seen a few minutes before the explosion and in its immediate vicinity stirred the financial district yesterday. It was thought that the truck might have been carrying explosives which went off by spontaneous combustion. An investigation disclosed that none of the Du Pont trucks had gone through or crossed Wall Street the day of the explosion, and that all of the vehicles operated by the company had been completely traced.

Ralph G. Morse, Traffic Manager of E. I. Du Pont de Nemours & Co., powder manufacturers, with offices at 120 Broadway, acknowledged that one of their trucks crossed Broadway at Vesey Street, seven blocks from the Morgan Building, some time before the explosion. This acknowledgment probably accounts for the following story told Chief Inspector William Lahey by Joseph Furlong and Gilbert C. Smith of 217 Broadway.

"At about 11 o'clock on the morning of the explosion we were standing at the corner of Vesey Street and Broadway, when a large red motor truck, with a red trailer bearing in large blue letters the name 'Du Pont Powder Works,' crossed Broadway at Vesey Street, and passed into Ann Street to Nassau. We both remember that the trailer had five hogsheads on it which we presumed contained powder."

Acting District Attorney Alfred J. Talley, hearing of this statement, issued subpoenaes for both men to appear before the Grand Jury on Monday. Another witness reported to have said that he saw a Du Pont wagon in the vicinity of the explosion a short time before noon is John Miekiejohn, a chauffeur of 247 East Seventy-seventh Street.

Late last night Mr. Morse of the Du Pont Company was asked what the kegs or casks the witness said he saw contained, and also if it was not possible that some wagon previously owned by the Dupont Company had fallen into the hands of another company or individual. Mr. Morse said:

"We have been co-operating with the Department of Justice and have traced the route taken by each truck in our service. We have accounted for each one. The motor truck which was seen in the financial district carried no explosives. We manufacture other things. I am informed that this truck carried color pigment and raw materials for the manufacturing of paint. At any rate, this truck is now in Newark, N. J.

"We no longer operate horse-drawn wagons. The theory that the wagon which was in front of the Morgan building when the explosion occurred was one of our old wagons is unfounded. The wagons were old when we sold them four years ago. The Police Department has investigated and found that the wagon at the scene of the explosion was a different type and size from any our company has used. Furthermore, only one truck in our service was below Fourteenth Street on the day of the disaster."

The Superintendent of the Du Pont warehouses in Jersey City confirmed the statement that the movements of the trucks belonging to the company had been checked up. He said that the only truck which had been in the financial district on the day of the explosion had stopped at the Chicago Varnish Company in Vesey Street. This truck was driven, he said, by William Fachfe, of 339, Lafayette Street, Newark, and had left New York about 11 o'clock for the Harrison Works in Newark with a load of raw materials.

ROOSEVELT CALLS FOR INDEPENDENCE

Scouts Harding's Regularity Pleas and Says They Are Due to Disquieting Reports.

ATTACKS SENATOR'S RECORD

Large Crowds at Hartford and Other North Connecticut Cities Greet Him and Lonergan.

Special to The New York Times.

HARTFORD, Conn., Sept. 17.—Northern Connecticut this afternoon and tonight gave Franklin D. Roosevelt a warm reception. Congressman Augustine Lonergan of Hartford, who was nominated yesterday to oppose Frank B. Brandegee for the Senate, accompanied Mr. Roosevelt on his tour, making his first appearance as a candidate. He challenged Senator Brandegee to meet him in public debate on the League of Nations issue.

Mr. Roosevelt spent the night here and tomorrow goes to New Haven, with rear-end train speeches at Meriden and Wallingford. Later he goes to Bridgeport, and makes his Saturday night speech in Danbury, en route to Upper New York State, which he will tour next week. Today's set speeches were at Willimantic, Manchester and New Britain.

Addressing a large gathering tonight in the Foot Guard Armory in this city, which was crowded to capacity, with overflow meetings in the streets outside, Mr. Roosevelt advocated the League of Nations, declaring much of the opposition was due to a deplorable lack of knowledge of what the covenant really says. He bitterly attacked Senator Harding's recent statement that "too much is heard of independence in politics" and that "the fashion of parading independence is to be deplored." Continuing Mr. Roosevelt said:

"No doubt this solemn utterance of the Republican candidate for the Presidency, the highest gift in the hands of the American people, made after due deliberation, must have been read with great astonishment and possibly a touch of disgust by that great body of independents who, scattered through the country, have held the balance of power in our political life and have kept the nation true to that idealism which made possible its foundation and its present foremost station among the nations of the world.

"Those familiar with the career of Senator Harding probably were not greatly astonished for they naturally would expect from him open approval of a blind party allegiance. Never in his entire career has he ever shown the slightest indication of independence either in action or in thought. On the contrary, he has stood side by side with the political bosses, not only in his State, but in the Senate.

"Alongside of his declaration against independence among the voters is his telegram of congratulation to your own Senator Brandegee, one of the leaders of that clique which has controlled the Senate of the United States whenever the Republicans have had a majority. Only recently in an interview he stated that the proudest moment of his life was when he nominated Senator Foraker of Ohio, a man who Theodore Roosevelt proved received $50,000 from the Standard Oil Company while a member of the United States Senate. Senator Harding not only nominated Foraker for the Senate, but he nominated as delegate at large to a Republican National Convention, with fulsome praise, the man who has been called the most corrupt boss in America—Boss George B. Cox of Cincinnati. Under all the circumstances Senator Harding could hardly be expected to indorse independence among others.

"His confession of political faith, in so far as independence was concerned, doubtless was prompted by the disquieting reports he was receiving of how the progressive, thinking voters of the West and Northwest, whose votes proved decisive in 1916, are planning to vote again this year.

"I do not wonder, after my trip through each of the Western States, that Senator Harding should have been horrified to think that the people of the West are so independent that, although normally Republican, they are going to vote for progressive men and progressive principles this year, and not for a reactionary Senate syndicate which has seized the Republican Party machinery, but which does not represent the rank and file of the Republican Party.

PORTRAYS HARDING AS A REACTIONARY

Governor Cox referred to the changing attitudes which he charges Senator Harding has taken on the League of Nations and other issues and then took up the Japanese question.

"It matters not who the visitor to Marion is and what his mental attitude chances to be on the outstanding issue of the hour," he said, "as he departs, he announces thorough satisfaction with Senator Harding's assurances. This has happened with proleague men and with anti-league men. It all promises for the country a chameleon policy.

"Coming to a concrete case; a delegation of Californians headed by Gov. Stephens, visited Marion for the purpose of giving Senator Harding the opportunity of an expression of the Japanese question. The Republican platform is silent on it, although an attempt was made in the Committee on Resolutions to have a definite committal.

"Prior to the coming of the Western contingent, Senator Harding, in his advance speech which was already in the hands of the newspapers, expressed himself for a new 'understanding' between Japan and the United States. This meant but one thing: a new arrangement between the two countries on the question of immigration. You people in California know what the present status is. Senator Harding, prior to the coming of Governor Stephens, announced a change and the change clearly was to be a modification of existing compacts.

Charges "Complete Reversal."

"A complete reversal was witnessed after a conference between Governor Stevens and Senator Harding. The latter, by spoken word, said that in favoring 'assimilability of alien born' we must hold to 'a full consecration to American prices and ideals.' In this country you will catch the fine distinction and you will see that the Marion position was one thing one day and quite another the day after.

"I repeat again what was said in my speech of acceptance, that this is not time for wabbling.

"The Democratic platform on the subject of Asiatic immigration says:

"'The policy of the United States with reference to the non-admission of Asiatic immigrants is a true expression of the judgment of our people, and to the several States whose geographical situation or internal conditions make this policy and the enforcement of the laws enacted pursuant thereto of particular concern we pledge our support.'

"My interpretation is that California objects to land owned within her borders by Orientals. The fundamental principle of the Democratic Party is that the States shall exercise every right in the determination of their domestic policies which they may properly exercise within the Constitution of the United States. To the United States is reserved the treaty-making power establishing the relation of the nation as a whole with friendly nations. California should not ask, and I am sure does not ask, for any procedure in the Oriental settlement problem which cannot be accommodated to the general policy of the Government in harmoniously working out such agreements as must be made with friendly nations. At the same time, if California does not desire her lands to come into the possession of Orientals, she may expect, in consequence with the established Democratic principle, the genuine co-operation of the National Government in the working out of a plan whereby she excludes the Oriental settler. There is nothing evasive about this. It constitutes a flat offer of co-operation in any decent settlement of this question."

Praises Johnson's Progressivism.

At Sacramento, where Governor Cox addressed a great meeting at noon, he praised Johnson for his fight for progress in government and expressed wonder that Senator Johnson could now be supporting a candidate who was nominated by the very men Colonel Roosevelt and Johnson fought in 1912. Governor Cox said:

"I am very pleased to be in the home city of Senator Hiram W. Johnson. He and I do not agree on international policies, but I respect the man for his candor. His words tell you plainly his mental attitude and he speaks without ambiguity or hypocrisy. On many questions we possess a common view, that of the modern progressive.

"If you will compare his progressive achievements as Governor of California with what has been done in Ohio, you will find the same underlying principles of progress. I have looked with admiration upon the fight which he has made throughout the years against reaction. He fought it with Roosevelt and he continued consistently the contest which began in 1912, through the primaries and convention of 1920 just as Roosevelt would have done had he lived.

"As an Ohioan, I give to you the assurance that the observation made by a distinguished citizen of our State to the effect that Hiram Johnson was a blackguard and unfit to associate with decent people is not the view of our people. I go further and make the statement that if Hiram Johnson had been a candidate before the Republican primaries in Ohio this year he would have carried them.

"The best guarantee of the future in this country will be the prevalence of progressive principles in the policies of the leading political parties, but I am convinced that if the reactionary Senatorial oligarchy gains control of the Government in the campaign, it will so manipulate the power of patronage that the progressive Republicans will either be compelled to join another party or form one of their own. Inclining naturally to the idealism of Lincoln and Roosevelt, it will be compelled to surrender the banner to the official representatives of big business. Senator Harding himself said that if the progressives of 1912 came back to the party they would have to come on 'hands and knees.'

Says 1920 Parallels 1912.

"Let me recall to your minds a parallel between the campaigns of 1912 and 1920. Eight years ago Colonel Roosevelt charged that the nomination was adopted by reactionary forces, both within and without official circles, in defiance of the will of the rank and file as expressed in the preferential primary. In 1920 precisely the same thing was done and Senator Johnson was humiliated as was Colonel Roosevelt in 1912. To his neighbors, when he returned home from the Chicago convention this year, he expressed no bitterness and said plainly that he would rather come back to his home State defeated than to have been nominated in the room of a Chicago hotel by representatives of big business. His further observation was:

"'A few men have set at naught for the time being the American primary system.'

"It is true, and it would be futile to deny it, that there are many Crames, Smoots and representatives of big business who arrogate to themselves the right of selection of candidates, notwithstanding what may have been decreed by the people themselves. The sneers of these gentlemen for the expression of the people have never been concealed and their contempt for the mandate of the rank and file of the party they have ever expressed.

"I am unable to see by what process of reasoning the political party which has given to Boss Barnes of New York a distinct status of leadership in this campaign can expect the progressive friends of Theodore Roosevelt and Hiram Johnson to give it support. Barnes was the captain of the pirate ship. In the language of Roosevelt, he was the connecting link between crooked business and crooked politics. Doubtless, the return to Barnes is another evidence of going back to normalcy.

"Never were so many obligations to designing interests being assumed by the party of reaction as in this campaign. Under the belief that disturbed conditions following the war make political victory certain, methods are followed unblushingly and without concealment.

"In this great Western country, where I have been now for two weeks, I find many evidences of resentment. I am convinced that the currents of independent and progressive thought will be running so high by November that unholy enterprises will have been completely engulfed."

Discussing the prosperity which has come to the masses of the people during the last eight years Governor Cox said:

"I make the statement that I am the only Presidential candidate in all the history of America who ever passed from the salt water of the Atlantic to the salt water of the Pacific without seeing a tramp anywhere in this country. Never before has prosperity been so widely distributed. Never before has it reached every class in America."

RAPS FRANKLIN ROOSEVELT.

"Does Not Have the Brand of Our Family," Says Theodore.

SHERIDAN, Wyo., Sept. 16.—Lieut. Col. Theodore Roosevelt and Raymond Robins, addressing two large audiences here today, denounced the League of Nations as "the Wilson League" and attacked Cox's pre-war attitude as they alleged it was reflected in the Democratic nominee's newspaper.

Roosevelt, addressing a troop of Rough Riders who met him at the station, and referring to Franklin D. Roosevelt, Democratic Vice Presidential nominee, said:

"He is a maverick—he does not have the brand of our family."

A large crowd met the speakers at the train and escorted them through the streets to the hall where they spoke.

Have a solution of Lysol Disinfectant put in cuspidors, toilet-rooms, closets, and in all dark corners.

Lysol Disinfectant should be used frequently at home, too. Ask your wife.

A 50c bottle makes five gallons of powerful disinfectant; a 25c bottle makes two gallons.

There is but one genuine Lysol Disinfectant—made, bottled, signed, and sealed by Lehn & Fink, Inc.

Lysol Toilet Soap
25c a Cake
Contains the necessary proportion of the antiseptic ingredients of Lysol Disinfectant to protect the health of the skin. It is also refreshingly soothing, healing, and helpful for improving the skin. Ask your dealer. If he hasn't it, ask him to order it for you.

Lysol Shaving Cream
in Tubes
Contains the necessary proportion of the antiseptic ingredients of Lysol Disinfectant to render the razor, strop, cup, and shaving-brush aseptically clean, guard tiny cuts from infection, and give an antiseptic shave. If your dealer hasn't it, ask him to order a supply for you.

Exide
BATTERIES

When the Great Bridge Moves

At a touch of the hand the great cantilever lifts or the drawbridge swings so your ship may pass. The hand moves a switch, and the current from an Exide Battery sets in motion the motor that does the work. So also in railway signals, the Exide Battery says the word that speeds your train in safety.

From lighting farms and starting automobiles to propelling submarines and firing our big naval guns, Exide Batteries play their vital and unfailing part in peace and war.

There is an Exide Battery made for every purpose, and into each Exide is built the experience of the oldest and largest manufacturers of storage batteries in the world.

TO PUT DOWN TERRORISTS.

Granting, as apparently we must, that the wreck and death wrought in Wall Street were planned, the purpose is fairly obvious. There may have been a hope to kill certain individuals. But that would be only incidental to the main intent, which would be, by letting loose terrible destruction at the very centre of great finance, to strike terror into the heart of a society and Government organized as are the American. The details of the plot may never be uncovered. The miscreants responsible may go unwhipped of justice. But, if we rule out accident, as it seems that we are bound to do, the most reasonable theory of the explosion is that it was intended as a terrorizing demonstration. It is not the first. It surely will not be the last. In what spirit and by what means are we to face and overcome these stealthy and lethal attempts to overthrow the established order by deeds of violence and horror?

First of all, there must be no yielding to panic fear. That would be to make the assassins believe that they had half succeeded. They are to intimidate. The community must show that it is not to be intimidated. Of course, there are great and constant risks to be run. More bombs may be exploded. Other lives may be taken. But these are only hazards of a war which the enemies of society have chosen to declare, and must be faced calmly by those who are ready to defend law and the right of the individual to the fruits of his toil, and, if necessary, to die in that defense. There must be no blenching, no showing of the white feather, in the presence of the terrorists. By keeping cool and firm we begin their defeat.

Next comes the duty to oppose anarchistic force with the greater force of organized society. These callous and cowardly murderers must be made to feel that every resource of civilization will be employed against them. They will be hunted down in their lairs like wild animals. Every device and stratagem of detection will be put in operation against them. Their confederates and accomplices will be swept into the net of the public prosecutor. They will live in daily fear of betrayal and punishment. They will be made to know that the hand of every honest man is against them. So that, in the end, the greater terror will be their own. They will experience the dread of the law and the darker dread of condemnation by the universal judgment and conscience of mankind.

Society is not powerless against these plotters of assassination. Its resources are far greater than theirs. This is, of course, true of its physical resources. These should be made ready and utilized with every possible forethought and skill. Against armed enemies within, the State must be fully armed. But it is in mental and spiritual resources that society is infinitely superior to anarchy. For the display of these, a disaster and a menace like the present call in a way to stir the blood. We can resist terrorists with the sword of justice in our hands, but we can also resist them by letting them see that we have minds and hearts beyond being driven from our convictions or our serenity by no matter what form of peril or death.

SOME TRIVIAL MATTERS.

The Paris correspondent of The Tribune reports that the Council of the League, in its meeting there on Thursday, "registered a number of "acts which were either pure for-"malities or of little importance." Among them was the report of a committee of jurists on the question of the Aland Islands. Finland and Sweden were bitterly at odds on this question, and there has been at least some danger of war—war between two highly cultured nations, near neighbors, which ought to be friends. The League is settling this dispute for them, and will probably put an end to a controversy which might have had serious consequences.

Poland "went through the form," as the correspondent remarks, of appealing to the League in her dispute with Lithuania; but he assures us that this means nothing, since the question has been settled by private agreement. Perhaps it has, but Polish and Lithuanian troops along the border do not seem to know it. The Council also discussed the question of immigration between Bulgaria and Greece. This is an important part of the whole Balkan question. Embittered hatred between neighboring races is at the heart of it, and the fact that every acquisition by any of them of border territory means the annexation of a considerable minority of another race has kept that hatred alive. The policy of reciprocal migration which VENIZELOS attempted to put into effect after the war of 1913 looks toward making the ethnographic and political frontiers coincide. If that can be done, the chances of Balkan peace will be materially increased.

These may be matters of little importance, but they all promise to remove long-standing dissensions which are likely to grow into wars; and little wars have an inconvenient habit now and then of growing into great ones. A man from Mars might say that the League was beginning fairly well." Yet to our Republican friends the League is an impotent and farcical organization which is unable to exact respect from the weakest of nations; although if America came into it our sovereignty and independence would be destroyed at once by its powerful assaults. It is at once a creation of the President which he has forced upon our unwilling but loyal European allies, and a conspiracy of the wicked Europeans into which the gullible President has been entrapped. Any and all of these things may be said and are said daily of the present League, but none of them can be said of what The Tribune calls the Harding League. Nothing can be predicated of what does not exist.

THE VENTI SETTEMBRE.

Italy will celebrate on Monday the fiftieth anniversary of the entry of the troops into the Eternal City, crowning the tireless struggle for unification and giving the nation its natural capital on the banks of the Tiber. The world will share in this celebration, as well as in the deep sympathy felt for the devastated hill towns of Tuscany. But however the celebration may commemorate the long line of glorious deeds, which led later to the Alpine-flung battle line in the great war, serious thought must be given to present national exigencies which, unless promptly met by the courage of the past, are certain to lead to a disastrous future.

That they will be thus met there is little doubt—if analogy counts for anything. A people which was betrayed at Villafranca, suffered defeat at Novara, Custozza, Lissa, almost annihilation at Caporetto, and yet achieved the miracle of Vittorio Veneto, is in slight danger of perishing. Nor is it conceivable that the allurements of an industrial Utopia so seductively offered by the emissaries of chaos, even amid disappointment, want and mourning, can prove, in the end, compelling to Italians. To be sure, the Government seems to have abdicated at least a vital part of its prerogative—seems to have taken the first step on the way which usually leads to destruction. However, there is solace in the fact that, after the death of the great CAVOUR, the Government under the dictatorship of RATTAZZI, in 1862, took a similar first step when it similarly announced itself as neutral in the struggle between the Camorra and the authorities of Naples, and similarly condoned the crimes perpetrated by that powerful criminal organization. Yet Italy and the Constitution of 1848 survived.

The fading vision of CAVOUR beheld in the Third Italy a sort of emotional England, with its dynasty, its Senate and its Chamber feverishly working to make up for the lost centuries of national life with fortitude and with patience. Circumstances very nearly turned it into a monstrous Naples. The forces, however, which saved it then can be counted upon to save it again. The great, indomitable middle class, which has so often brought both Government and insurgents to their senses, has shown no sign of abdicating. Its misguided children may be with D'ANNUNZIO, but it can hardly forget that its fathers were with GARIBALDI and his Thousand. It will not permit the great work of those fathers, led by VICTOR EMMANUEL, CAVOUR, MAZZINI, GARIBALDI, to crumble and fall, or to be suddenly overthrown by its misguided compatriots inspired by foreign demagogues. GIOLITTI may pass the way of RATTAZZI, but the institution which they would have betrayed will survive.

So the fiftieth anniversary of the Twentieth of September, with its glorious memories, may arouse a new spirit in Italy. There may still ring in the ear the ominous judgment of MAZZINI, "Too quickly and too easily was Italy made," with its still pertinent application to the Irredenta conquests of the great war; but, "if the "virtues of the past survive their for-"mer possessors," as wrote, in 1898, that good, true friend of Italy, W. J. STILLMAN, "the end may yet be well." "Italy will do it herself—Italia farà da sè!" should be a more potent cry today in the Quadrilateral than it was when the Austrians were being hurled from its fortresses.

READY IN THE EMERGENCY.

The horror of the tragedy in the Wall Street district was relieved by more than one act of presence of mind and timely initiative. A salient example was the quick decision of President WILLIAM H. REMICK of the Stock Exchange to assume the responsibility of suspending its activities without consulting the Governors. When the tremendous explosion came many wills were paralyzed, but the emergency found him ready. One day of trading is like another to the members, and habit breeds assurance that nothing can interrupt the course of business. The hazards of Wall Street are never supposed to be physical. Like a bolt out of a clear sky came the catastrophe on Thursday. One instant men were shouting out bids and recording contracts in the robust tumult that characterizes the procedure of the Exchange, and in the next instant they seemed to be threatened with sudden death. The building was rocking, the glass dome had been shattered, and a deafening roar as of an earthquake or the blowing up of a great magazine made men blanch as they looked into one another's eyes. For all they knew the end of all things might have come.

At this nerve-shaking moment President REMICK looked over the throng of wonder-struck and alarmed brokers, who not unnaturally were on the verge of panic, and he was heard to say quietly, "I think it is time to ring the gong." Immediately ascending to the rostrum, he sounded the gong, as if what he was doing was in the regular course of business. The confusion on the floor stopped at once, and everybody was reassured by the calm face of the man who had not lost control of himself and had realized that something unprecedented in the life of the Exchange had happened, that there was only one thing to do. His action was approved forthwith. A moment of hesitation, the slightest yielding to the excitement and apprehension on the floor, and there might have been such a panic as the Stock Exchange had never known in its history. REMICK was the man for the emergency who is always found, or finds himself.

KINGS IN SWITZERLAND.

The right of asylum for political refugees has been highly valued in the past, and England and Switzerland have been proud of the fact that all political offenders from abroad were safe on their soil. But lately political offenders have been displaying the painful ingratitude of the serpent warmed in the bosom. Revolutionary propaganda fomented in Switzerland against other countries has now and then tried its hand against Switzerland itself; and dispatches from Geneva report that the Swiss authorities are becoming a little disturbed over the activities of refugees of another kind.

CHARLES HAPSBURG and CONSTANTINE of Greece are the most notable exiles now on Swiss soil. Both have lately been displaying unwonted affluence; CONSTANTINE is said to have been spending a good deal of money on professional propagandists and agitators, and Magyar royalists, with some Austrians, have been visiting CHARLES with increasing frequency. The Swiss are beginning to fear that the multitude of spies and secret agents from all nations which infested Swiss territory during the war will presently return.

America is not free from these influences; among Magyars here there are a good many who display royalist sympathies, and the restoration of the dynasty, as a prelude or a consequence of a nationalistic war against the late subjects of Hungary, would please many of those Magyars who during the war liked to represent Hungary as an oppressed nation. The recent visit of Mr. CHARLES HUSZAR was happily a brief one, for the suspicion that that gentleman's interests were not wholly in raising money for the Red Cross was widespread among the neighbors of Hungary who were on our side in the war. Propagandists of CONSTANTINE, however, are still going up and down the country endeavoring to turn the Greek population of America against the man who has done more for Greece than any statesman since THEMISTOCLES. The Greek general elections come on Nov. 7; if the Greeks are tired of hearing VENIZELOS called "the Just," we shall know it then. But apparently the partisans of CONSTANTINE have less confidence in the elections than in intrigue.

MR. DESCHANEL'S RESIGNATION.

In February Mr. PAUL DESCHANEL came to the highest honor of a brilliant career. While his election was due to a combination of the radicals and various old adversaries and enemies of Mr. CLEMENCEAU and was a disappointment to the admirers in many countries of that dauntless veteran, in another sense it was a tribute to the latter. Many politicians felt that he was too strong a character to occupy the dignified, but essentially decorative, post of President of the French Republic. Mr. DESCHANEL himself has favored the direct election of the President by the people. The makers of the French Constitution, however, were afraid of the example of 1848. They didn't want a too powerful President. That official, in fact, exercises no sole power. The messages and the decrees he issues must be countersigned by a Minister. He has not veto power. His principal function is to "preside over national solemnities."

That is, he lays cornerstones, unveils statues, represents the State at a thousand public shows and functions. Theoretically he may be described as a constitutional sovereign without sovereignty, a respected symbol and figurehead. In thirty-five years of public life Mr. DESCHANEL had shown eminent qualities. His political views might be described as moderate-liberal or conservative-progressive. He held his own in debate even against such an orator as JAURES. His own oratory was of the classic type. He was a writer of distinction, an ornament of the Academy. Somewhat after the manner of Mr. GLADSTONE, he could make even tariff discussions and the budget animated and interesting, gild them with rhetoric, fill them with charm.

He presided with grace, tact, good temper and firmness over the often tempestuous proceedings of the House of Deputies. Handsome, a man of the world, a man of fashion and social experience, he seemed peculiarly suited to the place which his health now compels him to relinquish. Ever since May it has been doubtful if he would ever be able to resume his duties. The celebration of the National Fête, already twice postponed on account of his illness, and now set for Nov. 11, may have influenced the time of his resignation. The French Constitution does not provide for a Vice President.

There will be general regret that this accomplished and able statesman should have been incapacitated almost at the beginning of the term which he was most fit to fill with satisfaction to the French people and with honor to himself.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

A Mistaken Concept of Liberty.

GILBERT K. CHESTERTON, who has a more than Hibernian impulse to take part in any quarrel he sees or hears, has been compelled, of course, to enter the present war between the old and the young—a war which in England is marked by even more of bitterness than here. He contributes, therefore, a column of characteristic Chestertonian humor and wisdom to The Morning Post of London, taking as text the recent angry complaint of a British father in the same paper that his young daughter addresses him as "Old Bean."

Mr. CHESTERTON begins by lamenting that the discussion of the respect with which age thinks, and youth does not think, it and its standards of propriety should be treated threatens to degenerate into a mere exchange of accusation and epithet, with the young all on one side and the old all on the other. That, as he says, is no way to argue any question. Such a division can be based on no real examination or understanding of the issue, and the only way, he also says, in which a conclusion can be reached is for the disputants to forget their own ages and content themselves with the application of cold logic to hard facts.

That is more easily said than done, but Mr. CHESTERTON himself manages to do it fairly well. Instead of condemning, offhand, the daughter who calls her father "Old Bean," he gravely hunts for her motive, and finds it, he thinks, in a vague movement of her mind which may be described as a desire for "liberty." She feels that the oftener she uses the fearful and forbidden name, and the more widely she applies it, the freer she is. Naturally enough, Mr. CHESTERTON regards this as an absurd conception of liberty, and his verdict is for the father and against the daughter.

Distinctions Should Be Observed.

Proceeding in somewhat more serious strain, Mr. CHESTERTON assures the youth of our day that, while life's most precious virtue at any age is liberty, the most vital virtue of liberty is variety, by which he means realization that a human being's relation to humanity is not one, but many. The person really free discriminates, even in the expression of the same emotion, whether it be love or hate, and what the Roman poets called "piety," Mr. CHESTERTON says, "is a difference of tone toward those things which belong to our own origins, which are a part of the past, still sensitive, and which are often already dignified with the shadow of death."

He regards it as a distinct impoverishment of life to make converse between the young and old exactly like that between two who are both young, and to do so, he insists, is to "leave out a reality that has claimed its right to live in a thousand songs and monuments." It is not comradeship or common sense to put youth and age on a level, for the conditions forbid the usual activities of comradeship, and what the custom of all mankind proves to be not common is not common sense.

Whether, if Mr. CHESTERTON were not now somewhat older than he was when somewhat younger, he would have seen this side of the discussion so clearly—and this side only—that is an interesting question, but none the less the points he makes against the daughter who calls her father "Old Bean" are worthy of consideration, even by the youngest of daughters and of sons.

Somebody Cooked for Them.

General FAYOLLE of the French Army could have meant nothing unkind when he said that the American soldiers in France were "totally deficient" in one branch of the military service, and that one of the most important in military science. He had just credited our men with being as good soldiers as the best that took part in the great war, and of their courage, after calling it magnificent, he said that its one imperfection was an occasional tendency toward recklessness. The important lack was the ability to cook!

Now it is indubitable that culinary skill may be, and therefore is, a valuable possession for anybody, and it is so likely to be useful for any soldier that evidently it is a good thing for him to have. But while the chances are that few of our men, in the ranks or commissioned, were thus equipped, yet it was common—and envious—knowledge in Europe that our army was better fed than any of the others. There were reasons for that, of course, which it would not become an American commentator to emphasize, but the excellence of the American ration remains a fact, and that excellence implies the existence of cooks fairly competent, serving the American forces in large numbers, both at home and in the field.

Perhaps General FAYOLLE meant merely that the French soldier, when the regular food supply failed or was delayed, was better at finding and preparing something to eat unaided than the American. If so, the difference is easily explicable, and it is one of training, not of race.

This Horse May Solve The Mystery.

It is to be assumed that, though not much has been said or written about the horse killed in Wall Street by the great explosion, the police and other investigators of the horrible crime there committed fully realize the possibility of finding in the dead animal a clue leading straight to the perpetrators of the atrocity.

Among the uncertainties of the case there shines out more than a probability that this animal drew the wagon that carried the explosive used. But horses, unlike most other beasts except dogs, are always easily identified by those who handle them, and always there are half a dozen or more men who have what may be called an intimate knowledge of a given horse's peculiarities of form, color and general appearance.

To find out whose horse this was, or who had hired him on the fatal day, would be going far toward clearing up the mystery of the disaster. Fortunately the animal's body was not so mutilated as to make identification impossible.

Cost of Producing Gold.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

American producers of gold, through the economist of the American Mining Congress, H. N. Lawrie, appeal for "constructive aid" for the industry, to come, we may suppose, from Congress. Their claim is that gold cannot be produced at a profit at many locations hitherto made use of in this country; that production has been almost cut in half; that many mines must close down; that public confidence in the nation's finances will be impaired if the normal output is not recommended and continued.

Their position and claims are understandable, but it is plain nothing should be done at public expense to subsidize this special industry. A shrinkage in gold production appears to be exactly what is needed to help bring back the old level of commodity prices. Indeed, the economist of the Chase National Bank of New York, in his recently published essay on the fallacy of "the stabilized dollar," winds up by suggesting that if gold continues to have low purchasing power it will probably be best for the United States and Great Britain to agree to regulate or limit the output of gold.

The gold-producing industry has what the producers of many other commodities would very much like to have—a certain market at a certain price. They are free to produce all they can; their product is not perishable; it has the greatest solability of any of the products of labor. Where gold can be produced easily and at a great profit, mines are valuable in proportion. Where it can be obtained with difficulty and with doubtful profit, mines or mining locations are of little value. The effect of increasing costs of production leads not only to the closing down of operations at the poorer locations, but also to a realignment of mine values. As a matter of fact, producers of gold working under leases may be about as well off if production costs are high as if they are low, since the tendency must be to have less of their product absorbed by location value. As mine owners they may have to stand a loss, as mine workers it may be a matter of indifference to them if production costs go up.

Landowners who control gold-producing territory are very well off. Congress should turn a deaf ear to all their appeals for financial assistance in maintaining the value of their properties. This item is the really important one behind the propaganda for "constructive aid" to the gold-mining industry. It is not industry at all which needs help; it is special privilege in one of its forms.

GEORGE WHITE.
Long Branch, N. J., Aug. 25, 1920.

Would Hear from Mr. Wilson.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The President and Governor Cox are in accord on the Democratic platform and in particular on the treaty and the League. For that reason it is about time that President Wilson take up some of the work of the campaign. We know that he is physically unable to conduct a personal tour, but, thank God, he is as always mentally able to wield a forceful pen. Let us hear from President Wilson. The Republicans are secretly rejoicing in his long silence, and should he start to address himself to the American public they would soon be kept on the run to defend themselves.

Our vision is clouded. We need the light. Let us taste once more those hopes, visions, or whatever you wish to call them, which roused me and many others like me to work with unstinted zeal for peace, world peace, for the war which was to end war. Only Wilson can do this. He alone can bring that vision.

PHELIP PURCELL.
New York, Sept. 13, 1920.

Italians and Slavs of Fiume.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As you proved to be impartial on the Fiume dispute, no doubt you will print this answer to the remarks of Mr. Dion Markanovich-Klajin.

I am informed that among the Croats some intelligent men like Zrinski, Frankopan and Eugene Kvaternik have been against the Hapsburgs and suffered the death penalty. We have a few Italian traitors, born in Fiume, but I repeat the great majority are pure Italian. If some Italians carry Slav names this does not prove that their feelings should not be for Italy; they were born in Fiume and naturally they love Italy.

Bonus Payments in Rhode Island.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

An article which was printed in THE NEW YORK TIMES, Sunday, Sept. 5, 1920, in connection with the plans for soldiers' bonuses in various States, gives the information that the voters of Rhode Island have not yet approved the cash bonus act.

Permit me to state that the State of Rhode Island began to pay her veterans a bonus of $100 each on May 1, 1920, and up to date has paid out over $1,750,000.

Opening of the Ship's Bar.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

If anybody has any doubts of the unpopularity of prohibition let him take an ocean trip one of these fine Fall days, and attend the opening of the bar aboard after the statutory three-mile limit has been passed.

I watched the issue aboard this good ship, and I assure you that when the fourth sea mile was passed "no throat was found dry." The bartenders worked on time the first day, and the waiters collapsed from overwork.

ALBANIA'S COMPLAINTS.

Continued Advance of Serbian Troops Is Charged.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

With reference to the denials made to my statements by the Minister of the Kingdom of the Serbs, Croats and Slovenes, published in today's issue of the THE NEW YORK TIMES, I desire to emphasize that the facts adduced as proof by Dr. Grouitch to the effect that "the Serb-Croat-Slovene troops occupy the line of demarkation between the Serb-Croat-Slovene State and Albania with the consent of the Allied and Associated Powers" are more of the nature of assertions than of substantial facts, since one of the allied powers, Italy, has clearly stated its position by declaring that it has never given any such consent, and that it does not know that any of the other Allied and Associated Powers have ever given any such consent.

The occupation of the Fort of Tarabosh by Serbian troops was simply an arbitrary action on their part. The occupation took place after the allied commander, General du Fourtou, turned the province of Scutari over to the native Albanian population, and the Serbians took advantage of the departure of the allied troops by taking possession of the fort, for fear that the Italians, who were at that time in Albania, might have expanded into that region. Albania has never recognized or acquiesced in such a spoliation.

Furthermore, the contention of the Minister of the Kingdom of the Serbs, Croats and Slovenes that the Serb-Croat-Slovene troops will withdraw from the line of demarkation at the request of the Powers, and that in the meantime they will not advance a step further, is, unfortunately, not borne out by the more recent developments. I am officially informed by my Government that the Serbian troops have reached the region of Mati, half way between the line of demarkation and the Albanian coast, destroying in their passage forty Albanian villages. The Albanian Government has already notified the Powers regarding this Serbian aggression and asked the intervention of the President of the United States for the purpose of averting imminent disasters. Moreover, the Albanian Government has demanded that the Belgrade Government show proof of its sincerity by refraining from aggression and from intriguing against the Tirana Government in the form of a recognition of the independence and territorial integrity of the Government of Albania.

Regarding my presumed statement that "now is the time for the fulfillment of the promises made by the Serbians in regard to the liberation of Ipek, Prisrend and Djakovo," I fear that Dr. Grouitch has gathered a very wrong impression. The fulfillment of such promises was expected not by my Government or by myself, but by the Albanian populations of Ipek, Prisrend and Djakovo, whose hopes for liberation and union with Albania were aroused by the Serbians themselves, in the latter's endeavor to stir the Albanians in the struggle against Italy by the spread of reports that, if the Italians were driven out of Albania, Serbia would liberate those provinces. I concluded my statement then by saying that when the populations concerned realized that no change was going to be made in their fate they took up the fight for themselves, and thus they caused the first friction between Albania and Serbia. This friction took the form of Serbian aggression against Albanian territories, the Serbians pretending that the Albanian Government was stirring revolt among the unwilling subjects of Serbia.

C. A. CHEKREZI,
Commissioner of Albania to the U. S.,
Washington, Sept. 14, 1920.

His Idea of Freedom.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The hopelessly perverted view of life cherished by the abnormal minds of revolutionary partisans from foreign lands is well represented by the following incident. It happened in New York within the last week. An acquaintance of mine sent for a plumber to make some trifling repairs. The man who appeared was an alien, barely able to express himself in the English language. While doing his work he favored the woman employer with a harangue on the cruel capitalists, the lack of liberty, the necessity of overturning the United States Government immediately and the oppression of the "peepul" in general. The usual rant. By way of proof he told the following tale: "A friend of mine was working the other day in the cellar of one of these criminal millionaires. There was a wine cellar, and he decided that he would like a drink before going home. The wine cellar was locked. So my friend decided to take the door off its hinges. No sooner had he loosened one hinge than a burglar alarm rang, the servants rushed down and held him until the police came. The police came, arrested him and threw him into prison, where he still remains. And you call this a land of freedom—of freedom!" with intense scorn. My acquaintance must have been glad that she had stood by while her work was being done. But she was too dazed to ask him why he had abandoned his native paradise, where, no doubt, there were no hinges, locks—possibly no doors—for such a purgatory as the United States.

THE AERIAL MAIL.

Through the swamps and the deserts, the canyons and creeks
And forests where lurked in the shade
The moccasined brave, with his war bonnet on,
And blood on his tomahawk blade,
Disputing the trail with the panther and wolf,
In sunshine and rain, and the stress
Of the snow and the blow, and at 40 below,
Went the venturesome pony express.

Ere the whistle and roar of the engine awoke
The silence of mountain and stream,
When the auto was only a nebulous thought,
And the airplane merely a dream,
To the lonely log cabin and gold seeker's camp,
The leaders all lathered with foam
And dusty and panting, the stage clattered in
With letters and papers from home.

A banner of smoke and a feather of steam,
A clanking of piston and wheel,
And the wilderness shook to the thunderous flight
Of the train on its highway of steel.
The clang of its bell and the shriek from its throat
Sent clamorous echoes afar
As it flashed by the depots and crossings and tanks,
With its shiny new Post Office car.

There's a speck in the sky and a drone on the wind,
A sound as of harpstrings and drums,
With its struts and its wires humming sweetly in tune,
In the path of the eagles it comes,
A man-made and marvelous bird of the air,
The century's glory and boast,
The plane that through cloudland triumphantly bears
Aerial mail to the Coast.

C. W. WATSON WARNS OUR CAPITALISTS

Ex-Senator, President of Coal Company, Says Labor's Radical Trend Must Be Guided.

THINKS COX COULD DO IT

But That Harding's Election Would Increase Discontent of Working People.

By WILLIAM H. CRAWFORD.

Former Senator Clarence W. Watson of West Virginia, President of the Consolidated Coal Company and one of the largest employers of labor in America, believes that we will have a social revolution in this country if the American capitalist does not heed the rumbling of discontent so prevalent among the laboring classes and attempt to right whatever injustices exist.

He believes that the election of Harding and the return to reaction will set off the spark of revolt, but that the election of Cox will tend to allay it. He points to the explosion in Wall Street as an evidence of this discontent, and urges that America give heed to these signs.

"I believe that all lawlessness should be put down with an iron hand," said Mr. Watson yesterday. "America must be protected from her Red enemies. But she must also, by her treatment and by the selection of officers who will be fair to labor, remove from the power of the anarchists any vestige of argument to aid them in influencing the minds of our peaceful labor into believing that they will not have justice meted out to them, save by ruthlessly taking the power into their own hands.

"The most important political question before the American people today is Reaction vs. Progressivism. Without wishing to be sensational, I say with all sincerity that I believe the spirit of unrest, the element of discontent, is so broadcast in America that if the business interests and the conservative element are foolish enough to try to return to the reactionary days we will have an industrial revolution. I believe that it will follow if Harding is elected. The people of America love her, love her with a wonderful devotion, but they most strenuously object to being manipulated for profit by the standpat, reactionary element.

Roused by High Cost of Living.

"Among other things the high cost of living has aroused the people. The workingman's rent has gone up from $25 and $30 per month to $50 and $75. Shoes that used to cost $3.50 are now $10. Sugar has more than doubled in price. All other necessities have jumped in the same proportion, and the people blame capitalistic control for their increased burdens. The spirit of rebellion against the ruling classes is widespread, and the people are in no humor to turn the Government over to a party that represents those interests nor to a man whose record plainly shows where he stands on the labor question.

"I am as much opposed to radicalism as any man in America, but I do not think that the way to cure the evil is to try to cram reaction down the people's throat. I have weighed both Cox and Harding carefully, not from a partisan standpoint, for I am an American before I am a Democrat. I have weighed them purely from a business and patriotic standpoint, and I find Cox, if elected, will have a tendency to allay this discontent, and that Harding's election will greatly increase it.

"There is a reason for the unrest that is spread throughout the world, and that at present threatens America. So much smoke does not arise where there is no fire. It behooves us to remove the cause, not to add to the flames, which, in my opinion, will turn into a conflagration unless we do.

"I believe that Cox is on the right track to overcome this threatened danger to our Government. His record shows that he is thoroughly democratic, that he is neither a reactionary nor a radical, that he believes in law and its enforcement, but that he also believes in justice—justice to all, the rich and the poor alike, the employer and employe. He knows that the most perfect Government in the world is a democracy. A Government where the people rule—this means all the people—a Government where every man's rights are respected and every man's interests guarded.

"It is important, nay imperative, that they all be emphasized. Class government is not an ideal government, is not the government that we love and adore. Any deviation from the broad principle of equal rights, equal justice, equal political power, is destructive to democracy. We want no class rule in America, neither by the reactionary element nor by the masses. Bolshevism and Communism and the allied monstrous isms would destroy our government, our safety and our sacred institutions. We believe in property, in the right of a man to accumulate by frugality, thriftiness or good judgment whatever he can, and that he should be assured in its possession, as he is assured by the Constitution of the United States.

"We want no Lenins and Trotzkys in America, who would destroy with ruthless hands the very foundations of our liberties. These things will come, unless we recognize the progressive spirit of the age, the forward-looking movement of today, and go with it. The people are in no mood to return to complete capitalistic and reactionary control, and if they break away from it, they will go much further than their common sense, good judgment and patriotism would lead.

The People Inclined to Be Fair.

"The people are inclined to be fair. They recognize the serious strain through which world economics has passed; nay, is still passing, and are ready to make allowances for temporary injustices or hardships, provided they see an attempt is being made to correct them. Their patience, however, is growing threadbare, and if the capitalistic interests are so blind to portending events, so calloused to the demands of the people, so contemptuous of the trend of public opinion as to attempt to force the return of reaction, as Harding specifically said he intends to do, I fear the consequences.

"Cox has been Governor of Ohio for eight years. During that time he has made good on this very point. He has held an even balance between labor and capital. He has the confidence of both sides of the question. Labor is pleased with him, because of the laws he has put on the statue books for their protection. The true story of how poor, attacked miners of Pennsylvania crawled across the Ohio line for safety and protection, which Cox afforded them, will ring around the world, and will sink deep into the hearts of every laboring man. On the other hand, capital knows that Cox is not a radical, and will not countenance measures that are destructive of their rights, nor of property interests. Cox stands for democracy in its true sense, not devoted to the interests of any class of our people, but assuring to labor its rights, and to capital just protection for its investment.

"Harding has had no such experience in handling the delicate question of the just relationship between labor and capital. What we do know of his record is not assuring to the progressive sentiment of today. When he talked about dollar wheat in the Senate, which meant poverty to the worker and producer, and riches to the profiteering miller and middlemen, the people made up their minds what to expect of him. Labor distrusts and dislikes him.

"Take the coal miners for an example. Next to agriculture, coal is the most important industry in America. It employs many thousands of our people. Harding is particularly obnoxious to the miners, while Cox has their confidence. But Cox also has the confidence of the coal operators. I have talked to a great many of the far-seeing business men of America and they are almost unanimous in their conclusion that the time has come when the business interests must recognize the power and force of progressive sentiment.

"There are a great many important issues in the campaign, but the one that far transcends all others is the adjustment of disputes arising between labor and capital. It behooves us to elect a man who will be the most able to compose these differences.

"I may be painting a gloomy picture of the world's unrest; doubtless many will think that I am over-excited about the matter, but account must be taken of the vast increase in Europe of the radicalism which has overthrown Russia and which has undermined most of the Governments of Europe. When you listen to audible mutterings in America, when you observe the outspoken favor with which radicalism is being received in quarters from which you would least expect it, when you note the tremendous propaganda which the radicals are carrying on more or less openly; when you hear men giving up service to democracy and advocating Bolshevist doctrines, you must recognize that it is no longer an academic question, nor one which we can afford to neglect.

"America must determine the justice of labor's demands, and see that its wrongs are righted, and above all, must avoid contemptuously casting aside these demands and arrogantly returning to reaction.

"We must realize that this is the age of progressivism. The world has gone forward, the moving finger points to a new era—the new era of solidarity and the brotherhood of man. Woe to the man, party or Government which tries to oppose its advance. The only wise and sensible thing for America to do—what Cox would do if elected—is to curb the excesses incident to a mighty change of public sentiment, and lead the way along lines that are not destructive to property, liberty, freedom and democracy.

"I believe that Cox can more nearly accomplish this than can Harding, therefore I believe that the forward-looking men will support him regardless of party affiliations."

REV. DR. J. D. BURRELL NAMED

Appointed Metropolitan Secretary of Presbyterian New Era Movement.

The Executive Committee of the Presbyterian New Era Movement has appointed the Rev. Dr. Joseph Dunn Burrell as Secretary of its Metropolitan District. Dr. Burrell will have his office in the Presbyterian Building, 156 Fifth Avenue, and will have jurisdiction of the benevolences of all the Presbyterian churches in this city and its suburbs, Long Island and New Jersey.

Dr. Burrell was, for more than twenty-five years, pastor of the Classon Avenue Presbyterian Church, Brooklyn, one of the largest in that borough. In the New Era office he succeeds the Rev. Dr. Samuel Charles Black, now President of Washington and Jefferson College, Washington, Pa. Since Dr. Black resigned, more than a year ago, the Rev. Dr. J. Newton Armstrong, formerly of Blairstown, N. J., has been acting Secretary. Dr. Armstrong has been appointed Assistant Secretary.

Dr. Burrell is a younger brother of the Rev. Dr. David James Burrell, pastor of the Marble Collegiate Reformed Church, Fifth Avenue and Twenty-ninth Street. He is a Trustee of Union Theological Seminary, a member of the Presbyterian Board of Home Missions and has published numerous religious books. During the war he served in France as a Y. M. C. A. worker.

The New Era Movement is the agency of the Presbyterian Church for stimulating systematic benevolences in all the congregations.

LAND CRISIS IN SPAIN.

Serious Conditions Reported in Andalusia—Some Landlords Flee.

MADRID, Sept. 16.—Serious conditions in Andalusia and other sections of Spain, where tenants have been evicted by the proprietors of estates, are reported in newspapers here.

Both El Liberal and El Pais devote editorials to the subject of the redemption of land, which has been brought into prominence as a result of the dispute between the Duke of Wellington and his tenants regarding their leases.

"Country people," says El Liberal, "daily are becoming more excited under the influence of propaganda, and great landed proprietors are fleeing from regarding the outcome of the agitation which has broken the former submission of peasants. Some landlords who have seen the necessity of making agreements remain on their estates, while others have fled to the cities to escape trouble."

"The exactions imposed by great land owners on the tenants who made their soil productive by their own labor and by spending their savings upon it," declares El Pais, "are more unjust than

MISS ELIZABETH KING WEDS H. P. STOKES

Bridegroom's Brother, the Rev. Anson Phelps Stokes, Performs the Ceremony.

MISS BELVOIR A BRIDE

Wed to Dwight F. Faulker, Jr., by Bishop Burch in Cathedral of St. John the Divine.

The wedding of Miss Elizabeth Miner King, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Wolcott King of Hillside, L. I., and Harold Phelps Stokes, son of the late Anson Phelps Stokes and Mrs. Stokes of 9 East Sixty-fifth Street, took place yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock, in the Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Anson Phelps Stokes, Secretary of Yale University, a brother of the bridegroom, assisted by the Rev. Andrew Magin of the First Presbyterian Church of Jamaica.

The bride wore a gown of soft ivory satin with a satin train depending from the waist, and a veil of tulle which fell from a tight fitting cap of point lace. She carried a bouquet of bride's roses and lilies of the valley. Her father gave her in marriage.

Mrs. Harrison Blake Hodges was the matron of honor and the bride's only attendant. Allen T. Klotz of this city was the best man, and the ushers were Robert Burch of Cincinnati; Henry Howe, E. Farrar Bateson, and Dr. Francis Trudeau, all of whom were classmates of the bridegroom at Yale; class of '09; Horace Green, and William O. Scroggs.

Following the church ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bridegroom's mother in East Sixty-fifth Street.

After their honeymoon trip, Mr. and Mrs. Stokes will reside at 1,700 Sixteenth Street, Washington, D. C.

Faulker—Belvoir.

Miss Jeanne C. Belvoir, a niece of Mrs. M. V. Beach of 135 West Seventy-ninth Street, and Dwight F. Faulker, Jr., of Syracuse, N. Y., son of the Rev. Dr. Dwight F. Faulker of Boston, were married yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, Bishop Burch officiating.

Mrs. Beach gave her niece in marriage, and Miss Marguerite Faulker of Boston, a sister of the bridegroom, acted as maid of honor. The best man was Steele Du Bosque. A reception was held at Mrs. Beach's home.

BARONESS STERNBURG TO WED A. PAVENSTEDT

Widow of German Ambassador, Former Miss Langham, Engaged to Retired New York Banker.

Announcement was made yesterday of the engagement of Baroness Speck von Sternburg, widow of Baron von Sternburg, one time German Ambassador to the United States, to Adolf Pavenstedt, a retired banker of this city.

The announcement was made following the departure of the Baroness last Saturday for France, where the wedding is to take place. The ceremony will be performed at Acnchon, at the home of her youngest sister, who is the wife of the Admiral Count de Lafarjole of the French Navy.

Baroness von Sternburg was formerly Miss Lillian M. Langham of Louisville, Ky. She arrived in this country last December, coming on the same steamer with other titled American women, to rescue their fortunes taken by war. At the time of her arrival she was quoted as saying that she had come here to renounce her title, reclaim her citizenship and take legal measures to have her fortune restored. While this country was at war with Germany she lived with the Countess Faramond in Copenhagen, leaving all her jewels in Germany, and the expenses of her passage to her native country were met by her friends abroad.

Her husband was the German Ambassador here from July, 1903, until his death, which occurred on Aug. 23, 1908, at Heidelberg, during a two months' leave of absence. He was a native British subject born of German father and an English mother, but he became a German subject at the age of 18 for the purpose of volunteering for the Franco-German war, in which he served. Later he entered the German diplomatic service. He was at the German Legations at Peking and Serbia, and in 1898 was appointed First Secretary of the German Embassy at Washington, becoming Ambassador five years later. He was very popular in Washington at that time, with his American wife, who was noted for her beauty, and became a close friend of the late President Roosevlt.

Mr. Pavenstedt was the former head of the banking house of G. Amsinck & Co., and was an intimate friend of Count von Bernstorff. He was interned at Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., during the war.

EGERTON CASTLE DEAD.

English Novelist, Playwright and Newspaper Director Was 62.

LONDON, Sept. 17.—Egerton Castle, English author and newspaper director, died in London today.

Egerton Castle was a prolific writer of novels and plays, his first works making their appearance in the early eighties. Some of his plays, among them "The Pride of Jennico" and "The Bath Comedy," were produced in American theatres. His play "Desperate Remedies" was written especially for Richard Mansfield. His wife, Agnes Castle, collaborated on many of his novels.

Mr. Castle was Chairman of the company publishing the Liverpool Mercury, and since its amalgamation with the Daily Post, has been a director of the Liverpool Daily Post and Mercury and the Echo.

An expert swordsman, Mr. Castle, was captain of the British epee and sabre teams at the Olympic games in 1908. He was born in 1858.

MAYOR CARRIES HIS LUNCH.

Peters Joins the Crusade Against Boston Restaurants' High Prices.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Sept. 17.—Mayor Andrew J. Peters has joined the "Bring-Your-Lunch-from-Home Club" as a means of compelling Boston restaurant proprietors to reduce their prices, which have recently been generally advanced. The Mayor's wife each morning puts up his lunch, and the Mayor at noontime eats it at his desk in the City Hall.

"I think the idea of carrying a lunch from home an excellent idea," he said. "I do it myself quite often. The prices in Boston restaurants are outrageous. There was a time when you could get a good lunch at noontime for a reasonable sum, but now it is out of the question. You know I am not above carrying my lunch from home. Many people think I am wealthy, but I am not."

PAGEANT IN HONOR OF CONSTITUTION

De Wolf Hopper, as Washington, and William Riley Hatch, as Franklin, Among Players.

The 133d anniversary of the adoption of the Constitution was celebrated last night at Carnegie Hall, where a capacity audience gathered to hear addresses by ex-Supreme Court Justice Morgan J. O'Brien, Senator James W. Wadsworth and others, and to witness a historical pageant entitled "We, the People," in which many players well-known to Broadway participated. The program was arranged by the Constitutional League of America, which has for its object the spreading of a broader understanding of the Constitution throughout the country.

Former Justice O'Brien, head of the Constitutional League, presided and made the keynote address.

"There is no problem which can arise today," he said, "which cannot be solved under the provisions of our Constitution. There are some who think that something more than the Constitution is necessary, but they are wrong. There are many who have been led astray, and who think that perhaps some other form of government would be preferable to ours. I defy these people to examine our Constitution and to add to it one single clause which will in any way better it."

Copies of the Constitution, interlarded with brief explanatory paragraphs, were distributed to all who entered the hall.

Dr. Frank Crane urged that the germ of citizenship be implanted in children in the public schools, and referred to the public school teachers as "little kaisers." School children, he said, are taught autocracy instead of democracy. Bainbridge Colby, who was to have spoken, wired a congratulatory message from Washington, explaining that press of business prevented his presence. An address was made by Jerome A. Myers, National Director of the Constitutional League.

The earlier part of the evening was taken up by the pageant, which was compiled from the Madison Papers by Louis Allen Brown and Charles L. Withrow, and produced by Lewis J. Selznick, Ralph Ince, and William Stoermer. Motion pictures of the pageant were taken on Wednesday under Mr. Selznick's direction, and these will be distributed over the country in furtherance of the creed of the Constitutional League.

The pageant began and ended with an allegory, and between these reproduced the opening and closing scenes of the Constitutional Convention which formally adopted the Constitution on Sept. 17, 1787. It showed the arguments and turmoil which preceded the adoption, and the final signing by thirty-nine Deputies.

Among the players who took part in these scenes were De Wolf Hopper, as George Washington; William Riley Hatch, as Benjamin Franklin; Reginald Barlow, as Alexander Hamilton; Maclyn Arbuckle, as Robert Morris; Leo Carrillo, as Elbridge Gerry; Edwin Mordant, as Gouverneur Morris; William Davidson, W. H. Tooker, Richie Ling, Barney Fagan, Louis Cassavant, George Stewart Christie, Louis O'Connor, E. H. Roseman, Richard Carlyle, Bertram Marbourge, Richard Bartlett, and Walter Newman.

Ralph Ince made an address as Lincoln, and Brandon Tynan appeared as the allegorical figure of History. Actresses who participated in the allegory included Marjorie Rambeau, as Columbia; June Elvidge, Lucy Cotton, Zena Keefe, Ruth Jordan Baulsir, Pearl Shepard, Ethel Russell, Marie Mack, Jane Arnold, Marguerite Courtot, Laura Lyle, Sylvia Cassel, Portia Polla and Lucille Lee Stewart.

MASS FOR CARDINAL FARLEY

St. Patrick's Cathedral Crowded at Second Annual Service.

St. Patrick's Cathedral was filled yesterday at 10 o'clock when the second annual requiem mass was sung for the repose of the soul of Cardinal Farley. Archbishop Hayes presided and Mgr. Michael J. Lavelle, rector of the cathedral, delivered a eulogy of the Cardinal, who died at Mamaroneck, N. Y., two years ago yesterday.

The celebrant of the mass was the Rev. John H. Farley, a Jesuit, of Fordham University, a nephew of Cardinal Farley. The deacon was the Rev. Patrick N. Breslin, the sub-deacon the Rev. Richard O. Hughes, the archpriest Mgr. Joseph F. Mooney, vicar-general of the Archdiocese, and the deacons of honor to Archbishop Hayes Mgr. James J. Flood and Mgr. James H. McGean.

Among those present was the Right Rev. Thomas F. Hickey, bishop of Rochester, N. Y., who preached the funeral sermon of Cardinal Farley. Practically all the monsignori in the archdiocese were in the chancel. About one hundred other priests were present.

ARRIVES ON THE AQUITANIA

Liner Brings 2,873 Passengers—Mongolia, Rochambeau and New Rochelle Also Reach Port.

The Cunarder Aquitania arrived late yesterday afternoon from Cherbourg and Southampton with 2,873 passengers of all classes. The first cabin list of 723 passengers included a large number of notables.

Dr. Livingston Farrand, Chairman of the Central Committee of the American Red Cross, returned from a month in Paris, Geneva and London receiving reports from the various countries in Eastern Europe in which the Red Cross is active.

"General relief must be continued in Poland and Austria," Dr. Farrand said, "but the chief problem is the children of Europe. Red Cross estimates indicate at least 11,000,000 children in Europe now fatherless from war and who face the next few years without hope of adequate care unless outside assistance is given. Poland has at least 500,000 orphans, most of whom are living in camps for destitute refugees. In Czechoslovakia, Austria and Hungary there are at least 1,000,000 orphans, of whom 5,000 were found recently wandering like animals in the Puthonian Mountains.

In Jugoslavia there are 500,000 orphans, hundreds of whom were found living in the ruins of devastated villages, which had been deserted by the adult population. The picture is appalling, and the Red Cross proposes to use its machinery to acquaint the people with the facts. I am very glad to learn that the American Relief Association, under the leadership of Mr. Hoover, is planning to continue its work of feeding the children in the countries where there is likely to be a food shortage. The American Red Cross will also bear its share in the task of preventing the spread of typhus in Poland in the coming Winter, for another epidemic is feared."

Isaac Hershfield, a lawyer, of 99 Nassau Street, returned with Mrs. Hershfield after eighteen months work on the Joint Distribution Committee in the Main Distributing Relief in Poland. He was in Warsaw when the Bolshevist army surrounded the city and he paid a great tribute to the Poles, who, he said, used American methods to rouse their people to join the army in defense of the common foe.

J. P. Day, Jr., and B. P. Day, sons of James P. Day, the New York real estate operator, returned from a trip to Europe and were met at the pier by their father. Solomon R. Guggenheim and Miss B. J. Guggenheim and Isaac Guggenheim came back on the Aquitania from their annual Summer trip to Europe, which they have resumed since the war.

Frank A. Fahey, President of the Gillette Razor Company, was a passenger and said he had spent part of his time in Switzerland studying steel manufacturing in that country. Another passenger was Walter Crotch, Managing Director of Farrow's Bank, London, who has come here, he said, on banking business and also in connection with industrial development.

Other passengers were Mr. and Mrs. Bradley Martin, Marshall Field, Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Grace, Claud Hamilton, Dr. and Mrs. Alfred Hess, Mrs. Hildreth, Bishop George H. Kinsolving of Texas, who returned from the Lambeth Conference accompanied by Mrs. Kinsolving; Mr. and Mrs. John S. Phipps, Mrs. E. A. Sands, L. Percy Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Beverley Chew, Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Chapin, G. G. Haven, Jr., and Miss M. Carey Thomas of Bryn Mawr.

Including the Aquitania, there were 7,748 arrivals yesterday—1,246 first, 1,147 second and 5,356 third class passengers. The other vessels were the Rochambeau from Havre, the Mongolia from Hamburg and the New Rochelle from Danzig.

5,000 SPEAKERS OPEN REPUBLICAN CAMPAIGN

Hays in Indiana Repeats His Charge of Foreign Governments Ordering Our Troops.

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.—The Republican Party officially opened its speaking campaign today with approximately 5,000 speakers spreading over the country to deliver addresses from now until election day. Addresses made today dealt mainly with the League of Nations, women's position in politics, the meaning of Constitution Day—today—and the necessity "for every one to vote," according to announcements at Republican headquarters here.

During the campaign, it was announced, the doctrines of the Republican Party will be discussed thoroughly in every district in the country.

A special group of speakers has been appointed to cover college and university towns.

Will Hays, national Chairman, and Mrs. Harriet Taylor Upton, National Vice Chairman, were the principal speakers here at a noon rally.

In an address at La Porte, Ind., tonight Mr. Hays again dealt with the League of Nations and reiterated his statement of a few days ago that "the Republican Party is willing to let the women of the country decide whether foreign Governments shall order soldiers of this country to foreign soils to settle foreign disputes."

5 SOCIALIST VOTING ARRESTS

Men Held in $1,800 Bail Each for Violating Election Laws.

Magistrate Robert C. Ten Eyck in Washington Heights Court yesterday held in $1,800 bail each on charges of violating the election law and disorderly conduct five men who, it is alleged, were at the polling place at 109 Lenox Avenue in the interests of the Socialists. They were arrested after several quarrels there Thursday night.

The defendants, Louis Plotkin of 214 Madison Street, Samuel Markes of 413 Fifth Street, Charles Taylor of 240 East Eighty-seventh Street, Moe Levine of 406 Sackman Street and Samuel Cupper of 512 Powell Street, were represented in court by Samuel Orr, one of the re-elected Socialist Assemblymen. Their cases were adjourned until Sept. 24.

August Claessens was the Socialist candidate in the district where the defendants were arrested.

AMUNDSEN CAUGHT IN ICE.

Explorer's Ship Held Up Off the Siberian Coast.

NOME, Alaska, Sept. 17.—Captain Roald Amundsen's expedition ship, the Maud, which left this port nearly two months ago, bound for the North Pole, is caught in the ice about twenty miles off Cape Serge on the Siberian coast, according to information brought here yesterday by Captain Heckla, whose fishing boat was also icebound near the Maud.

Captain Meckla said his vessel, being of light draft, worked its way out after being icebound near the Maud for ten days, but that Captain Amundsen's ship was still fast in the ice when the fishing boat left. He said Captain Amundsen hoped to free the Maud soon and continue his journey.

The CHENEY

The CHENEY'S Purity of Tone

No matter what the musical piece—vocal or instrumental—The Cheney will reproduce it faithful to the purity of tone in the original rendition.

On The Cheney, a piano record sounds like a piano; a violin record like a violin; a vocal record—solo, duet, trio, quartet, or choral—like the original voice or voices; an orchestral record like an orchestra actually present, with all the individuality of each instrument clearly defined.

With The Cheney in your home, you have only to put on the record of a favorite selection and close your eyes, to complete the illusion of listening to the original personal production.

In the Wanamaker Phonograph Salons, first floor, new building, you may hear this amazing genius of The Cheney demonstrated to you.

CENTRAL POWER STATIONS

The demand for commercial power is the greatest in history—far exceeding the supply. To meet this demand power companies are providing quantity production by extending their present plants or building new stations. In efficient plants it is recognized that quantity production alone can offset high fuel costs and keep power costs at a minimum.

It is in connection with facilities for increased production that we can be of service. Because we have specialized in this class of work we know central station problems and are experienced in their solution. We are prepared to render a complete service including design, construction and installation of equipment, or we will perform a partial service if desired.

We have done engineering or construction work for the following power companies among others:

Alabama Power Co.
Central Indiana Lighting Co.
Cheswick Power Co.
Detroit Edison Co.
Duquesne Light Co.
Edison Electric Illuminating Co.
Edison Electric Light Co.
Fall River Electric Light Co.

YANKS FALL AGAIN BEFORE WHITE SOX

RALLY IN NINTH FAILS

Faber Checks Uprising After Two Runs Have Been Scored—Chicago Drives Out Six Triples.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.—The White Sox batted the Yankees into submission again this afternoon in a batting chorus which included six three-baggers. There were triples, triples everywhere, but not one for the Yankees. The score was 6 to 4, and the ambitious Yanks are now clinging to second place by a mere margin of two decimal points, while the Clevelands strengthened their hold on first place with another victory over the Senators.

A crowd of 30,000 was jammed into Comiskey Park, and had a good time watching the Yankees suffer. Toward the end of the game, when the lead of the Sox looked safe, the crowd implored Red Faber to let Babe Ruth hit the ball and make his fiftieth home run. Babe had another poor day. He grounded out weakly to John Collins in the first, and Faber gave him a pass purposely in the third. Babe hoisted a high one to Jackson in the sixth, and a higher one to Felsch in the eighth.

The Yanks are indulging in a slight slump and a fine time they have picked for it. They were weak at the bat against Faber's pitching except in the ninth, when they made a belated rally. Ward perpetrated a bad error in the sixth and presented the Sox with two runs, which in the end proved the margin of victory.

Thormahlen No Puzzle.

Once again Manager Huggins guessed wrong when he nominated his pitcher. He elected Herb Thormahlen, and three tripples in a row didn't convince the Yank manager that the Sox were flirting outrageously with Herbie. It wasn't until the Sox got another triple in the second that Huggins was convinced that something must be wrong with his southpaw. In the third he called on Carl Mays.

There was no time in the fray when one could get the impression that the Yankees might win. The Sox got the jump, took the lead and held on to it with grim determination.

The only slight ray of hope in the Yankee chaos came in the ninth. Lewis nicked a single to left centre and went down as Weaver was throwing Ward out at first. Hannah made his third hit of the day, a single to right, which scored Lewis, French was sent in to run for Truck and Fewster batted for Mays. Chick got a pass, and when Peck singled and scored French the Yanks looked dangerous. Fewster foolishly tried to get to third base on Peck's single and Felsch made a wicked throw from centre and nipped the runner at third. Pipp failed in the pinch when he rolled to Weaver, and the Yank chances died with his out at first.

Sox Get Away Fast.

Faber let the Yanks down in order in the first, but the Sox first was resplendent with action. Thormahlen started out as if he meant business. Pratt fired Strunk out at first and Weaver was called out on strikes. Eddie Collins crashed a three-bagger to the right field fence, Meusel taking his own sweet time in fielding the ball. The throw home got by Hannah and Collins scored. Joe Jackson repeated another triple to the same spot and up came Hap Felsch and did exactly the same thing. Hap's triple scored Joe. John Collins laid a grounder in front of Thormahlen and was thrown out at first.

Ward opened the Yank third with a single to right centre, Truck Hannah shot a liner over John Collins's head which hit just inside the foul line and bounded into foul territory. John then made a bad throw to the plate, and although the hit was only a two-bagger both runners scored easily. The Sox rushed out to argue that the rap was a foul, but lost the argument. Herb Thormahlen came up to bat and everybody was mystified about it because Huggins had his whole pitching staff warming up and it was easy to see that he was getting ready to banish the southpaw. Thormahlen fanned when a pinch hitter might have done something for his country. Faber threw Pipp out at first, and although the crowd groaned with disappointment the pitcher gave Felsch an intentional pass. That was about all for this particular occasion, for Pratt forced Ruth for the third out.

There was a lot of emotion wasted in the Sox portion of the third. With Mays pitching, Weaver beat out a bouncer to Pratt and Eddie Collins sacrificed. Jackson walked. Felsch's grounder was nabbed by Ward, who threw to Pratt, forcing Jackson, Weaver going to third. Felsch and Weaver started a double steal. Mays intercepted the throw to second and Weaver was an easy out at the plate.

Weaver Full of Fight.

Weaver jumped off the ground ten feet when Hilderbrand called him out. He said Hannah hadn't touched him. Buck did a lot of shadow boxing around the umpire and, although he hit him a couple of times, Hilderbrand didn't put him out of the game. The other Sox players had to pull Weaver away to prevent him from committing assault and battery. Kid Gleason and Eddie Collins both tried to get Hilderbrand to change his decision, but they only wasted their breath.

While fishing for a run in the sixth the Yanks got a bite, but couldn't land the pickerel. Pipp flied to Jackson and the mob roared when Ruth came up. Babe hoisted one a mile high to Jackson and Pratt walked. Meusel got a single to right and shoved Pratt to third. It was up to Duff Lewis, but he hoisted the first pitched ball over the infield and Weaver got it.

Joe Jackson started the sixth with his second triple to right. Felsch walked and J. Collins flied to Lewis in short left. Risberg singled to left, Jackson scoring while Felsch went to third and Risberg to second on the throw in. Schalk's grounder went through Ward and Felsch and Risberg scored on the error. Schalk was out stealing and Faber rolled to Mays, who ran over to first and made the putout himself.

There was one gone in the seventh when Hannah doubled to left. The hit went to waste because Mays and Peck were easy outs at first.

After Pipp went out, Risberg to J. Collins, in the eighth, Felsch set himself in deep right centre and Ruth hit a fly right into his hands. Pratt doubled to left and Meusel listelessly fanned. Felsch tripled to right centre in the Sox eighth and when Hap tried to stretch his way home he was out, Ruth to Pratt to Hannah. John Collins singled and Risberg hoisted to Meusel. J. Collins stole second and Ward threw Schalk out at first to wind up the inning.

TIGERS WIN IN TWELFTH.

Veach's Batting Features Detroit Victory Over Red Sox, 14-13.

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 17.—Boston and Detroit played a slow, listless game today, the locals winning out in the twelfth inning, 14 to 13. The Tigers used five recruit pitchers in the contest, but they held Boston to nine hits, most of which were bunched in the seventh and eighth innings, while nineteen safeties were piled up against Jones, Harper and Karr. Veach made a home run, a triple, a double and three singles in six times at bat.

Curves and Bingles

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.—The fans here have canceled the orders for lilies for the White Sox funeral and have started to think about another world series.

Bob Shawkey is the remaining hope of the Yanks in this series, and it looks as if he ought to be able to turn back the Sox tomorrow.

The reason the Sox made so many triples to right field was the listless manner in which Meusel played that terrace. Bob can bang the ball, but he is not a fielding wizard.

Joe Jackson hit a foul into the crowd in the seventh and it came mighty close to putting Babe Ruth's band out of business.

Shoeless Joe led the Sox artillery with two triples. Felsch also had two triples but he didn't cash in on either of them. On his second triple in the eighth he tried to make the plate after the ball had been returned to Pratt and was out by ten feet at the plate.

Truck Hannah was the only Yank who got wise to Faber's twists; he got two doubles and a single.

After Risberg tripled in the second and Schalk fouled to Hannah, Faber laid down a bunt and Risberg came home on the squeeze. The trap was turned into a hit when Thormahlen failed at fielding the ball. Then a double play saved Herbie.

After Babe flied to Felsch in the eighth about 25,000 of the 30,000 fans started for the exits.

Well, the Yanks haven't lost this pennant yet. The same may also be chirped for Cleveland and Chicago.

Robins Nearer to Pennant; Indians Gain in American

By defeating the Cincinnati Reds for the second time at Ebbets Field yesterday the Robins moved closer to the National League pennant. Only a few more victories by the Robins, or defeats for the Reds and Giants, will make the pennant an absolute certainty for the Brooklyn team. The Robins now have ten games to play and may be counted upon to get at least an even break. By winning five more games the standing would be:

	Won.	Lost.	P.C.
Brooklyn	91	63	.591

To beat this mark the Giants would have to win all their remaining fourteen games. Their standing then would be:

	Won.	Lost.	P.C.
New York	92	62	.597

The Reds, under the same conditions, would have to take sixteen of their remaining seventeen games. Their standing would be:

	Won.	Lost.	P.C.
Cincinnati	91	62	.595

If the Robins win seven of their remaining ten games neither Giants nor Reds can tie them by winning every remaining game of the season.

In the American League it is difficult to reduce the possibilities to figures in view of the fact that the Indians, Yankees and White Sox are closely bunched in a space representing one and one-half games. Cleveland now holds a slight advantage on its two rivals, having suffered three defeats less than either New York or Chicago. It is still possible, however, for any of the three teams to be either first or third within three days.

DODGERS GIVE REDS ANOTHER TROUNCING

ELLER A STUMBLING BLOCK

Is Mystery to Brooklyn for Six Innings—Squire Ebbets Preparing for World's Series.

A major portion of the "croochal" part of the series between Brooklyn and Cincinnati was removed at Ebbets Field yesterday afternoon, when for the second time in succession the Dodgers defeated the Reds. The score was 3 to 2, and this morning the Robins are prancing along the main highway of the National League six games ahead of the Giants and seven ahead of the Reds. In short, the Superbas are so far in front that their sparkling spikes are hidden by a cloud of dust, and Charley Ebbets has begun to put the wheels of machinery into operation toward making definite preparations for the world's series.

It is said that a tentative order had already been placed for new uniforms for the Brooklyn troopers. Just what they are going to be like could not be learned, but it is presumed they will be neat but not gaudy. Ebbets also has received the proofs of the tickets for the big event with the American League champions. The press tickets will be in book form of eight coupons each. This will do away with rain checks. On the back of each coupon are printed instructions how to reach Ebbets Field. On the last page of the booklet are printed the various markings to be used by the official scorers in recording hits, errors, course of a play, &c. It has also been arranged to commandeer as many boxes as are needed on either side of the press stand to accommodate newspaper representatives. So much for the preparations.

The game itself yesterday was something more than a mere victory. It showed the real fighting spirit of the Dodgers—the spirit that has kept the team in the fight all season and has enabled it during the hectic dash down the stretch to gain a commanding lead and not only hold it but increase it against the keenest of opposition, after enjoying a scant lead of one run for a goodly part of the journey through the early innings, the Robins suddenly found themselves trailing when Petey Kilduff's error in the fifth round paved the way for the Cincinnati to score a brace of runs and forge to the front. Then it became an up-hill fight for Brooklyn.

Eller Finally Weakens.

Hod Eller had been pitching excellent ball for Cincinnati, and there had been nothing to indicate that he was weakening or might weaken. With only four innings of play left it was a discouraging outlook, but Uncle Robbie's nephews had plenty of fight left, and they immediately set about the task of retrieving the game. They succeeded in the seventh, when they found Eller for four hits, one of which was a double, and batted the former shine ball expert out of the box. They scored two runs during the rampage, and subsequent developments proved these to be ample to turn the trick.

Brooklyn took the lead at the start of the game. The umpires had scarcely warmed up to their work when the Dodgers jammed over a run. Olson started the game by rolling to Kopf, whose bad throw to first gave Ivy a life. Johnston was hit by a pitched ball, and Griffith grabbed a bunch of laurels for himself by crashing the ball to centre for a full-grown base hit, Olson scoring. Wheat flied to Roush, and Myers forced Griffith, Groh, unassisted.

After that Eller settled down, and, while he was not altogether unhittable, he managed to keep such a scrub lineup three more bingles that were made off him up to the seventh inning. As a result, it was quite a pitching duel between him and Leon Cadore.

Until the fifth round Cadore had limited the Reds to a double by Wingo in the third and a single by Roush in the fourth. In the fifth, however, Kilduff made one of his rare errors, and it led to lots of trouble. Duncan started the inning by rolling to Kilduff, and Petey let the ball go through him. Then Cadore lost control of the pellet while trying to work it to corners on Kopf, and the latter walked. The bases were filled when Neale beat out a bunt along the third base line. The Brooklyn infield was playing back to make a possible double play when Wingo grounded to Kilduff. Naturally, all of the base runners were in motion as soon as the ball was hit, and the best Kilduff could do was to retire the batter at first, while Duncan scampered over the plate with the tying run. Kopf took third on the play and Neale second. Eller splashed in front of the plate, and Kopf was over the plate before Cadore could make a play on him. The Brooklyn pitcher, however, threw out his rival at first. Neale was on third when Kilduff tossed out Rath.

Brooklyn Rally Falls.

It looked as if the Dodgers might more than even up the score in the fifth inning, when they got the bases filled with two out. Eller lost control of the pellet and Wheat strolled for a starter. Myers sacrificed him to second, and Zach went to third while Schmandt was being thrown out by Kopf. Kilduff walked and stole second. With runners on second and third and two out Pat Moran called a conference of his players near the plate and ordered Eller to pass Miller purposely. This was done and Cadore was not equal to the situation put up to him. He fanned.

In the next inning, however, the Robins got their revenge. Olson hit the right field fence for a double. Johnston sacrificed, Eller to Daubert. Griffith gave the fans a chance to get rid of the few post-season straws by singling to left and scoring Olson with the tying run. Wheat singled to centre and Griffith took third. Myers singled to centre, scoring Griffith with what proved to be the winning run. Wheat went to second on the hit and Eller went to the showers. Luque took up the burden and retired the side without further trouble.

Cleveland Lengthens Lead in Pennant Chase Through Coveleskie's Pitching.

CLEVELAND, Sept. 17.—What started out like a pitchers' battle between Coveleskie and Courtney today ended in a rout for Washington, Cleveland winning by 9 to 3.

Long hits by Smith, Wambsganss, Evans and Speaker gave the Indians a lead, and with Acosta pitching in the eighth inning Cleveland scored four more on two passes and three hits, two of which were for extra bases. BOSTON, Sept. 17.—In defeating Boston 9 to 4 today St. Louis made twelve consecutive hits. After Hornsby lined to Boeckel in the fourth, the visitors made five hits in a row off Watson, and also five straight hits off McQuillan, who relieved Watson. McHenry, the last batter in this inning, was out trying to stretch a double into a triple, retiring the side. Townsend started the fifth inning in the box for Boston and Lavan and Heathcote hit safely. The streak was broken when Clemons filed to Maranville.

Bunch Hits in Last Inning and Beat Phillies by 3 to 1.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 17.—Shut out by Rixey until the ninth inning today, Chicago bunched three singles with two bases on balls and Williams's fumble, and defeated Philadelphia, 3 to 1. Cheeves, a recruit from Eastland, in the West Texas League, held the locals to four scattered hits until relieved for a pinch hitter in the eighth.

STARS PLAY TODAY FOR TENNIS TITLE

Mrs. Mallory and Miss Zinderstein Will Meet in Final for Women's Championship.

WIN SEMI-FINAL MATCHES

Former Defeats Miss Pollak, 6-2, 6-3, and Boston Player Wins from Miss Goss, 6-3, 6-4.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 17.—The women's lawn tennis championship of the United States in singles rests tonight between Mrs. Molla Bjurstedt Mallory of New York, titleholder from 1914 to 1917, and Miss Marion Zinderstein of Boston, who was ranked No. 4 in the national list last season. They will play the final round for the title tomorrow afternoon and the finals in women's doubles, mixed doubles and junior singles will also be decided tomorrow.

Miss Zinderstein won her final bracket today at the Philadelphia Cricket Club at St. Martins, by defeating her doubles partner, Miss Eleanor Goss of New York, in two stirring sets, scored 6–3, 6–4, and Mrs. Mallory advanced to the final by getting the better of Miss Helen Pollak of New York in a back court driving duel that was won by the former champion rather easily. The sets in the latter match were scored 6–2, 6–3.

The semi-finals in the doubles produced the day's most thrilling struggle in the meeting of the champions, Miss Goss and Miss Zinderstein, and Mrs. Mallory and Mrs. George W. Wightman, the latter being the 1919 singles champion, who is playing this year only in the doubles. Miss Goss and Miss Zinderstein were forced to a sensational uphill battle in a three-set match in which it looked for a time as though their chances of retaining their laurels had gone aglimmering. The champions finally won by scores of 6–3, 2–6, 7–5, and will meet the Californians, Miss Helen Baker and Miss Eleanor Tennant, in the final match, in which the Easterners are generally considered to have the better chance of victory.

In the mixed doubles championship, the two remaining teams are Mrs. George W. Wightman and Wallace F. Johnson, who defeated the California pair, Miss Tennant and Samuel Hardy, 6–3, 8–6, and Mrs. Mallory and Craig Biddle, who vanquished Mrs. M. B. Huff and Carl Fischer of Philadelphia, 3–6, 8–6, 6–3, in a match in which the clever play of Fischer, the young pupil of Champion Tilden, almost tipped the balance in the other direction.

Girls' Doubles Decided.

One set of titles was decided today. That was in the girls' national junior doubles final, which was won by a Philadelphia team composed of Miss Helen Sewell and Miss Virginia Carpenter. They defeated Miss Ceres Baker of South Orange, N. J., and Miss Martha Bayard of Short Hills, N. J., in straight sets, 6–4, 6–3.

In the featured singles match this afternoon, Miss Zinderstein outplayed her doubles partner at all stages, despite the cleverest of opposition. Miss Goss was ranked No. 2 last season, while the Boston girl was rated No. 4 in the singles standing. But today's result proves conclusively that there will have to be a shift this year. Miss Zinderstein had everything. She drove with steadiness, accuracy and surprising pace. Her eye for the openings rarely failed her and she was good at masking her intentions.

Her volleying was fast and sharply angled and, when anything like a set-up presented, her overhead shots always produced the result desired. Her service is one of her greatest assets. It was difficult today to discern a weakness in the game of this pupil of Mrs. Wightman, who does such vast credit to her teacher. If Mrs. Mallory is to defeat Miss Zinderstein tomorrow, she will have to travel at a faster pace than she has all season.

Miss Zinderstein's superiority over Miss Goss is clearly revealed in the point analysis, which shows that she earned 19 points to 8 for Miss Goss, while making 36 errors to 42 for her opponent. Miss Zinderstein, if memory serves, has not lost a set in singles all season, excepting one to her Longwood team mate, Miss Sigourney, in a minor tournament, and this record includes the National clay court championship. Miss Goss herself has a well rounded game and is particularly skillful at the net, but she could seldom reach the barrier to lay without being passed, and Miss Zinderstein's cleverness gave her rival few chances for those fine overhead smashes for which she is famous.

Miss Goss's Errors Costly.

In the first set, after both had broken through service, Miss Zinderstein quickly gathered three games in succession. Miss Goss won the next on service, but Miss Zinderstein then ran out the set, 7–3. Miss Goss made two fine placements in the final game, but more than offset this by driving twice into the net and twice out of the court. Miss Zinderstein's forcing shots had the west side kid making frequent errors throughout the set.

The second set was practically a repetition. Miss Zinderstein won principally through errors into which her hard and accurate hitting forced her opponent. In addition she made some keen shots for placements, and twice she scored clean service aces.

The point score and stroke analysis tell the story more effectively than any description. They follow:

A Driving Duel.

In the other singles match of the afternoon, both Mrs. Mallory and Miss Pollak played consistently from backcourt. It was a driving duel, in which both waited for errors. This is the sort of game at which Mrs. Mallory is all but unbeatable. She had little trouble today in keeping the ball in play until an error arrived. Miss Pollak also shoots well from backcourt, but her drives have not quite the length of the pace of Mrs. Mallory's, and the former champion has a very sharp eye for the corners. Many of the shots crosscourt were beauties. On the few occasions on which Miss Pollak sought the net, Mrs. Mallory invariably passed her.

Mrs. Mallory ran quickly into the lead in both sets and never relinquished it. She earned 20 points to 6 for Miss Pollak, and made 38 errors to Miss Pollak's 46. In winning the match at 6–2, 6–3, Mrs. Mallory scored a total of 66 points to 44 points for Miss Pollak.

But it was in the doubles that the most thrilling and spectacular match of the day was forthcoming. Four finer exponents of women's doubles than Miss Zinderstein and Miss Goss, on the one hand, and Mrs. Mallory and Mrs. Wightman on the other, would be hard to find. All four played remarkably keen tennis. Miss Zinderstein and Mrs. Wightman shining especially by their clever headwork and skill in manoeuvring their opponents out of position and then shooting with uncanny accuracy in the openings.

Miss Goss played an excellent second to Miss Zinderstein. Her net game was of much value to her team, but many of her chances for kills were brought about through her teammate's skill in paving the way for the opening. The first set went to the champions rather easily. They broke through Mrs. Wightman's service three times and through Mrs. Mallory's once, while Miss Zinderstein won her service both times and Miss Goss broke even. The final game of the set went to the champions on outs by Mrs. Wightman and Mrs. Mallory, a kill by Miss Goss and a snappy crosscourt placement by Miss Zinderstein.

Foot-Faults Hurtful.

In the second set Miss Zinderstein was temporarily thrown out of her stride by foot-faults that were twice called against her, while some close decisions on the lines also seemed to bother the champions. Miss Zinderstein double-faulted twice after the foot-fault had been called and the sting of her service was affected. Nevertheless, Mrs. Wightman and Mrs. Mallory clearly earned the decision in this set, Mrs. Wightman gaining especial applause for her clever passing shots. The score was 6–2.

The rubber set had the gallery in constant demonstrations of excitement. Mrs. Wightman and Mrs. Mallory ran into a lead of 4–1, breaking through Miss Goss's service twice. It looked as though the champions would soon have "ex" in front of their titles. Mrs. Mallory then lost her own service at love, the champions both driving the ball to unreachable places. Miss Zinderstein won her service and then, with Mrs. Wightman serving, the champions pulled up on even terms at 4—all.

Mrs. Mallory and Mrs. Wightman took the lead again at 5–4 by breaking through Miss Goss's delivery, good lobbing turning the trick, but that was the nearest they came to victory. Mrs. Mallory lost her service at love through some fine smashes by Miss Goss, for which Miss Zinderstein set the stage. Miss Zinderstein then won her service after the points had twice reached deuce. Trailing at 30—40, Miss Zinderstein evened it up by a cross-court placement, and a fine passing shot by her partner and an error by Mrs. Wightman furnished the points that made it 6–5 for the champions.

Mrs. Wightman served the last game and lost through a double fault, a placement and a kill by Miss Goss and an out by Mrs. Mallory for the final point of the set, 7–5, and the match, two sets to one.

The point score:

FIRST SET.

Zinderstein-Goss	2	4	4	1	1	4	4	2	6—40	7

First Set a Real Struggle.

In the other doubles match, Miss Baker's chops and slices and Miss Tennant's skill overhead and on the volley bothered Miss Townsend and Miss Thayer constantly. The Philadelphians made many errors, some of them on easy chances, but more through the forcing shots of the Californians. The first set was well contested at 6—4, but the Westerners hit a faster pace from then on and ran through to a love set in short order.

The summaries:

TENNIS TOURNEY ON TODAY.

Richards and Throckmorton in Castle Point Fixture.

The draw of the Castle Point tournament of the Hoboken Tennis Club shows the names of 105 players, mostly those in the metropolitan district. The two headliners are Vincent Richards, who is playing in Toronto this week, but who will return in time to play his first round match tomorrow morning, and Harold Throckmorton, who won the Castle Point Cup last year, when it was first put in competition through donation by C. H. E. Milburn, a member of the club. Richards and Throckmorton are in opposite halves of the draw.

The play in men's singles will begin this afternoon and will be resumed tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock, with matches scheduled for all day, in order that three rounds may be completed in the week-end.

The women's singles will begin Monday, with the draw tonight and the mixed doubles on Wednesday, with the draw scheduled for Tuesday night.

WELCOME PLANS FINISHED.

Reception to Olympic Team Will Be Held on Saturday, Oct. 2.

Plans for the reception to the American Olympic team, which won the major honors at the Olympic games in Belgium, were completed yesterday by the Mayor's Committee on Receptions to Distinguished Guests. The committee opened headquarters in Room 2234, Municipal Building, where all information regarding the reception can be obtained.

Including among those present at the meeting were John F. Sinnott, Secretary to the Mayor and Chairman of the committee; Grover A. Whalen, Commissioner of Plant and Structures and Vice Chairman of the committee, and several members of the Executive Committee.

Saturday, Oct. 2, is the date selected for the reception. According to present plans, the day's program will begin with a parade which is to start at 10 o'clock in the morning at Fifty-ninth Street and Fifth Avenue. The procession will march down that thoroughfare to Ninth Street, to Lafayette Street, to City Hall Place, where Mayor John F. Hylan will be the chief reviewing officer. He also will pin medals on the returning athletes, following an address of welcome.

International Polo Games Set for June 18, 22 and 25

The dates for the international polo match next year between America and Great Britain have been set for June 18, 22 and 25, according to an announcement made recently in London by English polo officials. The American Polo Association has agreed to the dates, according to the announcement. The matches will be played on the famous field at Hurlingham, the scene of many international matches and the place where the British tryouts to determine the makeup of the international team have been held this Summer. The trials were finished during the last week of August, Colonel H. A. Tompkinson, Lord Dalmeny, Lord Wodehouse and Major V. N. Lockett making up the British four. The American tryouts are now in progress at Meadow Brook, where the championship tournament began last Saturday and will be concluded this afternoon.

WASAKA LOSES MAST JIBING IN A BLOW

Special to The New York Times.

GREENWICH, Conn., Sept. 17.—The Wasaka II., John J. Martin's Class P sloop, representing the Boston Yacht Club, was dismasted as she jibed around the Cows gas buoy off Shippan Point today in the second of the series of races for the Manhasset Bay Challenge Cup.

At the time, the Nahma, owned by Addison G. Hanan and representing the Indian Harbor Yacht Club of this place, had a fifty-second lead and had jibed around the mark in beautiful style. There was a stiff northwesterly blow which, when the yachts started, had a velocity of twenty knots, and at the time of the unfortunate mishap to the challenger had increased to twenty-five knots and more in the gusts.

As Wasaka started to jibe the mainsail caught in the upper spreader of the lofty Marconi mast. She slowly heeled over on her beam ends, and as her sail spread was nearly parallel with the water, the starboard shrouds parted and the mast snapped off practically flush with the deck, and her last chance to lift the cup this year had vanished.

Clear Away the Wreckage.

The Corinthians aboard cut away and cleared the wreckage as rapidly as possible, and then the power yacht Jane Ann took her in tow and she returned to her mooring in Indian Harbor. The Nahma continued on her way, and, having no competitor, lowered her lofty mainsail and continued under jib alone, as her owner thought it best not to take any chances, considering the velocity and puffiness of the wind and the fairly heavy sea that was running.

However, the wind gradually blew itself out, and when near the finish Nahma's mainsail again was hoisted and she crossed the finish line the winner not only of the day's contest but of the series, and the Manhasset Cup will repose in the locker of the Indian Harbor Yacht Club for another year.

The Race Committee set the warning signal at 2:20, the preparatory a few minutes later, and at 2:30 they were started. In the race today Ad. Hanan put the Nahma over the line a length and a half in the lead of the Wasaka and in the weather berth. They were not so close together between preparatory and starting signals as they were yesterday and on Wednesday, when there was no contest because of lack of breeze.

Course a Triangular One.

The course, a triangular one, called for a reach to the first mark, the Cows Gas buoy, another reach to the Centre Island buoy, and a beat home to the starting and finishing line between the White Spar buoy south of the Red Spar buoy to the westward of Great Captain Island. The total length of the course was fifteen miles.

In the piping northwester and under their great spreads of canvas the two trim Hanan-designed sloops romped along the Connecticut shore at a rare burst of speed, the Nahma gybing about the buoy at 3:07:10, which shows that she reached the 5⅞ miles in 37 minutes, 10 seconds.

The Wasaka started to gybe about the buoy at 3:08 having taken just fifty seconds longer than the Nahma to cover the distance. It was a beautiful contest until it ended so suddenly and unfortunately.

Continues Under Jib Alone.

After the Race Committee and judges aboard Commodore Graham Smyth's power yacht Ohlooka had remained hovering about the Wasaka to render any assistance possible until the Jane Ann took her in tow, they followed after the Nahma, which, by that time, under jib alone, was nearly over to the Centre Island buoy, and then they returned to establish the finishing line.

The Nahma crossed the finishing line at 5:58:50 having taken 2:28:50 to cover the course.

The crew of the Nahma included Addison G. Hanan, owner; Chas. D. Mower, Butler Whiting and John R. Johnson. Those aboard the Wasaka II. were J. J. Martin, owner; B. B. Crowninshield, J. V. Santry, A. J. Santry, R. W. Pidgeon, and J. Pope. The Race Committee included Richard A. Monks, Frank Bowne Jones, and Fredk. Doremus and the judges were C. F. Larzelere, H. L. Stone and A. F. Aldridge. The Wasaka's mast, which was carried away, was 67 feet long.

HARD WORK FOR COLUMBIA.

Coach O'Neill Gives Gridiron Squad Stiff Practice.

Coach Buck O'Neill brought the Columbia football squad's first week of practice to an end yesterday with the stiffest workout of the Fall practice period. The Blue and White mentor did everything in the category except scrimmage work, and this, he announced, will begin next Wednesday, after the squad has had a few days more of signal drills. There will be no practice today. On Monday the 'Varsity candidates will undergo a rapid physical test which will determine their fitness to play the gridiron game.

It was a tired batch of athletes who trotted off to the training table at the end of the practice. They had begun with fundamentals, dallied with the tackling dummy, tried their hand at signal practice for a short time, and closed with a drill in running through a broken field. The backs and ends were employed in the latter exercise, while the linesmen, under the tutelage of Tom Thorp, engaged the bucking and charging machines.

At the end of the last practice of the week Coach O'Neill said he was satisfied with the looks of the squad. It was evident that he found little lacking as far as weight is concerned, and there seems to be plenty of latent speed and power in the various candidates. The back field men in particular have showed up well, and there will be a merry scramble for the four positions, several new men threatening to displace the many veterans who are trying to hold their positions. Harris at quarter back has a fairly clear field, but for the half back and full back positions there is a great amount of material available.

N. Y. U. IN HARD PRACTICE.

Football Candidates Put Through First Line Scrimmage.

Football practice at New York University took on a more strenuous aspect yesterday afternoon when Coach Gargan put his men through a hard tackling drill. Then the squad was put through its first line scrimmage. All line candidates were given a stiff workout at holding and making holes.

Gargan was assisted in his work by Dr. Cusack, the old Georgetown end. He took the candidates for the wing positions in hand and gave them a long drill in breaking up interference. Gargan and Wall, the assistant athletic director at the university, put the linemen and backs through their paces.

Special attention was given Adams and Levin, the two diminutive ends of last season. Both are very fast and hard tacklers. Cusack took a great deal of time teaching these two men some of the fine points of the end positions.

A valuable addition to the squad was made yesterday when Caddell, a halfback, reported. He weighs 190 pounds and is very fast. He has just been discharged from the army and has returned to resume his studies. His presence helps solve the problem of a running mate for Weinheimer, as the other backfield candidates are rather light.

A few minor injuries were reported yesterday. Bates, last year's freshman captain, suffered a slight wrench of his right knee and is limping. Tucker, a promising centre, sustained a strained shoulder and will be out for a week.

Players to Wear Numbers in Harvard-Yale Football Game

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Sept. 17.—The football players of Harvard and Yale probably will be numbered for the first time when they meet in their annual game in the Yale Bowl on Nov. 20. Fred W. Moore, graduate manager of athletics at Harvard, said today that use of the identification system was likely this year.

With Harvard and Yale joining in the movement, the long battle for the numbering of players may be regarded as won by those advocates of the system who have been clamoring for numbers for years past. Princeton announced its willingness to number players some years ago, but with Harvard and Yale declining to take a stand in favor of the plan some other colleges declined. It seems likely now that the entire intercollegiate football group will be a unit on the numbering system in future seasons.

TWO WORKOUTS FOR PRINCETON PLAYERS

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Sept. 17.—Keene Fitzpatrick put the Princeton football squad through two sessions today. The morning period was devoted to blackboard work and an explanation of the rules by the members of the coaching staff, while the regular three-hour drill was held as usual this afternoon.

The tackling dummy made its first appearance on University Field today, and all hands were given long exercise in hurling themselves at the sawdust figure. Charging featured the work of the line men, the guards receiving especial attention from Hack McGraw and Captain Callahan. This department will be one of the hardest for the coaches to fill during the next two months, due to the June exodus of most of last year's veterans. Speers, who won the hammer throw championship of the British Isles at Stamford Bridge in July, is a promising candidate of the 200-pound variety. Halsey, the 'Varsity shot putter, also just returned from Europe, has the necessary bulk, and John McCaull is among the candidates. The latter was captain of his freshman team three years ago, but was kept off the field last year by an injury early in the season.

Fundamentals came in for their share of attention today. The ends practiced falling on the ball and receiving punts, and after leaving the tackling pit the backs were again grouped in fours and sent through easy plays, the quarter back calling signals for the first time.

Only two members of the Tiger coaching staff were missing this afternoon. Head Coach Roper and Billy Moore were the two absentees. Roper was detained again in Philadelphia last night, but expects to reach Princeton in time to take over the squad at morning practice tomorrow. Moore is expected in from Europe this week. Frank Glick, Maury Trimble and Nat Poe are the backfield staff. Poe has been selected to take over the scrub when that unfortunate body is chosen. Hack McGraw, Puffey Bigler, Red Gennert and George Funk are looking after the line, and Jack Winn is in charge of the ends. Gennert, Funk and Moore will take over the freshman team when the yearlings report on Sept. 28, but for the present are devoting their services to the 'Varsity.

COMES TO COACH STEVENS.

Harris of Oberlin to Help Build Football Team.

C. K. Harris, of Oberlin College, made his début on the coaching staff of the Stevens Tech football team yesterday. He will assist Coaches Durborow and Mitchell in rounding the squad of sixty candidates into form and picking out the 'Varsity team.

Johnson and Emslie appeared in football togs on the field and helped to swell the ranks of the veterans. More new material has reported to Coach Durborow, including several high school stars.

Practice consisted in tackling the dummy, running down under punts and falling on the ball. The stiff workout ended up with a half hour's signal drill, the squad being divided into five teams.

Captain Goodale, on whom the coach is relying to do the kicking, had a short session by himself on one end of the field.

Butler and Scaffe Arrive to Help Prepare Annapolis Eleven.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Sept. 17.—The Naval Academy coaching staff for the season has been completed by the arrival of Butler and Scaffe, halfback and tackle, respectively, of the 1918 team. Folwell selected a dozen members of the new squad this afternoon and they will be given further attention as possible members of the first squad. The others were turned over to Lieut. Commander Richardson, who will pick men for the second squad and also for the class squad.

YALE TEAMS HOLD FIRST SCRIMMAGE

Football Scrubs Play Two 'Varsity Elevens—Jack Cutler Wrenches His Knee.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Sept. 17.—Yale football players today held the first scrimmages of the year, when Captain Jack Cutler's scrubs tackled the first and second 'Varsity elevens for twenty minutes each. In the scrimmage between the scrubs and second 'Varsity, Captain Cutler, who was playing quarterback, wrenched his knee and was replaced by Jones. The first eleven scrimmage resulted in a single touchdown for the 'Varsity.

Peterson, the punter and fullback of the scrubs, kept punting with the 'Varsity on the offense and the regulars were held three times for downs. Features of this scrimmage were a twenty-yard run by Kempton, a forward pass, Kempton to Munger, and finally a run of thirty yards by Dickens after he had intercepted a forward pass, yielding the only score of this playing period.

In the scrimmage between the scrubs and the second 'Varsity the scrubs scored when Dave Saunders intercepted a forward pass in the centre of the field and ran fifty yards through a broken field for a touchdown. No trial for goal was made. There was little fumbling.

Following the practice, Coach Jones pointed out various mistakes made by the 'Varsity and second team in its work. Phil Smith and Arthur Howe watched the practice.

Manager J. A. Sessions of the Harvard football team was here today making arrangements for quarters for the Harvard eleven when here for the final game of the year. It is probable that the Harvard eleven will stay at Derby, as did Princeton team last year.

HARVARD HAS SCRIMMAGE.

Three Elevens Sent Through Brisk Twenty-Minute Workout.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Sept. 17.—Harvard's 'Varsity football players closed their second week of preliminary drill today with the first scrimmage of the season. This, however, was not between the 'Varsity and the scrubs but was held for the forty members of the first squad, which was divided into three elevens. Previous to the scrimmage the coaches had the three teams running through signals but no attempt was made to choose any combination calculated to stand as the strongest on the field. The veterans were mixed in pretty much with the newcomers, Captain Horween playing with the third squad, wearing a white shirt over his crimson jersey. Horween remained in the play during every moment of the brisk twenty-minute scrimmage.

Harvard's first play was spirited enough. Horween's third squad held together most of the time against the other elevens, on which were many of the 'Varsity veterans. There was little to choose from, however, one team gaining about as much ground as the other and there being no opportunity for either to score. All the teams held to simple plays, with here and there a forward pass. There was a lot of kicking, but this was generally mediocre, owing mainly to the very poor passing of the centres, all of whom were erratic. Dick Humphrey, however, boosted away one punt that carried, with the roll, nearly 85 yards, and in the scrimmages Churchill, former freshman half back, made a pretty twenty-five-yard gain around the first squad's left wing, and Gratwick once burst through tackle and all but got free for a run down a clear field.

Sam Felton, the 'Varsity kicker of the 1919 team, came out to coach the punters, being the only instructor besides the usual staff.

Third—De Jonge and Eastman, ends; Lee and Selden, tackles; Holmes and Olmsted, guards; Kelly, centre; Buell, quarter, and Horween, Churchill and Singer, backs.

The first two teams held to straight football, but the third indulged in a little forward passing, none of which was successful.

The linemen showed a lot of aggressiveness in the scrimmage, but, as was expected, the backs were not very much together.

A newcomer to the scrub team squad was Fish Janin, who last year in the baseball season was taken up to the 'Varsity from the scrubs and made the two-base hit that put Harvard's final game with Yale on ice. Janin has played football at Cambridge before this year, and probably it will not be long before he is advanced into company with the first-string men.

BOXING COMES BACK TO GREAT WELCOME

CHANEY AND BENJAMIN WIN

RESULT OF BOXING BOUTS AT MADISON SQUARE GARDEN

Joe Welling outpointed Johnny Dundee in 15 rounds. Judges' decision.

Andy Chaney outpointed Tommy Noble in 10 rounds. Judges' decision.

Joe Benjamin outpointed Pete Hartley in 10 rounds. Judges' decision.

Sammy Nable outpointed Bobby Hanson in 6 rounds. Judges' decision.

Judges—William Muldoon and Charley Thorley.

Professional boxing in New York came back under auspicious circumstances last night at Madison Square Garden, where the first legalized bouts to be held here in three years and the first bouts to a decision here in twenty years, were conducted under the auspices of the Madison Square Garden Sportsmen's Club. A card of four bouts, in which some of the leading boxers of the country participated, attracted a crowd of about 12,000 to the famous old arena. As if in keeping with the significant occasion the bouts excelled the standard of recent years and provided plenty of interesting entertainment for the crowd which filled the Garden.

Particularly was the work of the boxers above the ordinary in the matches which preceded the main bout between Johnny Dundee and Joe Welling. Never an idle moment was experienced from the time the opening six-rounder started to the familiar cry, "They're off" until the gong clanged on the last round of the stellar attraction.

Every Seat Is Filled.

A typical Garden crowd witnessed the bouts. Every seat was occupied long before the principals in the first of the important bouts entered the ring. It seemed that everybody wanted to have some personal part in the event which made history. From early in the evening long queues of hungry fight fans, anxious to enjoy their favorite sport after a period of inactivity which extended over three long years, made their way to the arena.

The gallery gods, that peculiar species of fight fan who stands long hours in a seemingly never ending line, waiting for the lower priced tickets and a chance to slide into a seat, were out early. From the time the Garden doors were opened at 6 o'clock until the allotted supply of cheaper seats was exhausted they came in steady streams, filling up the ceiling seats rapidly. The reserved seat holders began arriving in dense lines by 7:30 and experienced the pleasant sensattion of being courteously escorted to their seats by sturdy lads whose distinctive white caps marked them as trained ushers. Many fashionably gowned women were conspicuous in the big boxing turnout and enjoyed the contests as much as their male escorts.

Garden Greatly Improved.

It was quite a different Madison Square Garden which the veteran fan entered on this auspicious occasion. Promoter Tex Rickard lavished $18,000 on improvements, which completely transformed the interior. The walls were freshly painted, as were the boxes overlooking the arena. Highly polished chairs were carefully placed over the entire floor space and the frail fences which in the past marked off "ringside boxes" were conspicuously missing. The balconies were gayly decorated in the national colors. Before and between the bouts a negro band kept the crowd in good humor with popular strains.

Commissioners Laurence Maguire, Joseph Johnson, Edward W. Ditmars, Walter Hooke and Senator James J. Walker, father of the law, were interested spectators and early arrivals. The men intrusted with the supervision of the sport were united in their praise of the conditions under which the bouts were held.

The Garden was carefully policed to prevent any of the disorders which were frequently in evidence under the Frawley law. A detail of rookie policemen, men who had passed the examination for berths on the "finest" force and who are now attending the training school, were judiciously placed under the direction of Captain Robert Dawson, U. S. A., former aide to ex-Police Commissioner Woods. Fifteen Central Office men held vantage points about the arena and carefully dismissed enterprising pickpockets and other undesirables who sought admission.

Jack Dempsey, world's heavyweight champion, and Georges Carpentier, European contender, met personally for the first time just before the main bout. The fistic leaders of two continents entered the ring shortly after Dundee and Welling and while the gloves were being adjusted on the boxers in the main bout were introduced by Announcer Humphries. The two made an imposing spectacle standing chatting in the ring, obviously unconcerned with the tumult their presence aroused among the crowd. Cheers shook the roof of the Garden from the time they first stepped inside the ropes until the ceremony ended with a picture in which Promoter Tex Rickard posed between the two gladiators.

Welling Outpoints Dundee.

Joe Welling, Chicago's lightweight championship contender, gained the decision over Johnny Dundee, local Italian boxer, in their fifteen-round bout, which featured the show. Judges Charles Thorley and William Muldoon were unanimous in their verdict favoring the Chicagoan and the decision was greeted with a round of applause.

In engaging Welling, Dundee undertook a task which he was incapable of fulfilling. The veteran Italian lightweight had to overcome natural handicaps which were too much for him. Welling was taller than his Italian rival, enjoyed a longer reach and had a marked advantage in weight. The figures showed Dundee at 131½ pounds and Welling at 136½ pounds.

Dundee's fight was not up to the standard of previous engagements. The little Italian's spectacular bounding and dancing about the ring were conspicuously missing. Instead he plodded steadily along, fighting all the time in the face of insurmountable obstacles, but trying hard always. Welling, too, fought a well planned battle, judging his pace to a nicety and forcing the milling for the greater part of the journey. There were times when the crowd, evidently forgetting that the boxers were compelled to husband their strength for the unfamiliar fifteen round distance, hissed and booed, but, under the circumstances the outbursts were uncalled for.

The result gave Welling his second decision victory over Dundee in the many meetings of the pair inside the ropes. Welling's superior reach was the biggest factor in the Chicagoan's favor. With his long left he was enabled to keep Dundee at a safe distance with a snappy jab or a jarring hook. Repeatedly Welling crossed his right to Dundee's jaw, shaking the Italian to the heels. When hurt Dundee would rush frantically at his rival, swinging eagerly with both hands, but without judgment. Welling invariably evaded the Italian's blows and stepped inside with stiff counters.

In the early rounds Welling showed clearly to advantage. He forced Dundee steadily and hammered the Italian hard about the stomach and face. Dundee several times retreated to the ropes under the fire. In the second Welling almost lifted Dundee off his feet with a right to the stomach, and in his efforts to retaliate Dundee was woefully wild.

Welling slowed up after the sixth round and in the seventh, eighth, ninth and tenth sessions, Dundee clearly earned the honors. The little Italian slipped inside of Welling's leads and countered with heavy blows to the face which completely upset Welling's attack. Dundee hooked his left consistently and followed like a flash with his right, while Welling's leads went sailing past their mark or fell short. In these four rounds Dundee accomplished his best work.

In the eleventh and twelfth Welling again assumed the lead and forced the fighting. He battered Dundee about the face with a shower of right and lefts which stung the Italian. Dundee was short in his efforts to retaliate and missed many blows.

In the closing three rounds Dundee made a brave effort to turn the tide, but Welling was equal to the emergency and maintained his lead in points.

Humphries Is Announcer.

The principals for the inaugural six-round bout, Sammy Nable, former amateur boxing champion, and Bobby Hanson of Brooklyn, entered the ring at 8:20. A significant hush fell over the enthusiastic crowd as Announcer Joe Humphries embarked on the first ring introductions under the Walker law. Joe first introduced the judges, Charley Thorley, on the Madison Avenue side of the ring, and William Muldoon, on the Fourth Avenue side. Then he introduced the veteran referee, Bill Brown, and followed with the introduction of Timekeeper Dr. George H. Muth. These ceremonies over, Humphries introduced Nable and Hanson, announcing the respective weights as 117 and 112 pounds.

To Noble went the distinction of earning the first official decision rendered in a professional ring in New York in twenty years. At the conclusion of an interesting six-round session both judges awarded the verdict to the little East Sider. Noble clearly earned the award with his fast, clever, heavy-hitting attack.

Pete Hartey of the Bronx, the durable Dane, and Joe Benjamin, California's lightweight title contender, were the principals in the second bout, a tenround affair. Young Chaney, formerly of the famous "Old Eagle Eye" Charley White, refereed. The weights were announced as Hartley, 136¾ pounds; Benjamin, 135.

Benjamin gained the judges' decision after ten rounds of sizzling action. The contest was one of the best ever seen here. Not a moment was wasted and the crowd got plenty of action. The decision of the judges did not meet with the approval of the crowd and there were long and loud demonstrations of disapproval. Beyond question, however, the verdict was eminently fair, for Benjamin, showing remarkable improvement over the form which was his in his previous bouts here, clearly outpointed Hartley.

Chaney Gets Decision.

Young Chaney, leading contender for the title now adorning the classic brow of Johnny Kilbane, and Tommy Noble, England's premier featherweight, were waiting at the steps leading to their respective corners for the principals in the first ten rounds to leave the ring. Quite a departure from the olden times, with their unexcusable, tiresome delays between bouts. William (Kid) McPartland, one of the country's leading referees, officiated in this contest. Chaney's weight was 126¾ and Noble's was 126¾ pounds.

Chaney gained the judges' award after a hair-raising contest. The west sider's terrific body blows weakened Noble perceptibly in the latter rounds, so that the final bell was welcomed by the British boxer. Noble fought a characteristic battle, however, and, despite the heavy bombardment to which he was subjected, sought doggedly to return Chaney's vicious two-fisted fire.

COMMISSION REFUSES TO PERMIT BIG BOUTS

Dempsey-Brennan and Carpentier-Levinsky Matches Will Not Be Allowed.

New York fight fans will be deprived of two important ring bouts as the result of a joint decision rendered by the Boxing Commission and the License Committee which was disclosed last night following the Dundee-Welling bout at Madison Square Garden.

Commissioner Joseph M. Johnson announced that the Battling Levinsky-Georges Carpentier, and Jack Dempsey-Bill Brennan bouts had been prohibited in this State "for the best interests of boxing."

The decision was divulged in the following terse statement:

"After careful consideration we have decided that it is for the best interests of boxing in this State not to hold on the dates set the Dempsey-Brennan and the Carpenter-Levinsky matches. We do not believe that they offer the best means of a trial and test of the new boxing law at the present time.

"Messrs. Rickard of the Madison Square Garden Sporting Club and Gavin of the International Sporting Club have accordingly been advised that the Commission's decision is not to permit these matches for awhile."

Tex O'Rourke, matchmaker of the International Sporting Club, who attended the opening show at the Garden last night, when asked regarding the Carpentier-Levinsky bout, stated that in all probability the Britton-Lewis bout for the welterweight championship would be substituted, as the commission had assured him that Ebbets Field would be available, and that the Carpentier-Levinsky bout would be deferred until November, as the commission had also assured him that the bout could be held then, at which time the International Sporting Club will have a large indoor arena at its command.

DONNELLY WINS SHOOT.

New York Gunner Leads Westy Hogans with 99 Targets.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Sept. 17.—R. S. Donnelly of New York City, a member of the Olympic team, won the Westy Hogan amateur championship today at the annual shoot here of the Westy Hogans. Donnelly broke 99 out of a possible 100 targets in this event.

F. S. Wright of Buffalo, N. Y., another member of the Olympic team; P. S. Cabbutt of Lima, Ohio, and S. M. Crothers of Philadelphia, tied for second honors with scores of 98 each. They finished in the order named for prizes in the shoot-off.

Donnelly was also high man for the day's program, breaking 159 in 160 targets. Crothers and Wright were second high amateurs, with scores of 157.

C. G. Spencer of St. Louis was high professional, with 156 out of 160. Crothers was high amateur for the three days of the regular program, breaking 471 in the grand total of 480.

Man o' War and Sir Barton Will Meet at Kenilworth

Special to The New York Times.

MONTREAL, Sept. 17.—That Sir Barton and Man o' War will meet in a match race over the distance of a mile and a quarter at Kenilworth Park at Windsor, Ont., is now assured. Commander J. K. L. Ross received the following message from A. M. Orpen, owner of Kenilworth Park track, tonight:

"Your wire received today for which please accept my thanks. Have also receive a reply from Louis Feustal, accepting for Man o' War, and am expecting a favorable reply from Willis Sharpe Kilmer on behalf of Exterminator, and on receipt of ne will arrange a meeting of owners to agree on conditions of race which are satisfactory to our association."

ENSOR PILOTS FIVE HORSES TO VICTORY

Jockey Just Misses Equalling World's Record by Clean Sweep at Aqueduct.

Jockey Buddy Ensor, whose riding during the last two weeks has become the talk of the local tracks, provided a real sensation at Aqueduct yesterday when he just missed equalling the world's record for winning mounts in a single day. Ensor brought home five winners, and it was only a matter of inches that prevented him from making it six in a row in the last race. Our Boots, on which he had the mount, was beaten but a short neck by Quecreek.

Six winning mounts in a day is a feat that has been achieved by only six riders in the history of the American and English turf, and to have joined that select band would have brought distinction worth while. The last rider to win six races in a day was Earle Sande, who performed the feat at Havre de Grace last season. C. Turner and "Monk" Overton were other American jockeys to equal the record.

Ensor had once before in his career ridden five winners, and it was a coincidence that he was beaten for his sixth on each occasion by a very narrow margin. In the race in which he was defeated yesterday he put up the strongest ride of the day, no doubt because he was so anxious to make a clean sweep of the card, and in this effort he very nearly made the inferior horse win.

No stronger finish has been seen anywhere this season than the one Ensor made with Our Boots as his mount. Quecreek and Mulciber raced for the wire head and head in a six furlong dash for two-year-olds. Quecreek had gained a slight lead in the stretch, but Ensor fairly lifted Our Boots along in the last sixteenth of a mile, and, pushing ahead of Mulciber, was beaten but a neck, and might have won with a few strides to go.

Not All Favorites.

While he failed to get into the Jockeys' Hall of Fame, Ensor came in for rounds of applause. He was given quite a reception after he won the fifth race on King Agrippa, the third choice in the betting. Among his winners were three favorites and two longer prices, one of these being an 8 to 1 shot. Thus it did not happen that in all of his races he had what appeared at the outset to be the best horse.

One of the best rides Ensor put up was on R. T. Wilson, Jr.'s, Thunderstorm, which won the Potomac Handicap, a mile, defeating J. E. Widener's Fair Gain, with H. P. Whitney's Arethusa third among four starters. Thunderstorm is at his best now and had a big advantage in the weights for the race, but Fair Gain made such a determined effort that only perfect handling by Ensor enabled Thunderstorm to win.

Ensor rated Thunderstorm in third place, while Arethusa was setting the early pace, with Fair Gain at her heels. He did not make a move on Thunderstorm until straightened out in the stretch. The he moved up and caught Fair Gain as the latter was overhauling Arethusa. Fair Gain held on with real courage and Thunderstorm did not draw away until the last few strides, when he gained enough to win by a length and a half. Arethusa had set a fast pace and the effort told on her in the final strides, for she weakened when it came to fighting it out, and Fair Gain took the place by two lengths.

Scores With Long Shot.

The first mount for Ensor was on Clare Frances in the opening event, a five furlongs dash for maiden fillies two years old. Clare Frances was quoted as high as 10 to 1, while Coca Cola was the favorite. Coca Cola led all the way to the last hundred yards, when Clare Frances rushed up from fourth place, and, finishing strongly, got the decision by a neck. Lady Stella was third among the ten that made up the field.

G. W. Loft's Tippity Witchet was the next winner brought home by Ensor. This proved an easy victory. The Loft gelding, though carrying 118 pounds, had little trouble in disposing of his field in the six and a half furlong dash. His only serious rival was H. P. Whitney's Afternoon, and she tired badly in her effort to chase the winner in the stretch. Tippity Witchet moved up with the stretch, and drew clear, to win by three lengths. Afternoon saved the place from Leading Star by two lengths, while Kashmir and Sea Mint were badly beaten.

R. T. Wilson, Jr's., Yellow Hand, a 9 to 20 favorite, proved an easy winner of the third race, a test for three-year-olds, at a mile. In this race Ensor had the best mount. Yellow Hand was able to take command whenever his rider was ready, and, after Whisk and Georgie had run out a fast pace for six furlongs, the Wilson gelding moved up with a rush, and drew away from the others at the sixteenth pole, to win by four lengths. Georgie fought it out, and was second, two lengths in front of Whisk. The three others in this race were badly outrun and were never contenders.

By this time every one in the stands was talking about the success of Ensor, and many players began to follow the rider without regard to his mount. They began to call it an "Ensor Day," and preferred to back the rider rather than the horse.

Pluribus Is Assigned Top Weight for Oakdale Handicap

T. W. O'Brien's two-year-old colt Pluribus, which met with a slight accident at Saratoga and had to be taken out of training, is working so well now that he may be started in the Oakdale Handicap, a six-furlong dash for juveniles, which will be run Monday. If he goes to the post he will carry the top weight, Mr. Vosburgh having assigned 128 pounds to him and thus rating him above such youngsters as Exodus and Grey Lag, the latter the winner of the Champagne Stakes.

BOXERS RETURN HOME.

Olympic Stars Here on Aquitania—Complain About Judges.

Nine boxers, the last of the contingent sent abroad to compete in the seventh Olympiad at Antwerp, arrived in this city last night aboard the Aquitania from Southhampton. Since boxing in the Olympic bouts the athletes had taken part in contests at Paris, Ostend, Brussels, Bruges and in England. With them aboard the big Cunard liner were five coaches of different Olympic teams and crews, a swimmer and a marathon runner. The swimmer was John Curren of the New York Athletic Club, a member of the water polo team, and the marathoner was Frank Zuna, who won the Seagate marathon before going abroad. The coaches were Spike Webb, who headed the boxers; Dick Glendon, coach of the Naval Academy eight which won the Olympic championship; his son, who coaches the plebe crews at the Naval Academy; Harry Mahoney of Leland Stanford University, who coached the rugby team, and Charles Pineno of Gary, Ind., coach of the wrestling team.

The nine boxers were: Sam Mosberg, of the Pastime Athletic Club of this city, who won the 135-pound championship at the Olympics; Sam Laganio, New York, the national middleweight champion; Frank Cassidy, New York, a lightweight; Sam Vogel, New York, a bantamweight; Steve Wallace, Boston, a bantamweight; Earl Hartman, Philadelphia, bantamweight; Chick Muller, Chicago, a welterweight; Jack Zivic, Pittsburgh, a featherweight, and his brother Pete, a flyweight.

All of the boxers were loud in their protests against the judging of the bouts at the Olympiad. They seemed to be unanimous in believing that most of the awards were not given to the boxers who earned the decisions.

Spike Webb, who besides being coach of the Olympic boxers, is the boxing coach at the United States Naval Academy and coached the American team which competed in the Inter-Allied bouts, declared that not a single American boxer was defeated in reality, but those who lost were beaten simply because the judges did not properly score the points. "In one instance one of our boys knocked his opponent down three times but the decision was given against him," said Webb. "That was just one example of how incompetent the judging was. There seemed to be an anti-American spirit prevalent. It stork me as being a case of anything to beat the Americans. On many occasions our boxers were hissed and booed when they were climbing into the ring and before they had had a chance to put up their hands. All of our boys boxed cleanly and deserved to win.

"As it was we won three championships, England won two and France, Canada and South Africa one each. We scored our victories in the flyweight, lightweight and light heavyweight divisions."

SANARDO FAILS IN ATTACK ON RECORD

Murphy's Pacer Falls a Half-Second Short in Effort to Beat Single G's Mark.

SYRACUSE, Sept. 17.—Sanardo, Tommy Murphy's great pacer, piloted by Walter Cox, negotiated a mile at the final card this afternoon in 2:01⅕, failing in an attempt to beat Single G's season record of 2:01. Race followers considered Sanardo's time remarkably good in the face of the chilly weather and the gusty winds sweeping over the track.

It was disclosed here today that Murphy and Edward (Pop) Geers, two prominent Grand Circuit drivers, may not be able to take their places in the sulky again this season.

An X-ray examination of the right wrist of Geers today revealed that it had suffered a compound fracture when the veteran reinsman was thrown from his sulky during the running of yesterday's card, and it was said to be doubtful if he would be able to resume driving again this season.

Murphy, who was injured at the Cleveland meeting of the Grand Ciruit, suffered a serious relapse at the track here today and had to be removed to a hotel.

INCOGNITI IN FRONT.

British Cricketers Lead All-Philadelphians, 219 to 86.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Sept. 17.—The All-Philadelphia cricketers failed to accomplish much against the Britons at Manheim in their first innings today as they were out for the small total of 86. C. C. Morris, who had rolled up a total of 102 in the first match, was disposed of for a duck egg and this appeared to have a depressing effect upon the entire team, and wickets fell in rapid succession for almost nothing, in fact six wickets went down for no runs.

In the Englishmen's first attempt the score board showed 219 all out when stumps were drawn for the night.

CONSTITUTION OR LEAGUE—HARDING

America, in His View, Cannot Accept Covenant and Retain Basic Law.

SAYS WILSON SEIZES POWER

He Is Waging War on Little Republics Without Authority, Nominee Asserts.

Special to The New York Times.

MARION, Ohio, Sept. 17.—The Constitution or the Covenant is the paramount issue, according to Senator Harding's declaration today in a Constitution Day address opening the Ohio campaign in Marion before the largest crowd that has yet gathered around the front porch.

"Do the American people want to transfer the war-making power in practice from the Congress to the President?" the Senator asked, discussing Article X. of the League covenant. "That it would violate the spirit of the Constitution there can be no question in any honest mind in the land," he declared. "The Constitution or the Covenant—that, my countrymen, is the paramount issue. The two are irreconcilable. We cannot be governed from both Geneva and Washington."

Senator Harding attacked the Administration's course toward the smaller republics of the Western Hemisphere, asserting that we were at war now with "our neighbors to the south" through the usurpation by the Executive of powers "scrupulously withheld by the Constitution." The Senator quoted Franklin D. Roosevelt's alleged assertion in a recent speech that he "had something to do with the running of a couple of little republics," and himself wrote the Constitution of Haiti, and that until he resigned as Assistant Secretary of the Navy he had two votes in the League Assembly, but now Secretary Daniels had them. This, Mr. Harding said, was "the most shocking assertion that ever emanated from a responsible member of the Government of the United States."

Senator Harding said in the course of his address:

"America uncovers today in observance of the 133d anniversary of the birthday of the nation. I do not say the birthday of American freedom, which we celebrate variously, though always patriotically, on July 4 in reverence for the Declaration of Independence, but this day is the anniversary of the literal birthday of our American nation.

"Almost a decade passed before the dream of erecting upon this new continent a great and strong nation 'dedicated to liberty' became a compelling vision and forced its way upon the waking active hours of the more progressive and thoughtful men of the colonies. It is even true that a fundamental Federal law was not in contemplation by most of the delegates who assembled in the first convention, and many of those who attended would not have been present had they known that such a work was to be undertaken.

"Surely, a Federal Government was not in the minds of a majority of the delegates. In that convention were men of every type of mind. There were Puritan and Cavalier, Quaker and atheist, autocrat and peasant, Yankee and slave holder. Among them there were, even as now, extremists who favored autocracy or the commune. Under other names, but easily identified with present day prototypes, they had the reactionary, Bolshevik, Socialist, Republican, Democrat, Prohibitionist, Liberal and whatnot.

"It was difficult timber out of which to erect the enduring temple of the Republic, which I think it worth our while to recall to lend us to greater appreciation. I can well believe that the hand of destiny must have directed them, and the supreme accomplishment was wrought because God Himself had a purpose to serve in the making of the new Republic.

"The debates of the Constitutional Convention show that every known form of government had its advocates: that every proposition presented was discussed, amended, revised and reviewed, again and again. The result was in every instance the compromise of conviction, as must be the case when the collective judgment and not the individual will is sought.

Rule of the Majority.

"Any cause which can enlist a majority of the free, untrammelled electors of this land may, under the Constitution, win its dominance. The will of the people, expressed at the ballot boxes of the Republic, can change our Government as well as its policies, and may even abolish the Constitution itself.

"This fact should make us even less tolerant of the lawless men who seek to establish by threat or violence the rule of minorities or of classes, which inevitably becomes autocracy or anarchy.

"America alone among the great nations of the world has undergone no change or vicissitude which in itself has not proved to be strengthening, both materially and spiritually. An anchor our Constitution has been called, but if it be so regarded it cannot be held a rigid, immovable thing, but rather as a sheet anchor, serving only to keep the great ship safe and steady on her course; because there is nothing inelastic in our basic law. Almost immediately the 'bill of rights' for men was added, and now by the votes of men, the yet more striking 'bill or rights' for women has been adopted.

"How can we, then, in reason and with confidence, make sure of fulfilling our mission on earth? The first step is plain. We must strictly maintain and scrupulously observe, in letter and in spirit, the mandates of the Constitution of the United States. We are not doing so now. We are at war, not alone technically with Germany, but actually with the little helpless republics of our own hemisphere.

"There is this difference. The wars against the Central Powers were decreed by Congress in the exercise of the authority conferred upon it by our fundamental law, but the wars upon our neighbors in the South were made and are still being waged, though never declared, through the usurpation by the Executive of powers not only never bestowed upon him, but scrupulously withheld by the Constitution.

"Of the fact there can be no question. It is admitted, even boasted of, by the Democratic candidate for Vice President, between whom, if elected, and the Presidency itself would be but a single life.

Alleged Roosevelt Statement.

"'You know,' he said to the people of Montana, as his words were quoted by the press, 'I have had something to do with the running of a couple of little republics. The fact is, that I wrote Hayti's Constitution myself, and, if I do say it, I think it is a pretty good Constitution. Until last week I had two votes in the League Assembly, now Secretary Daniels has them.'

"To the best of my information, this is the first official admission of the rape of Haiti and Santo Domingo by the present Administration. To my mind, moreover, it is the most shocking assertion that ever emanated from a responsible member of the Government of the United States. Talk about self-determination! Talk about American ideals! Talk about equal rights for small nations! Before confession of deeds such as this, what becomes of the smooth rhetoric of vaunted righteousness to which we have so long been accustomed?

"True, we know little of the conduct of these wars of 'occupation' and the impositing of laws upon our helpless neighbors. The censorship is no less strict than it was during the secret conferences and conspiracies in Paris. Congress has not been informed. The people are kept in ignorance.

"But gradually the torch of truth is illuminating those dark places. Practically all we know now is that thousands of native Haitians have been killed by American marines, and that many of our own gallant men have sacrificed their lives at the behest of an Executive Department in order to establish laws drafted by an Assistant Secretary of the Navy, to secure a vote in the League and to continue at the point of the bayonet a military domination, which at this moment requires the presence of no less than 3,000 of our armed men on that foreign soil.

"Other disquieting phases of this unprecedented performance on the part of the Administration need not now be considered. My present purpose is served by indicating the lengths to which a subtle autocracy, confessing publicity but practicing secrecy, has already gone in subverting the plain intent of our basic law.

Sees a Still Greater "Menace."

"Vastly more important and far more menacing to our own popular institutions than even this distressing example is the proposal to transfer, by indirection, the chief prerogative of one department of the Government to another. As all are well aware, the Constitution vests in Congress exclusively the power to declare war, but it also decares that a duly executed treaty 'shall be the supreme law of the land.' Precedent and practice, moreover, make it incumbent upon one department of the Government to make effective any agreement duly entered into under given authority by another.

"Under Article X. of the Versailles Covenant, now being subjected to a solemn referendum, it would be the appointee and representative of the President, not of Congress nor of the people, who would either acquiesce in or reject a proposition in the Council of the League to uphold by force of arms the cause of one power against another.

"It comes down, then, to this:

"Do the American people want to transfer the war-making power in practice from the Congress to the President? That is what acceptance of Article X. of the Covenant as the supreme law of the land would do. Whether such acceptance would violate the letter of the Constitution is perhaps a question. That it would violate the spirit of the Constitution there can be no question in any honest mind in all the land.

"The Constitution or the Covenant—that, my countrymen, that is the paramount issue. The two are irreconcilable. We cannot be governed from both Geneva and Washington. We cannot follow our present Chief Magistrate without forsaking the 'Father of our Country.' We cannot pin our faith to hazy visions of the future without putting out of mind the stern realities of the past. We can and shall do right, as we always have done right, by our fellow men the world over, but the question immediately confronting us is our own, to be decided by ourselves.

Prospered Under the Constitution.

"Under the Constitution we have prospered and developed. Under the Constitution we have kept alive the watchfires of freedom and have maintained the open door of liberty. Under the Constitution we have seen millions of people, self-governed, self-controlled, work out their destiny in ordered liberty. Under the Constitution we have worshipped God in accordance with conscience, without let or hindrance, and we have seen the reins of power transferred from hand to hand, in bloodless revolution, at the behest of the people.

"Under the Constitution we have welcomed the oppressed and unfortunate of every land, and shared with those who desired and deserved our heritage and citizenship.

"Under our Constitution, with the amendments so readily made when major sentiment is evoked, every man and every woman may have an equal voice and vote in the Government which he helps establish, maintain and direct. Under it the rights of each and all are guaranteed. Every citizen is made, so far as our imperfect human nature permits, safe in his person, his property, his rights of every kind.

"No honest man who loves his kind can ask more than that. When he does not receive that, the fault is all or partly his own, and flows not from failure of plan of government, but from failure of performance.

"For myself, I have only this to say: Before entering on the execution of my office, if you elect me to be your President, I shall be required solemnly to swear that I will, 'to the best of my ability, preserve, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States.'

"I take that oath now, my countrymen, on this, the one hundred and thirty-third anniversary of the birth of the ark of our covenant of freedom."

Delegations of foreign born citizens from many countries will arrive here tomorrow from New York, Philadelphia, Cleveland, Chicago and other large cities and will be addressed from the front porch by Senator Harding.

'MEREST DRIBBLE,' ROOSEVELT ANSWERS

He Declares Harding's Statement 'An Apparently Deliberate Attempt to Deceive.'

Special to The New York Times.

HARTFORD, Conn., Sept. 17.—Franklin D. Roosevelt issued tonight this statement concerning the allegations made by Senator Harding at Marion today about his connection with the alleged "rape of Haiti and San Domingo."

"When the Marion speech today was shown me I immediately sent to Senator Harding, at Marion, the following telegram:

Regret to see in today's speech you have put into my mouth an alleged statement about the votes in the League of Nations of Haiti and San Domingo which I had already publicly denied making, and which denial was printed in all the leading newspapers. I cannot believe you did this intentionally. F. D. ROOSEVELT.

"Mr. Harding has been a member of the United States Senate since the Government was compelled to intervene in Haiti and San Domingo in order to prevent a recurrence of conditions at our very doors which were deemed intolerable. This action on the part of the United States not only met with no protest from the Senate, but was done with the full knowledge of everybody.

"As I remember it, the United States was obliged to restore order in Haiti in 1915, and in San Domingo shortly after that. Since that time there has been no effort to conceal the United States policy of helping these countries to get back on their feet, financially and every other ways, and to enable them as soon as possible to operate again under their own legislatures. This has already been accomplished in the case of Haiti.

"Senator Harding is quoted as saying: 'Practically all we know now is that thousands of native Haitians have been killed by American Marines, and that many of our gallant men have sacrificed their lives at the behest of an executive department in order to establish laws drafted by an Assistant Secretary of the Navy to secure a vote in the League, and to continue, at the point of the bayonet, a military domination which at this moment requires the presence of no less than 3,000 of our armed men on that foreign soil'.

"Such a statement as that is the merest dribble, and if Senator Harding made it he did it in an apparently deliberate attempt to deceive, for even he, through his service in the United States Senate, must know why the Marines were sent and why they are kept there. It is in line with the same policy observed by President Roosevelt and President Taft, under which for years we have maintained and still are maintaining small detachments of Marines in Pekin and Nicaraugua.

"Such tactics on the part of Senator Harding is another evidence of his 'win at any cost' policy of trying to rouse racial hatreds. It is happily true that this will neither disturb our sister republics nor deceive intelligent Americans."

$150,000,000 Worth of Eggs Wasted Each Year

Milk is the best food and the cheapest of all foods of animal origin.

IT has been estimated by reliable agencies that the United States wastes $150,000,000 worth of eggs a year. At every step of the journey to your the egg crop suffers appalling losses. From Farmer to Gatherer to Buyer to Jobber to Retailer, the eggs go, leaving a trail of waste and paying a profit to each hand through which they pass. And each good egg you eat helps pay for the waste.

With milk there is practically no waste. We take all the farmer produces. It reaches you, without waste, either as milk, butter or cheese. And milk passes through but one set of hands. Only one profit.

No waste, no handling and re-handling. Direct from the farm to your door in a few hours. That is one of the reasons why milk is the most economical food.

Wanted—A Copy Writer

An established advertising agency requires the services of a copy-writer—the essentials being real copy-writing ability, practical experience and unassailable personal character—one who appreciates that the advertiser is spending money to get business, not to give generalities, high-flown language, and so-called "snappy stuff"—a joy ride at his expense.

The man for the position may now be in a copy department as assistant, but doing the real work for which someone else is getting the reward.

If you can produce copy above the average, and produce it abundantly, the compensation offered will be generous and the opportunity for the future unusual and unlimited.

$6 and $8 Hats - $4.35

I CALLED the turn. What goes up must come down. Months ago, when other retailers were buying, prices were way up. I was patient — I waited. When the manufacturers found their production was greater than the demand, prices broke. Then I stepped in and bought the very cream of the hat industry, at prices but little higher than I'd have to pay for second and third rate hats.

Here they are: the finest hats that ever entered my stores. Come, get the biggest hat bargain of your life for but little more than others ask for the inferior article. Understand, you can buy cheaper hats most anywhere—cheaper in price, cheaper in quality. But who would pass up a $6 or $8 hat at $4.35 to save a few cents, and wear a hat that looks and is inferior.

Don't take my word for it. See for yourself. My windows will show you. Plenty of soft hats with those rich, wide, silk bands with bows in back—you'll not find them elsewhere. Think of it—genuine $6 and $8 felts—soft and stiff—all at—

LEAGUE EXPERTS RULE AGAINST FINNS

Legal Authorities Say They Have No Valid Claim to the Aland Islands.

FINNS MAY IGNORE DECISION

If They Do, and Fight Sweden, It Will Probably Mean Civil War in Finland.

RACIAL DIVISIONS THERE

Wealthy and Progressive "Finlanders," of Swedish Origin, Opposed to Finnish Radicals.

By WALTER DURANTY.

Copyright, 1920, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Sept. 16.—The legal experts of the League of Nations have decided that the Aland Islands do not belong to Finland. This will afford an acid test of the exact present practical authority of the League.

These islands, which on the map lie half way between Sweden and Finland, at the entrance of the Gulf of Bothnia, are linked to the Finnish coast by the dense archipelago of which they form the largest and most western outpost. Between them and Sweden there lies a deep stretch of open sea which practically never freezes, whereas from the end of November to the middle of March the area from Finland to Mariehamn, the Aland capital, is solidly icebound. Nevertheless, the population is nine-tenths Swedish, and demands that the islands be given to Sweden or else that complete autonomy be accorded. This the Finns have refused, declaring that the islands belonged to Russia, and were in fact during a large part of the year practically part of the Finnish mainland and were therefore necessary to Finland on strategic grounds. Feeling in both countries has run very high, especially since the breach was widened a few months ago by the arbitrary arrest by the Finnish authorities of leading Alanders of Swedish stock. They were subsequently released, and Finland herself appealed to the League of Nations. It was made clear at the time that Finland asked the verdict of the League on consultative grounds only and did not undertake to accept it as final, not yet being a member of the League.

The verdict being adverse, it is highly probable that Finland will ignore it. Indeed, I was repeatedly told by persons of authority in Helsingfors last Winter that the country would not hesitate to fight rather than give up the islands.

On the other hand, Swedish opinion cannot fail to be affected by the League's recognition of the rights of the Swedish population. The quarrel is embittered by the fact that the Swedes are not only a proud people, with aristocratic and military traditions, but also that they despise the Finns as a semi-barbarous and inferior race. In Finland itself nearly all commerce and industry are in the hands of a minority of Swedish race—Finlanders, as they call themselves, in order not to be confused with the indigenous Finns. The great prosperity and beauty of Helsingfors is entirely their work, while the Finns mostly own land and confine themselves to agricultural pursuits.

The Finns outnumber the Finlanders by about three to one, and the party in power being agrarians the Government is almost wholly in Finnish hands. A further complication is introduced by the acute political differences. When Finland went Red after Lenin's revolution its Bolsheviki were nearly all Finns or Russians, whereas Mannerheim's White Guard, which bloodily broke them, was composed of Finlanders. So the Aland affair presents a problem which demands skill on the part of the League leaders if bloodshed is to be averted.

War between Finland and Sweden would mean civil war in Finland as well, but the Finns are a most obstinate people, and many of them regard the Finlanders as foreign invaders. What is more, the finger of Moscow is ready to dip into a pie that promises such trouble.

FOX DENIES HE IS LE ROY.

Tells Minister to Uruguay He Is Innocent of Trunk Murder.

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay, Sept. 16.—Robert Emmett Jeffery, United States Minister to Uruguay, today heard Morris Fox, in jail here as the suspected perpetrator of the Detroit and New York "trunk murder," tell a detailed story of his movements during the last few years. Fox asked to see Mr. Jeffery, asserting he would prove he was not Eugene Le Roy, the man wanted by the Detroit police.

The Minister warned Fox that anything he might say might be used against him, and Fox replied: "I have nothing to conceal. I have lived straight and was never arrested before in my life. I want to tell you everything so you will believe I am Morris Fox and nobody else."

During the conversation, Fox named six young men with whom he boarded at Coney Island, New York, from May 1 to Aug. 2, 1920, and who could swear, he said, he was with them and not in Detroit when the murder in question was committed. Mr. Jeffery intends to continue the examination tomorrow, and in the meantime, the police are awaiting the arrival of finger print records from New York.

WOULD REVOKE CITIZENSHIP

Action in Philadelphia Against Egyptian as Propagandist.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 17.—Proceedings to revoke the American citizenship of Dr. Mansur Mustaf Rifat, an Egyptian, alleged to be a paid anti-English propagandist employed by the German Government, have been begun in the United States District Court here.

Dr. Rifat, who is a graduate of the Jefferson Medical College in this city, was naturalized while a student here. He is alleged to have obtained his papers illegally and to have forfeited all his rights of naturalization by establishing a permanent residence in Egypt within five years of the time he was granted his papers. March 7, 1921, was fixed for a hearing on the petition in order that Rifat might receive notice at Cairo.

Secretary Houston Opposes Wider Federal Credits

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—Extension of credit by the Government does not seem warranted by present conditions, Secretary Houston said today, attributing much of the popular clamor for more credit to persons desiring to hold their good for higher prices.

The Government could hardly aid in withholding commodities from the markets by extension of credit, the Secretary declared, without being a party to a conspiracy in restraint of trade and making more secure high-level prices.

Credit expansion recently has been ample, the Secretary said, to provide for the movement of crops, and the general tendency has been more toward expansion than restriction. The situation, he added, is clearing gradually.

BAKER SAYS LEAGUE PREVENTED ONE WAR

ATTACKS HARDING'S STAND

Wants to Know Whose "Teeth" Senator Intends to Put in Hague Tribunal.

WATERLOO, Ia., Sept. 17.—There will be no peace in Europe until the burden of armament is lifted and the fear of war destroyed, Secretary Baker declared here today in a speech devoted wholly to discussion of the Treaty of Versailles and the League of Nations Covenant.

Challenging a statement from Senator Harding's speech accepting the Republican Presidential nomination that the League was "so utterly impotent to prevent wars that it has not even been tried," Secretary Baker declared the League's operation "has already saved one war, though Senator Harding did not know it." He recited the submission to the League Council by Sweden and Finland of the Aland Island dispute.

"Under the old order," Mr. Baker said, "Finland would instantly have occupied the Aland Islands with her military forces; Sweden would have mobilized her fleet, cut off Finnish ships if possible and prepared expeditionary forces for immediate attack. But the League in operation has already prevented one war."

The Secretary also took issue with what he described as Senator Harding's assertion that some such international court as The Hague tribunal with "teeth" in it was the sole agency necessary for the preservation of world peace.

"All of which sounds very simple," Mr. Baker continued, "but whose 'teeth' is the Senator going to put into The Hague tribunal? His criticism of the covenant of the League of Nations is that it may require the use of the armed forces of the United States. Now, our armed forces are our teeth; the sanction of the court is the force it can use to put its decrees and judgments into operation; if The Hague tribunal is to have teeth it is to have force, and the only kind of force which operates among nations is armed force.

"We get nowhere by changing the name of the thing; we get nowhere by using the word 'teeth' when we mean 'soldiers.' It is clear that such a court as Senator Harding must have had in mind would be far more of a super-State than has yet been proposed by anybody; while the only kind of a court that has the least chance of being organized with the consent of the other nations of the world is a court which can decide legal questions and leave the conciliation of political controversies among the States to the friendly offices of such a body as the Council of the League."

In picturing the machinery set up for the League, Mr. Baker said that the use of military force was "an open question."

"Should a proper case arise," he continued, "the Council would recommend to the several Governments of the League what, in its judgment, ought to be done in a military way; but the action of the Council must be unanimous, and even then it is merely advisory, so that there is no power in the League anywhere, whether by inference of by statement, to compel any nation to use its armed forces or to contribute its armed forces against its consent given at the time it surveys the controversy and measures the necessity. Each nation retains a complete veto upon any recommendation which may be made that it use its military force against any other nation in any controversy."

RUMANIA DEPOSITS TREATY RATIFICATION

Makes Twenty-sixth Nation to Approve the Compact and Thirty-ninth to Enter the League.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—The State Department was advised today that Rumania deposited ratifications of the Treaty of Versailles on Sept. 14. This makes a total of twenty-six signatories of the Versailles Treaty which have deposited their ratifications at Paris. The complete list of signatories which have deposited ratifications follows: Belgium, Bolivia, Brazil, British Empire—Canada, Australia, South Africa, New Zealand, India—Cuba, Czechoslovakia, France, Greece, Guatemala, Haiti, Italy, Japan, Jugloslavia (Serbs, Croats and Slovenes), Liberia, Peru, Poland, Portugal, Rumania, Siam, Uruguay, Germany.

The membership of the League of Nations under the Versailles Treaty is now thirty-nine with Rumania's accession. The official list of members of the League was given out by Secretary Colby today as follows:

Argentine Republic.	Italy.

HARDING RESTATES HIS LEAGUE VIEWS

Tells Schurman He Favors Association of Nations with International Court.

WANTS HAGUE PERFECTED

Insists That the Present League Is an Offensive and Defensive Alliance.

MARION, Ohio, Sept. 17.—Senator Harding made public today a letter concerning his views on the League of Nations, which he has sent to Dr. Jacob Gould Schurman, President of Cornell University.

Dr. Schurman had written Senator Harding, saying that on Saturday a conference of college and university executives and faculty members would be held in New York, largely comprising scholars interested in the international policies of this country, particularly with reference to the association of this country with other nations in behalf of world peace. Dr. Schurman suggested that a message from Senator Harding on the subject would be welcomed and accordingly Senator Harding sent this letter:

"Marion, Ohio, Sept. 15, 1920.

"Dr. Jacob Gould Schurman, President's House, Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y.:

"My Dear Dr. Schurman—Your letter of Sept. 11 is before me, with its suggestion that a word of greeting to the conference of university people which you will hold on Saturday, Sept. 18, might be acceptable. I am very glad to comply.

"The difference between our attitude toward the League of Nations and that of our opponents is easily stated. President Wilson has twice rejected the opportunity to secure ratification of the peace treaty with what the Senate agreed upon as safeguarding reservations, because he insists upon the original Article X. as the very essence of the covenant. The Democratic platform indorses this attitude and the Democratic nominee has unqualifiedly committed himself to it. We must in fairness to him assume that if he had the authority he would stand by this position. If he should be elected, indeed, we would have to assume that the country had given him a mandate to accomplish this.

"The Democratic nominee has declared 'in favor of going in' to the covenant the President brought back from Paris. I oppose going into that league. I favor participation in a world association of nations with an international court of justice, a tribunal that shall be governed by definite principles of international law. I favor a world association aiming at the practical expression of the consciences of nations planned to focus world opinion.

"I am opposed to an offensive and defensive alliance of powers seeking to dominate the rest of the world. Even the other great powers which were to have been associated with us in this proposed alliance were themselves hesitant about accepting it.

"I heartily favor an association of nations inspired by ideals of justice and fair dealing, rather than of power and self-interest. Such an association could and I believe would be potent in the effort to maintain peace. The Hague tribunal gives us the foundation of such an organization. Under the conditions now prevailing in the world, with the world fully realizing the awfulness of modern war, it is wholly possible to perfect The Hague tribunal so that its determinations shall be effective, and accepted without surrender of national rights.

"I recognize that the world's peace is now to a great extent intertwined with the settlement of Versailles. From that settlement I would save all that is good and useful. An association of nations for purposes of conference, and a world court with jurisdiction of justiciable questions would, I am confident, now be accepted by all nations.

"This plan, we have been repeatedly assured by European statesmen, would meet their approval. Mr. Lloyd George has frankly expressed opinion that the League of Nations covenant might well be changed for the better. Certainly it is our thought to improve, to save and build upon whatever is good rather than to abandon the good there is and repudiate the world's aspirations for peace.

"Viscount Grey has generously proposed that the Americans be intrusted with drafting a reconstruction scheme. It is apparent that the enlightened leadership of Europe wishes us to do this, and I should feel that to refuse would be a dereliction. As I view it, we have an opportunity to do a great service to the world if we will but undertake this effort which the world wishes us to undertake.

"On the other hand, I can not but feel that for us to continue insistence upon a plan which has proved ineffective, upon which our own people can not unite, and which the world recognizes as incapable of preserving peace, would be to make this country recreant to a service which we really aspire to render to mankind. The Republican Party will not place itself in such a position, nor will it surrender the supreme inheritance of national freedom and self-determination.

"Sincerely yours

"WARREN G. HARDING."

International Conference Will Ask the Press for Suggestions.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—American Commissioners to the International Communications Conference, it was said today at the State Department, will arrange a conference with press association officials for the purpose of obtaining suggestions for the betterment of communication facilities with foreign countries. The subject is expected to engage the serious attention of the forthcoming International Communications Conference to be held here next month.

Representatives of telegraph and cable companies also will be invited to confer with the Commissioners before the preliminary session of the conference.

In preparation for the international gathering study of world communications is in progress not only by the State Department, under whose direction the conference will be held, but also by the Commerce, Navy and War Departments, each of which has a special interest in the subject.

HONOLULU, Sept. 17.—The Chinese Government has decided to stop payment of the Boxer indemnity to Russia, according to Peking advices quoted in a Tokio cable to the Nippu Jiji, and as a result diplomatic and consular representatives of the former Russian Government throughout China will depart in the near future.

Genoa Reds Try to Lower American Flag on Consulate as Funeral of Comrade Passes

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—An attempted violation of the American Consulate at Genoa by workmen displaying red flags was reported to the Department of State today. The American Embassy at Rome communicated a report to the department that Vice Consul Murphy, in charge of American affairs at Genoa, had reported the incident, which was in connection with the funeral of workmen who had been shot during a clash with Italian police authorities in disturbances on Sept. 10.

"As the funeral procession with red flags was passing the American Consulate," the department announced, "a number of workmen rushed into the building and tried to enter the Consulate office with a view to lowering the American flag to half-mast in respect to the dead for whom the demonstration was being made.

"Vice Consul Murphy stopped the crowd seeking entrance to his private office, refusing the demand that the American flag be lowered to half-mast and ordered the crowd out of the Consulate. He also, as a precaution, gave orders to bring the flag into the Consulate.

"The workmen finally left after considerable expostulation, during which they indulged in insulting language.

"There were no Italian soldiers or police on duty in the vicinity of the Consulate, although usually there have been some stationed there on duty.

"The Italian authorities promptly expressed regret over the incident."

PARIS RAT PLAGUE HAS HUMOROUS SIDE

Swindler Attempts to Collect Bounty on Counterfeits of Rodents' Tails.

Cables Paris Hotel Manager She Won't Take Rooms in a City Infested with Rats.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Sept. 16.—This cablegram, says Clement Vautel in the Journal today, has been received by the manager of a large Paris hotel:

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—Learn that Paris is infested by rats. Abandoning voyage. Can dispose of apartment reserved for October.

DAISY BLACKWELL.

For the sake of the good name of Paris one must hasten to assure Daisy Blackwell that the Paris rats are not yet either so numerous or so ferocious as those of Hamelin. On the whole, they are tame, quiet rats, which, getting plenty to eat, have so far refrained from attacking Parisians and disport themselves mostly in the cellars and streets after dark. They have not yet, at least, invaded the bedrooms of first-class hotels, and the dining rooms, except in some of the smaller restaurants of the Latin Quarter, are so far free from them. One was reported the other evening to have jumped on the footboard of a taxicab and taken a free ride along the Boulevard; but such incidents are exceptional.

By October the city fathers and police hope to have reduced the rat army, whose numbers are now estimated at 8,000,000, by a considerable amount. So far the offensive cannot be said to have been crowned by success. An average bag of 3,000 a day is all that has been counted since the beginning of hostilities. Much bigger figures than these are expected when the offensive is developed and the strategic methods of the rat killing brigade have had their full effect.

Meanwhile a shocking story of human depravity has been unearthed by the police, and the offender has been arrested. Not content with trying to earn the 5-cent reward offered for each rat killed and delivered, a wily Parisian has been inventing rat tails and getting rewards for them. When he arrived at the station where the rewards are paid he was informed that the whole body of the rat was required as proof of death, but he explained that he had invented a capsule which when the unfortunate rodent had eaten it blew it to pieces, leaving only the tail intact.

This explanation was accepted, and for four days the inventor came with an assortment of about 250 tails. On the fifth day he found a policeman waiting for him. Some one had taken the trouble to examine the tails and had discovered that they were made of string and India rubber. At the inventor's home 2,000 ready-made tails were found by the police. Daisy Blackwell can, however, be assured that not all the rats being destroyed in Paris just now are represented only by their tails.

D'ANNUNZIO'S REALM IN FINANCIAL STRAITS

Rome Refuses Request for Aid—Poet Hopes for Recognition of 'Regency.'

FIUME, Sept. 16 (Associated Press).—In making up the Cabinet of the Provisional Government of the "Italian Regency of Quarnero," which he proclaimed recently, Gabriele d'Annunzio has retained the title of Commander, which is permitted by the new Constitution "in time of extreme national danger."

The economic situation of Fiume is becoming worse, and a delegation from the National Council which went to Rome recently returned in a discouraged state of mind, having failed to receive from Premier Giolitti any assurances of financial assistance to enable Fiume to keep up its resistance. Hitherto the city has flourished on Red Cross supplies, cargoes of which d'Annunzio's vessels brought in at intervals. Even yet there is plenty of food in the city, but its finances and industry are in bad shape.

Matteo Pantaleoni, the noted Italian economist, well known in American economic circles, is now in Fiume to assist the poet in readjusting the serious financial situation of the city.

DEMOCRATS AID HARDING.

Rhinelander Waldo Heads League to Work for Republican Nominee.

The Harding Democratic League has entered the campaign. Rhinelander Waldo, ex-Police Commissioner, is head of the organization, which has opened headquarters at 47 West Forty-second Street. William Bullock, who was in charge of Tammany Hall's Bureau of City Inquiry and has been active in Democratic municipal politics for years, is Vice President. According to announcement yesterday the league is to be country-wide in scope, with an Executive Committee already formed and composed of 100 Democrats from different States.

"Sentiment for the Harding League began to grow among Democrats following the call of Governor Cox on President Wilson," said Colonel Waldo yesterday. "Many Democrats were for Cox in the belief he stood against Wilsonism and the Wilson League of Nations. They turned against Cox when he hurried to Washington and came away from the White House announcing himself in thorough accord with Woodrow Wilson. All the Democrats in the Harding League are opposed to having Cox in the White House as a Wilson proxy and rubber stamp."

FRANCE MAY CHOOSE PRESIDENT SEPT. 23

STILL PRESSING MILLERAND

But Ministers Are Forced to Consider Other Candidates, Including Bourgeois and Jonnart.

Copyright, 1920, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Sept. 17.—At the Cabinet meeting this morning Premier Millerand officially informed his collegues of President Deschanel's wish to retire. His resignation will take effect Monday. The Cabinet, in accord with the Presidents of the Chamber and Senate, following the usual custom, decided to summon the two chambers for an extraordinary session next Tuesday. The resignation of the President will be communicated to them and the campaign begun for the election of his successor. It is expected that Léon Bourgeois will summon the National Assembly to meet at Versailles next Thursday, when a new President will be elected.

Who this will be there is as yet no sure indication. If Premier Millerand will reconsider his decision, as he is being urged to do in many quarters, there is little doubt that his election will be unanimous. Of his acceptance there seems, however, little likelihood, unless after the President's resignation is officially made he allows himself to be persuaded. At the Cabinet meeting his Ministers urged him to allow his name to be put forward, but he energetically persisted in his refusal.

The Ministers were then forced to consider other candidates, and it is stated that Leon Bourgeois, President of the Senate and of the Council of the League of Nations, will be urged to accept the nomination. His age and blindness he himself, however, considers, too, great obstacles, and in the expected case of his refusal the two most prominent candidates remaining are Senator Jonnart and Raoul Peret, President of the Chamber of Deputies. Neither can be considered a strong candidate, and, always failing Millerand, there is plenty of opportunity for a dark horse, such as Georges Leygues or Gaston Doumergue.

The amenities of the election are well exemplified by the attitude of Mm. Millerand and Jonnart. The former has proclaimed that M. Jonnart is his candidate, and in an interview today M. Jonnart, when asked who his candidate was, replied: "Why, Millerand."

The only person whose position seems quite defined is Ex-Premier Clemenceau. In the full enjoyment of his everlasting youth he is busy preparing for a trip to India. He will start next Wednesday. Presidential elections interest him no more.

"I am a private citizen," he told an interviewer, "and I want to be left in the ranks. I'm off for Ceylon and start next week. Perhaps they'll nominate me king by acclamation. In that case I'll stay at least a fortnight to enjoy absolute power at my ease. Two weeks ought to be enough. After that I'm going to India. I always have had a weakness for the delights of religious power."

"If they proclaim you Emperor of India," asked the interviewer, "what job will you give me?"

"I'll make you assistant inspector of the dancing girls," replied the Tiger.

"But why only assistant inspector?" asked the interviewer.

"Pardon," was the reply. "I'm keeping the job of principal inspector for myself."

Smiling and happy, old "Father Victory" bowed the interviewer to the door.

"And are you going to write a book about your travels and experiences?" he shot as his last question.

"Yes, after I'm dead," was the answer, and the defeated candidate at the last Presidential election turned to go on with his preparations for his voyage. There is no question of his being again a candidate for such honors as France can bestow.

Since his unexplained venture in the canal at Rambouillet a week ago President Deschanel has remained in bed suffering from the shock of the incident. It is no wreported that after he was dragged out of the water by a fisherman he did not speak till he had been undressed and put to bed. Then, in a quiet voice apropos of nothing, he remarked: "It's cold today."

It is now admitted that a month before he fell from the train last May the President had a curious adventure. He had gone for an automobile drive in the forest of St. Germain and in the middle of the forest left the car to take a walk alone. About an hour later he returned to his car dripping wet; but neither then nor on his return to the Elysée could he explain what had happened to him.

In the lobbies of the Chamber today the betting odds on the Presidential election were: Millerand, even; Jonnart and Bourgeois, 3 to 1; Peret and Ribot, 4 to 1; Castelnau, 6 to 1; Foch and Barthou, 7 to 1; Briand, 9 to 1; Viviani, 10 to 1; Poincaré and Joffre, 12 to 1.

BECK TO OPEN DRIVE IN CITY.

Republican Campaign Starts Monday with Carnegie Hall Rally.

James M. Beck will be the principal speaker at a mass meeting to be held in Carnegie Hall on Monday evening under the auspices of the New York Salesmen's Harding and Coolidge Club. This rally will mark the opening of the Republican National campaign in this city.

Mrs. Alexander Carlisle Pfeiffer of Boston, who placed Governor Coolidge in nomination for the Vice Presidency at the Republican National Convention, and Louis K. Liggett will be the other speakers.

POLES USE AIRPLANES FOR RIGA MEETING

LATVIA MAKES PROPOSAL

Would Act as Intermediary in Lithuanian-Polish Dispute—Suggests Riga for Parley.

RIGA, Sept. 17 (Associated Press).—A Polish courier left Riga this afternoon by airplane for Danzig, whence he expects to leave by train for Warsaw, carrying official and private messages from the Polish peace delegation which has arrived here to discuss armistice and peace terms with the Bolsheviki.

It is the intention of the Poles to arrange for an airplane courier service over the same route during the conference, which will be in striking contrast to the lack of communications between Minsk, where the first conference was held, and Warsaw.

Secretary Lados of the Polish Delegation, this afternoon paid a visit to the Secretary of the Soviet Commission to arrange the details of the conference and the date of the first meeting between the Plenipotentiaries. It is believed the first session will be held next Monday. M. Dombski, head of the Polish Mission, will call on Adolph Joffe, the leader of the Soviet Delegation, tomorrow for the purpose of observing official courtesies and to discuss with Joffe the nature of the approaching conference.

MOSCOW, Sept. 15 (Associated Press).—Russia is stronger than ever in a military way, declares Léon Trotzky, the Minister of War, in a review of the military situation and the prospects of peace, contributed to the Pravda. A new offensive by the Russians is in preparation, the War Minister declares, and he intimates that through it it is purposed to give Poland a real desire for peace, which he declares she now lacks.

Although driven back from Warsaw, Trotzky points out, the Soviet army still occupies approximately 400 of the 600 versts covered in the advance. The independence of Lithuania has been secured, he says, while the Ukraine and White Russia have been freed from the Polish occupation. The army is now consolidating its forces and preparing a new and powerful offensive, he asserts.

Poland's expressed desire for peace is insincere, the War Minister argues, as is shown by her "consistent policy of procrastination." The latest Polish telegram to Foreign Minister Tchitcherin, he notes, insists upon the representation at the Riga peace conference of the "Ukrainian Democratic Republic." He calls this the "Petlurean Ukraine, which is non-existent." The Ukrainian Soviet Republic is a fact and will participate in the negotiations, but the "Petlurean Ukraine" is a Polish myth, and the effort to induce it into the negotiations he characterizes as typical Polish tactics.

Russia, while desiring peace, declares Trotzky, is forced to the inevitable conclusion that nothing but a severe lesson taught by the Red Army will bring the Poles to reason.

RUSSIA FACES FAMINE.

Copyright, 1920, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 17.—A special dispatch to the Berlingske Tidende from Kovno says that, according to the Bolshevist organ Isvestia, a crisis is impending in the food situation in Russia, an unusual drought having upset all calculations.

Especially have the grain-producing districts round the Volga River suffered and in many places the harvest is so bad that there will be insufficient seed for the coming year. Also the hay crops failed, which, combined with the failure of the grain harvest, threatens livestock with starvation.

IRISH BILL EXPLAINED.

Official Statement Denies Reported Intention to Arm Ulster.

New administrative measures for Ulster, proposed by the British Government, do not contemplate the arming of the Ulster Volunteers, as recently reported in some quarters, it is declared in an official communication received yesterday from London by the British Library of Information in this city.

With reference to the bill mentioned it may be noted that the Government of Ireland bill, or Home Rule measure, still pending in Parliament, provides for the separate administration of the Ulster counties, with the stipulation that a single administration may be set up by the Irish people as a whole if both sections unite in deciding upon such action.

"The appointment of an Assistant Under Secretary for the six counties is in preparation," the communication says, "for bringing into operation provisions of the bill. These provisions are applicable to Southern Ireland if accepted there.

"There is no idea of arming the Ulster Volunteers. Every citizen ready to help in maintaining order and allegiance to the King can be enrolled, quite irrespective of his religious or political tenets.

"The offer made by the Prime Minister in Parliament, viz., to discuss any proposal put forward by anybody who can claim to represent Irish opinion, so long as those proposals include separate treatment for Ulster and do not involve secession of any part of Ireland from the Empire, or the risk to the military security of these islands in times of war, is not affected by the administrative proposals for Ulster in connection with the above, and is the policy of his Majesty's Government. To that offer there has been as yet no definite reply."

HITS IRISH INQUIRY PLAN.

London Paper Calls The Nation's Proposal Futile and Dangerous.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sept. 17.—Remarking "there are always people in all countries who do foolish things," the Westminster Gazette says that the New York Nation's proposal for an investigation into the reported Irish atrocities has no regard for "the effect it would have on feeling in this country or in Ireland." It continues:

"Happily, the citizens of America have an abundant share of common sense, and no considerable proportion of them is likely to support a proposal at once futile and dangerous. America has her internal troubles, as we have ours, and in either case interference from the outside would be the most direct way of increasing difficulties."

187,000 Red Casualties in Poland.

A Warsaw official wireless dispatch was picked up by the British Admiralty wireless station on Aug. 27. It gave the total Bolshevist losses since the battle for Warsaw, July 20-Aug. 10, as follows: Prisoners, 107,000; killed and seriously wounded, 80,000; escaped to East Prussia, 30,000. Total, 187,000 in all.

Two $10,000,000 Libel Suits By Chicago Against Papers

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.—As an aftermath of the recent primary election campaign, during which The Chicago Tribune and The Chicago Daily News bitterly assailed Mayor William Hale Thompson and his policies, the two newspapers were made defendants today in suits brought by the City of Chicago to recover $10,000,000 damages from each publication for charging that the city was bankrupt and its credit exhausted.

According to Assistant Corporation Counsel Cleveland, this is the first instance of a city suing a newspaper for damages in this country.

Corporation Counsel issued a statement saying:

"These false statements that the city is bankrupt and its credit exhausted have been published broadcast all over the country. They have resulted in injury to the bonds issued by the city; they have injured the morale of the city employes; they have so affected the credit of the city that it is compelled to pay much higher prices for supplies and materials than it would otherwise, and in general they have so injured the financial credit of the city that the Mayor has deemed it his duty to have these suits brought so as to recover in part at least the damage the city has sustained."

BERLIN SOCIALISTS FORCING A CRISIS

Program of Radical Educational Reforms Alienates Conservatives.

NEW ELECTION MAY RESULT

Copyright, 1920, by The New York Times Company.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Sept. 16.—The election of Dr. Loewenstein to the Presidency of the Board of Education by the combined vote of members of both Socialist Parties in the Berlin City Parliament has given such a warning of the approach of a political crisis that Chancellor Fehrenbach has hastened to Freudenstadt, in the Black Forest, to consult President Ebert, who is spending his vacation there, and get him to use his personal influence with the Socialists to abandon their policy of standing aside and creating difficulties for the present Government, and to re-enter the Cabinet and share responsibilities.

The regular Socialist Party, after the last election, declared that it could not permit its members to sit in the same Cabinet with notorious monarchists, meaning certain members of the Deutsche Volkspartei, but promised to observe an attitude of benevolent neutrality toward Dr. Fehrenbach's Government so long as it kept within the limits of the Republican Constitution.

It must be admitted that, whatever the present Government's faults may be, it has certainly never violated the Republican Constitution; but the Socialist Party's attitude very often was neither benevolent nor neutral. Many of the shortcomings of the Fehrenbach Government are directly traceable to the fact that it has not the backing of the regular Socialists, who are still numerically the strongest party in the Reichstag.

While in the Reichstag the regular Socialists very seldom act in harmony with the Independent Socialists, there is a much better understanding between them in the Prussian National Convention, and especially in the Berlin City Parliament. In Berlin the two Socialist Parties practically control the city government, and their election of Dr. Loewenstein as President of the Board of Education was with the idea of eliminating religion in the schools and reforming the method of teaching in the radical Socialist spirit, with the idea of extending such reforms through Prussia and nearly all of Germany.

The projected reform, according to Dr. Loewenstein's program, will not be confined to religious instruction, but will apply to all branches of teaching in the elementary and high schools.

If only the two conservative parties objected to this program it would hardly lead to a national crisis; but the Centrists and even the Democratic Party are equally offended by Loewenstein's program. Until his election the Centrists made all kinds of overtures to the regular Socialists to induce them to re-enter the Cabinet, but now the feeling among the Centrists is that unless the Loewenstein program is dropped there can be no co-operation between the two parties. Indeed, the Centrists threaten to decline all responsibility for the Government.

The members of the Deutsche Volkspartei have already moved in the Prussian National Convention that the election of Loewenstein be declared illegal on technical grounds, and if the motion comes to a vote the two Socialist parties will find themselves confronted by a bloc composed of all the other parties, which would doubtless lead to the dissolution of the Prussian Parliament and would have a similar effect in the Reichstag, as then any combination with the regular Socialists would become impossible.

Dr. Fehrenbach wishes to prevent a new election at this critical time and hopes to gain President Ebert's aid.

JUGOSLAVS ARE DEFIANT.

Refuse to Withdraw Troops from First Plebiscite Zone.

KLAGENFURT, Jugoslavia, Sept. 1.—Jugoslavia thus far has refused to withdraw her troops from the first plebiscite zone or reorganize the gendarmerie, as ordered by the plebiscite commission. Coercion squads, armed and frequently masked, are reported to be terrorizing the Austrians.

It is charged that the Jugoslavs are passively preventing the preparation of voting lists and it is considered possible the plebiscite will be deferred until the situation improves.

LADY ESSEX NOT ENGAGED.

Former Adele Grant Denies Report of Troth to Duke of Connaught.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sept. 17.—Lady Essex authorized today the statement that there is no truth in the New York report of her engagement to the Duke of Connaught.

Lady Essex was Adele Grant, daughter of the late Beach Grant of New York. She was married in London in 1893 to the Earl of Essex, who died in 1916. She has two daughters, the Lady Iris Mary and the Lady Joan Rachel.

IT'ALIAN MASTERS GIVE THEIR TERMS

Agree to Concede Workers a Share in Management, but Not Predominance.

DEMAND MILLS BE VACATED

INDIGNANT AT GIOLITTI

Unions Believe They Have Won a Big Victory in Board to Fix Control of Plants.

MILAN, Sept. 17.—The masters in the metal trades passed a resolution today accepting the proposal that the workers participate in the management of their concerns.

The condition is imposed that there shall be no predominance by the workmen's organization, but collaboration and reciprocal responsibility and no interference with the freedom necessary to the development of the industry.

The masters in their resolution insist that their representatives shall not participate on any commission with the workmen until the workmen have evacuated the factories they are now holding.

The Council of the Confederation of Manufacturers, at a meeting yesterday, following the intervention of Premier Giolitti and his decision to appoint a commission to deal with the situation in the metal-working industry, passed a resolution declaring that the fixing of the terms of control for the factories must be preceded by the evacuation of the works that have been occupied by the men, and that the means of control must be such that there would be no oppression of one class by another.

A prolonged discussion preceded the adoption of this resolution. The meeting was attended by 200 delegates, representing numerous firms. The President of the Confederation later left for home to confer with Premier Giolitti.

Employers and their supporters voice indignation over the Premier's intervention at the present phase of the situation, after maintaining neutrality when the works were occupied. They say workers would not have been able to take over factories except "through the connivance of the authorities with criminals," and they accuse the Government of being "the humble servant of the Bolsheviki." Nevertheless, employers agree they must necessarily bow to the storm.

It is declared Signor Giolitti threatened the employers with worse measures if they did not accept the workmen's proposal, and assertion is made that his firmness "approached brutality."

Leaders of the Confederation of Labor, and workers generally, seem to believe they have won a great victory in the decision of Premier Giolitti to appoint a commission to submit concrete proposals respecting participation by workmen in the technical, financial and disciplinary management of factories. Representatives of workmen declare the Premier took matters in his own hands when he found employers determined to resist, despite his counsel for moderation.

At the Socialist meeting last Sunday, during which the extreme element were defeated, Deputy Gennari, newspapers of this city say, read a written order from Nikolai Lenin, Russian Bolshevist Premier, directing "Italian comrades who adhered to the Third Internationale" to begin a revolution immediately. This letter, it is declared, produced tremendous excitement, a majority of those at the meeting resenting Lenin's interference. The defeat of the extremists is attributed to this sentiment.

ROME, Sept. 17.—Premier Giolitti returned to Rome this morning. He was received at the station by the members of the Cabinet, Senators and Deputies, who greeted him warmly.

Forty Senators later presented the Premier with a note, asking him what were the Government's intentions "regarding the many grave violations of the law and of fundamental constitutional guarantees which have profoundly disturbed the national conscience and injured the unity of the country at home and its credit abroad."

The Premier replied that he would make an important statement on the situation. He did not say when this would be done.

The entire personnel of the twenty-mile railroad from Rome to Tivoli, belonging to a Belgian company, has seized the line and decided to operate it in future for the benefit of the men.

Traffic is proceeding as usual. Red flags have been hoisted along the route and Red Guards are posted at the stations, with nobody opposing them. A Belgian, representing the company as director, was invited to remain if he wished, but he declined.

NAPLES, Sept. 17.—The workmen in the great Cirio factory where fruits are preserved reached an agreement today with their employers and lowered the red flag and returned the buildings they occupied to the owners.

BOY KILLED IN SHAM FIGHT.

Fragment of Shell Hits Four-Year-Old at Camp Meade.

CAMP MEADE, Md., Sept. 17.—With tanks, airplanes and artillery using loaded ammunition, the regular army re-enacted here today as a closing feature of the National Encampment of Veterans of Foreign Wars a detail of the fighting in the Meuse region of the Argonne. It was a carefully planned sham battle, but was not without a casualty. Carl Dornbush, a 4-year-old boy, was killed by a fragment of a shell from one of the guns used in laying down the miniature barrage.

The terrain was considered as completely cleared and all danger of spectators wandering into the field of fire thought to be enviated, but the eagerness of the crowds to obtain a better view of the operations resulted in groups advanc

ETTINGER REMINDS PRINCIPALS OF DUTY

A Laissez-Faire Policy May Satisfy Radicals, He Says, but It Leads to Disaster.

UNIONS SOMETIMES VICIOUS

Their Desirability Depends Upon Extent Teachers Are Prompted by Selfish Interests, He Declares.

City Superintendent of Schools Ettinger made an address on "Democratized School Administration" at a conference yesterday in the Board of Education Hall of associate and district superintendents, directors and assistant directors and inspectors of special branches. He said:

"Certainly, the schools of a democracy ought to be administered on a democratic basis, but it is no doubt true that the acceptance of this principle has not led to the elimination of modes of administration smacking strongly of either autocracy on the one hand or Sovietism on the other.

"My ideal school principal is one who runs an open door office and who, by sympathetic supervision, invites and encourages teachers to voice their best judgment with reference to the conduct of the school which the State and the municipality have entrusted to their care. I am a very firm believer in definite responsibilities and centralized authority. The principal and not the individual teacher is the responsible executive in charge of the school. A laissez-faire policy that means headless, spineless, decentralized supervision may temporarily satisfy radical minds, but is certain to lead to disaster." Discussing teacher unionism Dr. Ettinger said:

"While fully cognizant of the splendid results obtained in education because of the enlightened and continuous support of the American Federation of Labor during the past thirty years in the country at large, and particularly in the State of New York, such knowledge and appreciation do not lead me to believe that all of the reasons advanced in favor of teachers' unions are valid, or that the kind of unionism advocated by some within our system, calls for our commendation or support.

"The answer to the question as to whether or not unionism is desirable must be found in the motives that prompt teachers to join any group, whether it be a union, a fraternity or a federation. To the extent that such groupings are prompted primarily by selfish interests, and are based upon class appeal and concepts of economic and national life that run counter to those for which our Government stands, such groups, whether you call them by one name or another, are vicious and undemocratic. We cannot ignore the bald fact that the schools of a democracy are the schools of the whole people, and not the schools of a particular class. Moreover let me affirm with great emphasis that nothing can be more detrimental to our schools than the assumption that the classroom teachers constitute a laboring class, a sort of intellectual proletariat who differ both in kind and degree from supervisors and administrators who, by analogy, are classed as sort of a pedagogical capitalistic class, constituting the sworn oppressors of the teachers with whom they live and labor day by day, and from whose ranks they are chosen. Any appeal to gross prejudices or to narrow class consciousness, whether labelled unionism or what not, contains the germs common to anarchism or Bolshevism.

"A teachers', union and the general union movement among teachers are just as good or just as evil as teachers make them. It is therefore the bounden duty of teachers in such organizations to be active to prevent the use of such groups for personal, political, or professional exploitation, and, above all, to maintain and promote those fine conceptions of service to our children and to our city which have always distinguished the teaching profession.

"I intend to issue formal instructions to all principals to the effect that no report with reference to a teacher's status or service shall be forwarded to any examining board or other agency unless a duplicate of the same has been filed with the teacher affected, and unless the report bears a statement by the person responsible for the same to the effect that a duplicate copy has been filed with the teacher or person concerned.

"While no one is more willing than I am to eleminate, by the discontinuance of license or the preferment of charges, the teacher or supervisor who, because of diseased mentality, incompetency, indifference, or other basic unfitness, denies to our children the education to which they are justly entitled, and I may say by way of parenthesis that the performance of such disagreeable tasks is often accomplished in the face of great pressure and many obstacles, I am more than zealous to protect from injustice those whose ability and service entitle them to advancement or increased compensation."

Dr. Ettinger referred to the Wall Street explosion and urged his hearers to take special care of pupils in congested districts. He said with regard to automobile accidents:

"The automobile habit has so grown upon us in recent years that we must beware lest this type of vehicle, valuable from the standpoint of utility and pleasure, become a juggernaut to whom we make unceasing sacrifice of our children. We can perhaps safeguard our children by instructing and training them with reference to the dangers of street travel."

THE SCREEN

"Over the Hill to the Poor House," a motion picture based on Will Carleton's poem of the same name and also his "Over the Hill from the Poor House," was presented last night by William Fox at the Astor Theatre.

Seldom has a motion picture been so deliberately sentimental as this one. Its assault upon the emotions is undisguised and sweeping. It is ruthless in its mass attack.

Its capacity for tear-water and gallery cheers is unlimited. It does a wholesale business in the theatrical commodities of mother-love, filial nobility, the ungratefulness of children, the repentance of the wicked, the vengeance of the just, the triumph of right and so on. Without subtlety, without restraint, it pours out its appeal—its towering demand—for the laughs and the smiles and the sobs of susceptible spectators—of whom, as its makers know, there are many—and many more.

And yet with all this there is virtue in "Over the Hill to the Poor-House." Though one is offended by the superabundance of its sentimentality and inclined to resist its overt effort to be heart-rending, it must be admitted that occasionally it does strike a genuine note, sometimes it rings true clearly. And this saves it—this and the characterizations and settings in some of the scenes.

Of course, the story of "Over the Hill to the Poor House" is built upon some of the deepest and most fundamental sentiments of life, and, though it plays upon these for obvious effect, it also sounds a true note now and then and cannot be dismissed as simply cheap claptrap. It is impressive in places. That cannot be denied.

What genuineness it has is due, first of all, to the characterizations. Beginning somewhat weakly in the prologue, Mary Carr, as the mother who is cast off by her children and rescued from the poor house only by the "black sheep" of the family, develops real power before the end is reached and in many scenes is positively convincing. Also William Welch, as her husband, is often real, and John Walker, as the grown John, the noble son, has a number of effective scenes.

The Carr children, Rosemary, Stephen and May Beth, and Jerry Devine as the younger John, especially the last named, are well cast, and Sheridan Tansey and Noel Tearle, as the villainous son, Isaac, in boyhood and maturity, succeed in making the part detested as it is meant to be. The others in the cast John Dwyer, James Sheldon, Wallace Ray, Phyllis Diller, Louella Carr, Dorothy Allen and Edna Murphy are definite in their impersonations, and, it should be added separately, Vivienne Osborne makes an attractive heroine for the heroic John. All of the acting meets the requirements for broad characterization. All of it suffers from the lack of restraint the object of quantity rather than quality, that is noted in the story as a whole, but it has, too, its moments of sure appeal. Sometimes the people are more than personified virtues and vices.

In the direction, Harry Millarde apparently has achieved accuracy of setting, and some of his scenes show insight and skill. He has been able to touch them with a delicacy the more noticeable amidst so much spreading and smearing.

Mme. Frances Alda and Anna Case, Also Spalding, Violinist.

Mme. Frances Alda returned last night on the Cunarder Aquitania from a three months' visit to Europe, which she spent in Italy, Spain, France and England. Mme. Alda will open her concert tour at St. Louis on Sept. 28, and will sing the rôle of Marguerite in Boito's "Faust," which will be produced at the Metropolitan Opera House this Winter for the first time in fourteen years.

Miss Anna Case, an American soprano, arrived on the Aquitania from England and said she had been singing in Queen's Hall, London, and later in Paris. She will sing at Carnegie Hall on Dec. 1, after her return from a tour in the Western States.

Albert Spalding, the American violinist, also returned on the Aquitania after spending the Summer in Europe. He went over with Walter Damrosch's Orchestra and played with it during the six weeks' tour. He said that he would appear with the New York Symphony Orchestra during the Winter.

Dorothy Gish, the moving-picture actress, also returned on the Aquitania with her mother. She went over on the Imperator with Jack Pickford and his wife, Olive Thomas, and was overcome when she heard of the sudden death of the young actress.

Drama League Luncheon Tuesday.

The first luncheon of the New York Drama League will take place on next Tuesday at the Hotel McAlpin at 12:45 P. M. Among the guests of honor will be Margaret Severn, Norman Bel Geddes, Jacob Ben Ami, W. T. Benda, Percy Mackaye and Kenneth MacGowan. There will be a discussion on "The New Season."

MUSIC NOTES.

Mishel Piastro, a Russian violinist and a pupil of Leopold Auer, will give his first American concert at Carnegie Hall on Sunday afternoon, Oct. 3. His program will be principally Russian.

Marguerite Namara will sing Marguerite in "Faust" during the second week of the San Carlo company at the Manhattan.

The Italian Lyric Federation will give a performance of "Traviata" tonight at the Brooklyn Academy of Music. On next Saturday night "The Pearl Fishers" will be sung.

Francis Macmillen will be unable to play at the immigrants' concert on Ellis Island tomorrow afternoon, owing to a slight accident. His place will be taken by Scipione Guidi.

John Philip Sousa, who will give his twenty-eighth anniversary concert at the Hippodrome a week from Sunday night, has written a new march, "Who's Who in Navy Blue."

DEDICATED AT ANTIETAM.

Memorial to New York Soldiers Unveiled on Old Battlefield.

HAGERSTOWN, Md., Sept. 17.—With many veterans of the Civil War present, the 60-foot granite shaft erected on Antietam battlefield by the State of New York in memory of the soldiers who fought with New York regiments in the battle, was dedicated today. Lieut. Gen. Nelson A. Miles (retired), who commanded the New York troops, was the orator, and Major Gen. John F. O'Ryan represented Governor Smith of New York.

More than 200 veterans from New York took part in the ceremonies. After a trip over the battlefield the old soldiers and other guests came to Hagerstown, where they were entertained at luncheon. A reception was given to them at the Chamber of Commerce this evening, when Major Gen. Adelbert Cronkhite, representing the War Department, spoke.

GAMBLER PLEADS GUILTY.

John Shaughnessy Is Paroled Pending Sentence.

MINEOLA, L. I., Sept. 17.—John Shaughnessy, a leather goods manufacturer of 215 West Eighty-eighth Street, Manhattan, pleaded guilty before Justice Townsend Scudder today to one count of an indictment returned in August by the Nassau County Grand Jury which charged him with maintaining a house used for gambling. Shaughnessy conducted a restaurant at Lynbrook, which was raided July 26, 1919.

Wilson Mizner, the playwright, one of those taken in the raid, was fined $1,000. At the request of Charles N. Wysong, counsel for Shaughnessy, sentence was deferred until Oct. 6 to permit the attorney to submit evidence regarding Mr. Shaughnessy's character. Shaughnessy's bail for $5,000 was continued, and he was paroled in custody of counsel.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

"Broadway Brevities" will open at the Winter Garden on Tuesday night, Sept. 28. Eddie Cantor has been added to the cast.

The Celtic Players have postponed their production of Synge's "Deirdre of the Sorrows," at the Bramhall. It is now announced for next Tuesday.

Alys Delysia, who is to be seen at the Forty-fourth Street Theatre in "Afgar" in November, will sail from England on Sept. 29.

In the cast of "Cornered" in which Madge Kennedy will return to the stage, will be Leslie Austen, Anne Sutherland, Amelia Gardner, Charles Brown, Morgan Coman, Tom Walsh and Robert Forsythe.

Robert Whittier's production of "An Enemy of the People," which concludes a two weeks' engagement at the Manhattan Opera House tomorrow night, will be transferred to the Lexington Theatre on Monday night for an additional two weeks.

Richard Walton Tully will sail for England on the Olympic today. He will produce "Omar the Tentmaker" and "Keep Her Smiling" in London, and "The Bird of Paradise" in Paris.

FIND KIDNAPED BABY STARVING IN THICKET

Two-Year-Old Was Making a Brave Effort to Creep Out After Two Nights' Exposure.

Infant Tries to Rush and Embrace Rescuer, but Falls in Weakness—Neighbors Offer Reward.

After spending two chilly nights and a day alone in a thicket of bushes, without food, and bitten by thousands of mosquitoes, twenty-months-old Clara Cirelli, the baby kidnapped on Tuesday night from its home at Union Hill, N. J., was found yesterday near the North Bergen Crematory, on the Hudson Boulevard, miles from its home and mother. Although the infant was making a brave effort to fight its way out of the bushes, partly crawling and walking bear-fashion, physicians said that it could not have lived many hours more in its weakened condition.

The child was found by Robert Potts, engineer at the crematory, who said that he had heard crying in the thicket early on Thursday morning and Wednesday evening, but thought that it was some child playing in the bushes in the charge of an older brother or sister. Hearing the same cries again yesterday, but weaker, he went to the thicket.

When the baby saw Potts through the bushes she attempted to rush to embrace him, but fell to the ground in weakness. Her face, hands, legs and all exposed parts of her body were swollen and red from mosquito bites, and she kept crying for food. He took the baby to his home, where his wife gave her a bath and some milk. The baby stopped crying long enough to drink two glasses of milk, and then the doctor ordered a halt because he feared too sudden breaking of the child's stomach might cause injury. They said they did not think the child had had food since it was kidnapped from its home at 112 Main Street, Union Hill, on Tuesday night by an unknown man.

Mrs. Emil Cirelli, who had given up hope of recovering her child alive, became so hysterical when the police returned the baby to her last night that physicians had to be called. Neighbors have subscribed a reward of $200 for the capture of the kidnaper.

CREDITORS SUE SUGAR MEN.

O'Neill Charged with Transferring Bulk of Assets—Debts $600,000.

Creditors alleging total indebtedness of nearly $600,000 filed an involuntary petition in bankruptcy yesterday against A. R. O'Neill, Incorporated, sugar brokers, of 68 William Street. The petition gives the liabilities as $3,600,000 and the assets as $2,300,000.

The petition, which was filed in the United States District Court yesterday, alleged that Mr. O'Neill had admitted he had made preferential payments between Aug. 14 and Aug. 19. It is also charged that he transferred property to the Acadia Sugar Refining Company, and that the assets had been hypothecated, so that the value of the free assets is only $200,000.

THE BUSINESS WORLD

COMMERCIAL PAPER.

Yesterday .....8 per cent. for the best names
Thursday .....8 per cent. for the best names
The quotations are for six months' paper.

A Reasonable Price for Cotton.

Sentiment among leading cotton manufacturers is said to be in favor of any plan which growers may follow to get a reasonable price for their product. A large factor in the business stated yesterday that the popular impression, which attributes a desire on the part of manufacturers to drive down cotton prices, is erroneous. He said the manufacturers do not wish to drive the price of the staple to 20 cents or even to 25 cents. A price of 30 cents, he thought, would be considered enough to yield the grower a fair return in the present circumstances.

More Cotton Goods Reduced.

Additional lines of colored cotton goods for Spring delivery were reduced in price yesterday, when Smith, Hogg & Co. of this city revised quotations on five well-known branded fabrics. Red Seal zephyr ginghams and York seersuckers, which had been priced at 37½ cents a yard, were reduced to 27½ cents. York dress ginghams and Silver Brook seersuckers were reduced from their original Spring price of 35 cents to a new price of 25 cents a yard. Everett Classics are now quoted at 22 cents, against the original price of 32½ cents. The old prices were guaranteed to date of invoice, but there is no stipulation of this kind on the new list. Other important lines have been reduced similarly.

Variance in Woolen Prices.

According to buyers who have obtained the Spring opening prices of a number of the woolen mills there is more variance in quotations this season than has been the case in some time. Some mills they assert, are holding out for "long" prices, and others are making a bid for business by submitting close figures. This is the kind of competition that buyers, anxious for lower prices, are glad to see once more, and because of it they look to get even greater reductions before the season is over. Some readjusting is being done already and more will occur, buyers feel, before the season is much older.

"The Bluff Is Over."

Only recently a buyer who was sounding out the market had occasion to interview several prominent cotton goods manufacturers on the situation. He found them distinctly "bullish" and strongly of the opinion that the values at that time would be maintained in spite of light orders. The new price lists of leading jobbers and the price slashing of one large textile concern has convinced this buyer that the "bluff is about over," as he put it. "From now on," he said, "some of the big guns in the wholesale lines are going to show us some heavy shooting, and what happened before, when merely the smaller concerns were playing with prices, won't hold a candle to the big fight now developing."

Shoe Orders Coming in Slowly.

Orders for the better grades of men's shoes are coming in slowly from salesmen now on the road with Spring lines. To date the best business in them has come from the South, but it is not definitely known whether that is due to better conditions there than in the rest of the country or to the earlier start made in that territory by some of the road men. Buyers are not certain that prices are at bottom now, and are showing their uncertainty in the halting way that are placing advance orders. Some reductions have been made from Fall prices, but even the manufacturers are not certain that the revised figures will stand. Some of them are frank in their statement that they hope to be able to get values down to where the retailers think they ought to be. The chief obstacle appears to come from the leather men, who, though they have got the hide men under their thumbs, are not yet willing to pass their savings on to the shoe manufacturers.

Spring Shirts and Collars.

The naming of prices for Spring collars and shirts, it was stated yesterday in that trade, would probably occur about the middle of next month. Some factors are understood to be in favor of a later opening, but others see no cause for delay. The business is reported to be passing through a quiet period with activity confined to the liquidation of surplus stocks. There is still something of a deadlock between buyers and sellers and, while the latter are willing to go some way in making more favorable prices, nevertheless they still assert that production costs do not make large concessions possible. However, the Spring opening is expected to furnish attractive prices based, as they will be, on lower material costs.

Gray Goods Have Their Day.

Although quite a little of the snap that marked Thursday's trading was lacking yesterday, a pretty fair business was put through in the local market for gray goods. Much of the decline in activity was due to the firm position assumed by sellers in the matter of prices. Printcloth business of the day included spot Eastern 38½-inch 64-60s at 15 cents, and October Southern goods of the same construction at 14½ cents. September business was put through in 39-inch 68-72s at 16 cents, and in 38¾-inch 60-48s at 12 cents. Buyers paid 9 cents for "quick" lots of 38½-inch 44-40s. In the sheetings sales were 48-square, four-yards at 13½ cents, five-yards at 12½ cents and 5.50-yards at 11½ cents, all for this month's delivery. Sateen prices also were firmer, and trading was done in 39-inch 64-104, 4.20s at 18½c.

Hosiery Prices Broken.

Considerable discussion was given over yesterday in local dry goods circles to revised prices for hosiery, and it was the general impression that price cuts amounting to some 50 per cent. have brought values in such merchandise to a point where freer buying is possible. The manufacturers in the large hosiery districts are in great need of business, and the idleness of the mills has forced large concessions in yarns. Offers of men's half hose were heard yesterday of 220 needle, 10 strand silk at $7, and 220 needle full mercerized at $3.25. A former $16.50 value was quoted at $8.50. In women's hosiery, a 280-needle 10-inch boot silk, 10 strand mock seam stockink was offered at $7.50.

What Will the Retailer Do?

There is quite a little speculation going on in local wholesale dry goods circles as to just how much of the recent mark-down in standard lines of merchandise, particularly cotton goods, will be passed on to the public by the retail trade and just how long before it will happen. In certain quarters the impression prevails that the retailers are not yet ready to pass along any reductions, and that they will continue to hold to current prices unless pressure on the part of the consumer forces them to repeat the merchandise debacle of last Spring. Remembering the circumstances under which it took place, and remembering also that many retailers got their normal mark-up, or close to it, throughout the whole affair, wholesalers are not sanguine of their willingness to reduce prices until they have to do so.

Traveling Salesmen Hard Hit.

The lot of the average traveling salesman, especially if he is working on commission and paying his own road expenses, is far from enviable at the present time. Not only have traveling costs increased materially, without a commensurate increase in the rate of commission, if any, but he now has to work harder to obtain an order than at any other time since the subsiding of the merchandise panic in this country which followed the outbreak of the World War. As if this were not enough, prices are going down in most lines, and the returns to the salesman on the orders he finally gets are smaller than they were. The difficulty in getting business is likely, it was said here yesterday, to change considerably the personnel of the sales staffs of a number of houses in the next few months. In other words, the change in conditions will quickly show the difference between good salesmen and those who are not so good.

30 Stowaways Here from Danzig.

The steamship New Rochelle of the Baltic Steamship Company returned yesterday from her first round trip to Danzig and reported that there were thirty stowaways on board. They will be returned on the same steamship, it was said.

Dr. Morgan to Preach Tomorrow.

The Rev. Dr. G. Campbell Morgan, who preached in the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church last Sunday, will be in the pulpit again tomorrow, in the absence of the Rev. Dr. John Kelman, pastor, who is returning after a Summer spent in Japan.

COMMODITIES PRICES.

Foodstuffs Again Resist the Generally Downward Trend.

Had there been a few more of them the declines shown in Dun's list of wholesale commodities prices this week would have exceeded the advances by two to one. As it was, they just fell short of the mark. The changes in the foodstuffs, on the other hand, were nearly two to one in favor of the advances. Aside from that, the week's revisions were not especially interesting. The general list showed only 65 of them, of which 41 were downward.

The following list gives the minimum wholesale prices quoted on selected standard commodities this week. They are corrected to yesterday, and with them are given comparative prices for this week and the corresponding week a year ago:

The week did not produce many changes in the local market for provisions. Bacon and Middle Western lard advanced, but hams and flour were not revised. At Chicago the latter was true of live beef and mess pork, but live hogs, live sheep and short ribs all went up. Changes in the dairy products here were fewer than for a long time, consisting solely of a rise of 3 cents a dozen in nearby fancy eggs. This brought them to a point 6 cents a dozen higher than in 1919.

A sharp rise in fancy apples featured the listed fresh fruits, while in the dried ones the only change was a further drop in California prunes. Vegetable changes also were limited in number. Onions advanced 75 cents a bag, while choice marrow beans declined. Teas continued to show no change, but the list for coffee contained declines in both No. 7 Rio and No. 4 Santos. Fine granulated sugar was nominally cheaper, but there was no change in the price of the best raws. The spice market was unsettled again, showing advances in mace and black pepper and declines in cloves and white pepper.

The grains list produced declines in wheat, corn and oats and advances in rye and malting barley. Both hides and leathers went through the week without quotable change. None of the principal forms of crude or manufactured iron and steel were revised in price during the week, and the only advance in that part of the list was in electrolytic copper. Furnace coke, spelter, lead and tin all went down. Hops also declined.

Twenty-six changes were included in the combined lists for drugs, chemicals, dyestuffs and oils, of which seventeen were declines. Aside from weakness in several of the soda products, there was not much feature to the changes. In the naval stores Grade B resin and turpentine advanced again. A general improvement in price tone featured the week in the raw silk markets and a sharp rise in the leading varieties took place. Hudson River brick declined again, and the same was true of Eastern crude rubber.

The feature of the week in the textile trades was the upsetting, downward, of standard lines of bleached and colored cotton goods, both by first and second hands. At the same time the market for gray goods stiffened considerably, and sizable advances were scored by the most-used constructions of printcloths. Even sateens took a turn for the better. Some new openings for Spring took place in the woolen trade, with prices about on the same level as those made last week. Burlaps were quiet, after a fairly good early start, and lightweight goods closed the week with a decline.

In Town.

A. R. O'NEILL, INC.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against A. R. O'Neill, Inc., sugar broker at 68 William Street, by these creditors: Marcelin Garcia, $30,000; Diedrich-Scheffers, $298, and Ascon Nickiess, $292,900. It was alleged that he admitted in writing that he had made preferential payments and had transferred, between Aug. 14 and 19, bills of lading for refined sugar and sugar in process to the Arcadia Sugar Refining Co. and to the Rayon Sart of Cuba. Harry Zalkin said that the liabilities were $2,600,000 and assets $2,300,000, but many of the assets were hypothecated and the real value was $200,000. The business was incorporated in January, 1919, with capital stock of $50,000. A. R. O'Neill has been identified with the sugar trade all his life.

FERNIG BROS.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against David and Philip Fernig, firm of Fernig Bros., dress and silk jobbers at 15 West Thirtieth Street, by these creditors: L. A. Fritchman, $4,824; G. Felter, $4,451, and Louis Siegbert & Bro., $500. Allen R. Mohrhard of said firm has liabilities were $100,000 and assets $25,000.

LOUIS VIGDEN.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against Louis Vigden, dealer in furs and skins, at 49 West 20th St., by these creditors: I. Berg & Son, $3,202; Joseph Goldsweig, $216, and B. Richter, $67. Judge Hough has appointed Harry Osterman receiver in $5,000 bond. It is stated that the liabilities are approximately $60,000, and the assets about $20,000.

FREEDMAN & SANDBERG—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against Max Freedman and Samuel Sandberg, copartners, trading as Freedman & Sandberg, fur dealers, at 212 West 27th St., by these creditors: B. Denken, $474; I. Silverman, $318, and Joseph Steiger, $2,380.

BAUMAN CLOTHING CORP.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against Bauman Clothing Corporation, manufacturers of clothing, at 110 5th Av., and factory at Springfield, Mass., by these creditors: H. J. Greenstein, $103; P. E. Gould, $12,000, and William Ireland & Co., $245.

DEAN & MAX—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against Robert Dean and Max B. Mann, co-partners, trading as Dean & Mann, at 881 Fourth Avenue, by B. & A. Silk Co., a creditor, for $1,600.

ALFRED CHADBURN, residing at 1,193 Warburton Avenue, Yonkers, has filed a petition in bankruptcy here, individually and as a member of the firm of Chadburn & Edwards, with liabilities of $65,000 and no assets. Petitioner states that the last known residence of the partner, Andrew Edwards, was Muscle Shoal, Ala. Among the creditors are First National Bank of Yonkers, $6,453; Yonkers National Bank, $20,759, and Yerks & Co., $21,706.

JACOB A. STANDER, a butcher, at 1,517 Rosetle Street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy with liabilities of $2,418 and assets of $7.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Advance Continues When Business Is Resumed—Money and Exchanges Both Improve.

The stock market advance, which was interrupted on Thursday by the terrific explosion in Wall Street, was resumed almost with the opening of business yesterday. It is quite possible, as most everybody seemed to believe, that there was support in the market in the beginning, for it would be the natural thing for those who have much at stake to see to it that first prices were not allowed to break badly, as they might have done after what happened the day before. But if there was support, it was not needed for long, because the market disclosed a degree of strength and there was uncovered a sufficiently broad and active demand for stocks which was entirely capable of taking care of any panicky selling which may have come in.

But there was no panicky selling which could be identified. The market started well, not especially active nor especially strong, but with a firm undertone, and as soon as it became evident that there was to be no precipitous smash the buying increased and the offerings diminished, with the only result possible—stocks went up. The rails attracted more attention than has been their wont, quite a few issues showing strength and breadth, and in the industrial list there were some movements which bordered closely upon the sensational. Mexican Petroleum was one of these, and it carried with it the other oils, while there were good spots in the steel group, in that of the equipments and in the general list of specialties.

The strength was continued almost without interruption throughout the day. There were reactions, of course, but they were brief and never did they get very far before new buyers appeared and turned the market upward again. It was an impressive display, considering the catastrophe of the day before and what that event might have meant, and it showed rather conclusively that the financial community, and by this is meant the national community and not that confined to New York, is not to be alarmed over "radical exhibitions," to use the mildest term one could have heard yesterday.

A good part of the strength, as on other recent days, arose out of the unquestioned improvement in the money and credit situation. There were further evidences yesterday of improvement in this quarter and while posted quotations showed no additional declines, money dealers again were optimistic and inclined to lay stress on the steady and consistent improvement in tone.

The exchanges also continued to improve. Sterling sold up to $3.54, a gain of nearly 5 cents on the day and of about 10 cents over its recent low, and French francs were advanced to 6.79, an over-night gain of 23 points. The other allied continentals also were up on the day, but German marks were slightly lower than on Thursday, continuing their decline of the last week. They were quoted yesterday at 1.52, against 1.60 the day before.

The weekly statement of the Bank of France showed a loss of approximately $10,000,000 gold. This, doubtless, is the metal now on the ocean which is expected to reach here Monday or Tuesday.

To Loan Belgium 750,000,000 Frs.

BRUSSELS, Sept. 17.—Libre Belgique understands that the Brazilian Government intends to open a credit of 750,000,000 francs for the economic reconstruction of Belgium. Decision in the matter, the newspaper says, is to be announced upon the arrival of the Belgian royal party in Brazil.

WARNS OF MONOPOLY IN STOCK YARDS SALE

FEARS HOLDING COMPANY

Defendant and Non-Defendant Packers Might Get Most of Stock, It Is Said.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—The Federal Trade Commission opposes the sale of the stock yards by the packers to a holding company formed by F. H. Prince & Co. of Boston. In its opinion, says the commission, the plan will result in an even greater monopoly than exists at present.

Following the dissolution suit of the packers, which was settled by the Government some time ago, it was agreed by the Department of Justice that Prince & Co. would be allowed to take over the stock yards through the holding company. The Federal Trade Commission has been conducting an inquiry and now reports to the Attorney General that through the holding company the packers, who were defendants in the Government suit, would be able to acquire control of fifteen of the country's principal stock yards, whereas they now have control in only eleven.

The report by the commission, after declaring that the proposed plan will not secure the objects sought in the litigation, says:

"There are two principal grounds for this conclusion:

"1. The long-time stock yards relations of F. H. Prince with the packers have been such that the plan as outlined will not result, in the opinion of the commission, in a divorcement of the stock yards from packer interest.

"2. The plan as outlined will result, in the opinion of the commission, in an infraction of the monopoly law of the land greater and more serious than the existing infraction.

"The facts as to the past stock yards relations of F. H. Prince with the packers have been shown in detail in Chapter 5 of Part III. of the commission's report on the Meat-packing Industry.

"That the plan now presented to the court will result in a greater monopolization of the stock yards service of the country than now exists is shown by the fact that it will amalgamate into one holding company fifteen of the principal stock yards in which the different packers now hold varying interests. A single holding company will own all fifteen yards. This will be a more extensive stock yards monopoly.

"These fifteen yards handle 73 per cent. of the animals received at all stock yard markets in the country.

"The amalgamation of the yards through this promotion by Mr. Prince not only will be a greater monopolization of the stock yards business than now exists, but it contains elements to strengthen the packing house monopoly until such time as the defendants are divested of their stock in the holding companies by order of the court.

"The decree, while ordering that the defendants divest themselves of all their stock yard interests, permits a temporary retention of an interest less than controlling in the yards (if necessary in order to dispose of them on reasonable terms) or in any corporation organized to take over yard companies. The petitions of the defendants and the affidavit of Mr. Prince allege that financial conditions are such that they cannot now dispose of the stock yards securities unless the defendants retain a substantial interest.

"The offers of the contracting parties embodied in the plan provide for the retention of an interest of less than 50 per cent. in the holding companies, but in no way indicate that this interest is to be other than permanent. At present the packer defendants show an ownership in these yards that amounts to 38 per cent. of the total voting stock outstanding. The plan permits the defendants to hold up to 40 per cent. of the holding company's stock.

"Furthermore, some of the family estates, trust funds or members of the five packer families who are not defendants in this case are, nevertheless, large holders in these stock yards. The plan makes no provision for the divestment of the non-defendant packer interests, nor to prevent further acquisition up to the complete control or total ownership of the stock yards holding company by the non-defendant packer interests. The non-defendant packer interests own 17 per cent. of the voting stock of the fifteen yards, in addition to the 38 per cent. owned by defendant packers.

"Quite as readily it might be from 66 to 100 per cent. (forty-nine for the defendants and seventeen or more for the non-defendant packer interests).

"In brief, though the decree provides for a total divestment of stock interest by the defendants, this plan leaves the way open for them and the non-defendant packer interests temporarily, and for the non-defendant packer interests permanently, to acquire absolute control of a holding company that will own fifteen of the principal yards of the country, whereas now they have majority control of but eleven of the sixteen."

PACKARD EARNS $10,044,952.

This Does Not Include Taxes—Motor Sales $62,597,240 in Year.

The Packard Motor Car Company and subsidiaries for the year ended Aug. 31, 1920, shows net earnings before Federal taxes of $10,044,952. Sales for the period totalled $62,597,240. Alvan Macauley, President, in his report to the Board of Directors, said:

"At Aug. 31, 1920, the company had loans from banks amounting to $5,000,000 and apart from this was entirely free from indebtedness, except for ordinary current purchases. At the same date cash deposits in banks were $3,342,865, leaving a balance due the banks of $1,657,134. In addition the company had in banks for collection, but not discounted, drafts with bills of lading attached amounting to $936,896. Deducting these items from bank indebtedness the net amount owing by the company, outside of current purchases would total $720,237. In addition to the cash in bank and the inventory the company has cash assets of $10,787,868. Total net assets over and above all liabilities and charges are approximately $49,228,120 and surplus over and above all liabilities and stock outstanding is $22,116,522."

Few Report Sales "Above Normal."

The Index, to be issued by the Liberty National Bank Monday, contains an "inventory of industrial conditions" based upon an inquiry covering many representative concerns in diversified lines. Summarizing the results, it may be said that only 42 per cent. of those interviewed report the volume of their sales as being "above normal." "Above normal" also, but in these cases meaning excessive, are cancellations, inventories, accounts receivable, and transportation difficulties.

Sharp Advance in Stock Market.

The upturn in the stock market which was cut short by the disaster at noon Thursday, when trading was suspended, carried over to yesterday and almost from the opening gong prices moved forward buoyantly. In many issues good sized advances were recorded before the close of the day. Mexican Petroleum, for instance, showed a net gain of some ten points, and other issues in the speculative limelight responded to buying with gains of from one to three points. There had been some anxiety as to how the market would act after the catastrophe of the preceding day, but any fears on this point were quickly dispelled. In the early morning many brokers' wires carried the word that the market would not be adversely affected by Thursday's happening. This was based in part on the belief that banking support would come in if there was any display of a panicky condition. Some such support probably started the market off, to dispel any selling wave, but the character of the trading throughout the day indicated that there was more than simply banking support.

When the News Is Out Sell.

When the news was made public yesterday that the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad plan for a segregation of its railroad and coal mining properties had been filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission the stock declined 3 points. The aggregate turnover for the day was small compared with the recent activity in the stock, but there were those in Wall Street who pointed to the decline as another proof of the market expression, "When the news is out, sell." From the reports which came over the wires from Washington there was little for the Street to go on in analyzing just what the segregation will mean to the holders of the present outstanding stock.

Reading Continues a Feature.

Traders who have been interested in the advance in Reading shares seized upon the announcement of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western plan as an argument for higher prices yesterday. They circulated rumors early in the morning that the Reading plan might be expected very soon, and succeeded in bringing about an advance to a high of 96¼ when they called attention to the fact that at that price the stock was higher than Southern Pacific. But later in the day, after profit-taking had been general enough to bring about a full point reaction, news that the Supreme Court decision regarding the Reading plan had been filed in the United States District Court in Eastern Pennsylvania had little if any stimulating effect.

Easy Money Rates a Factor.

In conservative quarters the revival of interest, professional and otherwise, in some of the shipping and industrial issues which have been quiescent for some time was attributable in large part to easier money rates. Call money yesterday ruled at 6 per cent., and time money rates remained at 8 per cent., although there were some reports that the latter had tightened slightly. In addition, some observers found satisfaction in that part of Governor Harding's address in which he said that "the country is on a more normal basis in proceeding quietly and without alarming features." At the same time, heed was also paid to his statement that this was now a lenders' and not a borrowers' market.

A Sympathetic Advance.

While there were those who regarded the sudden bulge in Delaware and Hudson shares yesterday as in sympathy with the trend of stock prices generally, it looked very much as if the professionals had found in the stock a responsive medium for their operations. A rumor was spread through the financial district that there might be a voluntary segregation of Delaware & Hudson coal and railroad properties, as in the case of Delaware, Lackawanna & Western, and the shares moved forward rapidly. Later, however, the stock slipped back from the high more than a point on evident profit-taking sales, closing, though, more than a point higher than on the preceding day.

Anglo-French 5s at New High.

On a sale of $200,000, Anglo-French 5 per cent. bonds pushed through par yesterday for the first time and sold at a new record high of 100⅛. Earlier in the day seven of the $1,000 bonds changed hands at 99½.

Shipping Shares Active.

There was a resumption of interest again in the shipping shares, with most of the active issues on the board gaining substantially before the close. Atlantic, Gulf & West Indies led the list, with a net gain of 3 points. United Fruit on a good turnover moved up more than 2, and International Mercantile Marine evened up with the advance in the preceding day in the common shares.

Nearly 1,000,000 Shares.

In point of volume of business the turnover yesterday, amounting to 970,434 shares, was the heaviest that has been recorded on the Exchange since Aug. 9, when transactions reached 1,251,000 shares. There was this difference between the two days, however. In early August the market was declining, prices touching what are thus far the low for the year. Yesterday's display was made in an advancing market in which it seemed that the public was beginning to accumulate stocks rather than liquidate holdings.

New York Air Brake.

The New York Air Brake Company is preparing to sell some of the buildings which were constructed during the war to manufacture munitions. These buildings only recently came into possession of the company through the adjustment of claims against the Government. The buildings are valued at about $2,000,000. The business of the company is steadily expanding. Earnings for the first eight months of this year are stated to be about double the amount during the corresponding period of last year. The company is preparing to begin manufacture shortly of a new model passenger automobile.

General Motors in London.

The Generals Motors Acceptance Corporation has been granted permission by the State Banking Department to open a branch office in London. The expansion of this department of the General Motors Corporation to England probably is the outgrowth of the association with the corporation recently of prominent English and Canadian interests.

Oil Stocks Strong.

Mexican Petroleum was a leader of the oil group, making an advance of ten points on a heavy turnover. The Street is afloat with rumors regarding the company, but none of them can be verified. With such a display in Mex Pete the other oils joined in the market upturn. In the outside market Standard of Indiana was to the forefront with a gain of twelve points, the stock at the close of the day being 720 bid, 725 asked.

The Short Interest.

With the market moving forward interest is again being displayed in the extent of the short interest. There was unquestionably heavy overselling of the market when the decline of not long ago was at its height, but how much of this excess of bear pressure was eliminated subsequently is hard to determine. The pronounced advances which some of the more speculative issues have had recently would indicate that some of the shorts were having difficulty in wriggling out of their position.

THINKS INFLATION HAS BEEN ARRESTED

FAVORS BIG TRADE FLEET

Business Demands the Repeal of the Excess Profits Tax, Banker Asserts.

Declaring that "we must either climb down or fall down from the peak reached by war demand and war inflation, and the downward journey is already under way," Francis H. Sisson, Vice President of the Guaranty Trust Company, advised the members of the Retail Tea and Coffee Merchants' Association last night that this period of stringency was a good time "to be short on commodities and long on credit." He was speaking at the annual dinner of the association in the Hotel Pennsylvania.

After asserting that one of America's greatest needs was a big merchant fleet operating "in private hands under sound laws," Mr. Sisson declared that he believed the wiping out of the excess profits tax would be of more material benefit to Europe than the settling of the controversy over the League of Nations.

"There is no longer any question about the imperative need for repealing the excess profits tax or of the practically universal demand from all substantial business interests for such action," he said, "which would do more material good, so far as Europe is concerned, than settling the controversy as to whether or not we will enter the League of Nations, for it would provide industry here with the sinews to help Europe in a practical way to a greater extent than is possible now.

"With income taxes running as high as 73 per cent., the point of productivity of these taxes has been passed, as wealthy investors are forced to purchase tax-exempt securities. And a material reduction could be made in the present high rates of surtaxes, without increasing either the lower or the medium rates, provided the personal exemptions were reduced, so that many wage earners who are not now paying taxes would have to bear their equitable share of the financial burdens of the country."

Advising against loans to carry heavy stocks of merchandise, he expressed the opinion that the inflation had been arrested, the era of extravagant buying ended, and Europe again brought into the field as a producer and exporter. He said he believed that the peak of high prices had been passed and added:

"As is to be expected in a period of declining commodity prices and slackening activity in a number of industrial lines, both the number of commercial failures and liabilities involved are increasing. In July, for instance, the defaults in mercantile and industrial lines numbered 681, with liabilities of nearly $22,000,000, as compared with only 452 failures and liabilities of $5,500,000 in July, 1919. The defaults for August numbered 673, with liabilities amounting to more than $28,000,000, and amply exceeded those for August of last year, while the liabilities, due to an unusual number of large reverses, are well above the average for August. The large failures last month exceeded those for any August since 1896, and the liabilities involved by these defaults are the heaviest reported for the period since 1914:

"While these failures have not reached alarming proportions at all, they indicate that certain more or less painful readjustments are taking place in trade and industry. They should point their moral, namely, that in a declining market it is the part of wisdom to be short on commodities and long on credit. It has been observed that the highest degree of skill is required to carry business enterprises safely through periods of falling prices, even when the fall is of moderate proportions."

BUILDING HUGE SHIPYARD.

Returning Banker Says Germany Is to Have World's Biggest Plant.

Hamburg is building the largest shipbuilding plant in the world, according to G. Von Polenz of Von Polenz & Co., bankers, of 60 Broadway, who has been six weeks in Germany on business for the firm.

"Hugo Stinnes, the coal king and chief stockholder of the Hamburg-American Line," Mr. Von Polenz continued, "is the principal backer of the new enterprise and stated in a speech just before I sailed from Hamburg that the shipyard now being constructed would be entirely independent of any steamship corporation and he expected to build ships for countries all over the world besides taking orders from German firms.

"The yard will be equipped with the latest machinery and appliances and be fitted for the construction of all kinds from tugboats to 60,000 ton liners like the Bismarck."

When asked about conditions in Germany generally Mr. Von Polenz said:

"The Winter will be a hard one, and there will be a shortage of foodstuffs and coal, but the people will get over it, except the weakest, who will die. The Quakers' society of Philadelphia is doing a great work in Germany feeding the starving women and children in the big cities.

"There are thousands of unemployed everywhere and there will be thousands added to the number in October because all the crops will be in by that time. The factories will start up as soon as there is enough raw materials to work with.

"There will be no Bolshevism in Germany now, as the people have decided to stand together and rebuild trade and industries."

The Mongolia, on which Mr. Von Polenz arrived, had 247 cabin and 1,391 steerage passengers. She had fifty Germans in the first cabin, which is the largest number brought here on any one ship since the war.

FIRE IN MILLINERY SHOP.

Blaze Put Out Before It Extended to Osborne Apartments.

A fire was discovered late last night in a millinery shop at 205 West Fifty-seventh Street, on the ground floor of the Osborne Apartments, the northwest corner of Fifty-seventh Street and Seventh Avenue.

A passerby saw the fire through the window and called the engine company from the West Fifty-eighth Street station. The firemen broke into the store and got the fire under control before it spread beyond the store.

Strike Ties Up Canadian Lake Shipping.

SAULT ST. MARIE, Mich., Sept. 17.—A general strike of all seamen on Canadian lake steamers, which went into effect yesterday, seemed today to have paralyzed Canadian shipping on the Great Lakes through this port. Four big ore freighters are tied up at local docks without a man on board other than officers. The passenger steamers Assiniboia and Kewatin of the Canadian Pacific Line, due here yesterday, did not arrive and are reported tied up at docks at Port Arthur. The strike is said to be for an advance in wages for all classes of seamen, and was called by the International Seamen's Union of America. American shipping is not affected.

TO CUT TRAIN TIME ON CHICAGO-COAST RUN

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.—Announcement was made today that faster train schedules between Chicago and California will be put into effect by clipping a few hours from prairie running time and minutes on the mountain divisions. The time saving is planned by the Northwestern-Union Pacific route, the Santa Fe and the Rock Island-Southern Pacific.

The Northwestern-Union Pacific officials, who have been called to meet in Ogden, Utah, next week, expect to announce new fast service by Oct. 1.

On Nov. 1 the Santa Fe plans to start its California Limited on a schedule reduced four hours, and also to add another coast flier and perhaps to restore the Limited, a train that formerly reached Los Angeles sixty-three hours after leaving Chicago. The Rock Island and Southern Pacific are understood to be planning for a sixty-eight hour schedule for the Golden State Limited, which now runs from here to Los Angeles in seventy-two hours.

New fast trains between Chicago and Cincinnati are planned by the Pennsylvania, and between Chicago and New York by the Michigan Central.

GUARD FEDERAL GOLD IN MANY CITIES

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.—An investigation was begun today by Charles F. Clyne, United States District Attorney, into the circumstances surrounding the publication of articles in the Chicago Socialist and in a Chicago afternoon paper printed in German. The article in the former, headed "New Morgans War," is published in the Current Weekly issue dated Sept. 18, but on sale today. It probably was written before the explosion which wrecked the Morgan & Co. offices in New York. The article protests against the $100,000,000 loan to the French Commission by the Morgan bank.

The article in the German newspaper, the Abendpost, was said to have been an editorial.

Guards armed with rifles were on duty today at the United States Sub-Treasury in the Federal Building and at the Federal Reserve Bank. They were placed there by Captain Thomas I. Forster, local chief of the Secret Service, on instructions from the Treasury Department at Washington. Homes of prominent Chicago financiers also were placed under guard.

The instructions were explicit and were interpreted to mean that Government investigators have connected the Wall Street explosion with a plot which has for its object the gold stored in Federal vaults throughout the country.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 17.—The Department of Justice began to check up every widely known radical in this city today and investigate their movements within the past forty-eight hours.

This was ordered following the announcement by William J. Flynn in New York that the explosion in Wall Street undoubtedly was caused by a bomb.

Agents were sent into sections of the city where radicals congregate, and all extremists will be required to give a minute accounting of their time from noon Wednesday.

William S. Houghton, head of the Secret Service Bureau, ordered a Federal guard thrown around every Government building in Philadelphia, including the Federal Building, the Mint, and the Custom HoHuse and Sub-Treasury.

As an added precaution, Police Superintendent Mills ordered all police districts in the business and financial sections to forbid the parking of automobiles or vehicles of any description unless the owner was identified or some one left in care of the vehicle who can vouch for it.

BOSTON, Sept. 17.—Federal, State and city authorities were co-operating tonight in taking precautions against a possible disaster such as occurred yesterday in New York. Public buildings and the financial district were heavily guarded. State police, under orders of Colonel Albert A. Foote, were on similar duty in other cities of the State.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 17.—An increased police guard appeared in the financial district today and paid particular attention to the Sub-Treasury and the Federal Reserve Bank. The police Neutrality Squad was brought into being again as the result of the explosion in Wall Street, New York.

Superintendent Parker of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey's plant at Bayonne yesterday increased his force of guards by 350 additional men. His action was due to the New York explosion.

FIRE IN BEEF PLANT.

Stampeding Steers Herded in Pens Are Removed with Difficulty.

Stampeding 200 steers and calves in adjoining concrete pens, a two-alarm fire yesterday destroyed the northeast rear corner of the five-story brick building at 417 and 419 East Forty-third Street, occupied by the United Dressed Beef Company. The fire, which was supposed to have originated in a motor attached to a ventilating fan in the fertilizer department, destroyed 100 tons of fertilizer in bags packed for shipment and caused a loss estimated at $10,000.

The flames were got under control after an hour's fight by firemen who were forced to wear gas helmets because of the ammonia fumes. The frightened steers and calves were herded into nearby pens with difficulty.

HUDSON COUNTY HAS 629,124

Revised Census Figures Give Jersey City 298,079 Population.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—Census returns announced today give Hudson County, N. J., containing Jersey City, 629,124 inhabitants, an increase of 91,893, or 17.1 per cent. Revised figures show Jersey City's population as 298,079, instead of 297,864, as previously announced.

Other census statements given out today are:

Fresno, Cal., (revised) 45,086; previously announced, 44,616.

Tulare, Cal., 3,539, an increase of 781, or 28.3 per cent.

Coalinga, Cal., 2,934, a decrease of 1,265, or 30.1 per cent.

Porterville, Cal., 4,097, an increase of 1,401, or 52 per cent.

17 COTTON MILLS BRING $20,000,000

F. K. Rupprecht of New York Acquires the Big Knight Properties in New England.

BUYS AS AN INDIVIDUAL

Concern Founded Seventy Years Ago by Two Brothers in Rhode Island.

Special to The New York Times.

PROVIDENCE, Sept. 17.—The sale of all the B. B. & R. Knight properties to Frederick K. Rupprecht of New York was announced tonight by Webster and C. Prescott Knight, members of the firm.

Rumors have been afloat for some time that the Knight properties, which include seventeen different plants in Rhode Island and Massachusetts, were to be sold, the story among the textile men being that the probable purchaser was the United Textile Company of New York. According to the statement issued by the Knights tonight, however, the United has no part in the deal. Mr. Rupprecht, who is affiliated with the Consolidated Textile Company, figures in the transaction as an individual.

No statement was given as to the price paid for the properties, but well informed mill men put it at about $20,000,000. The mill properties, real estate, farm lands, buildings, houses for employes, good-will and brands and all quick assets owned by B. B. & R. Knight go with the capital stock, which was the main item of purchase.

The Knights were incorporated two years ago for $12,000,000, of which $3,000,000 was preferred. Mill men say that the properties are worth much more.

Mr. Rupprecht will take possession by Oct. 1. The products of the Knight organization will continue to be manufactured by the new ownership. Converse & Co. of 88 Worth Street, New York City, will act as selling agents for the products.

Robert Knight, founder of the concern, was working prior to 1844 at Arnold's Bridge as clerk in the country store of John H. Clarke. When Clarke was elected United States Senator the cotton mill at Arnold's Bridge was leased to Zachariah Parker and Robert Knight for $50,000 a year. In 1850 they bought the property for $40,000, and the following year Knight bought his partner out and changed the name of Arnold's Bridge to Pontiac, the name which the village has since retained. In 1851 Benjamin B. Knight, brother of Robert, took a half interest in the Pontiac mill and bleachery. This was the beginning of the B. B. & R. Knight Company that lasted fifty years.

The new firm next bought the Hebronville Mill, which now has approximately 30,000 spindles and employs 250 hands. "Fruit of the Loom" cloth is made in this mill. At Dodgeville the Knights bought the cotton mill in 1854. It now has a capacity of 30,000 spindles and 600 looms. The Hebronville and Dodgeville Mills and the two Grant Mills in this city were until the present year run under the name of the Hebron Manufacturing Company. In 1872 the Knights purchased the Manchung Mill at Sutton, Mass., with 48,000 spindles. It now has 60,000 spindles and 1,300 looms and employs about 600 people. The Readville (Mass.) Mill, acquired six years later, was sold in January of this year, it is understood, to Japanese interests. The Natick (R. I.) Mill, another of the properties, is one of the largest cotton-mills in the country. It was purchased from the Sprague estate in 1882, and it operates more than 100,000 spindles and 3,000 looms and employs about 1,500 people. "Fruit of the Loom" cloth is also manufactured in this mill.

The other properties included in the sale are: The Riverpoint Mill, purchased in 1885; the Arctic Mill, in 1887; the White Rock Mill, in Westerly, in 1874; the Clinton Mill, in Woonsocket, in 1876; the Valley Queen at Riverpoint, in 1885; the Lippitt and Jackson Mills at Riverpoint, in 1889; the Nottingham Mill, Providence, in 1899, and the Centreville Mill in 1903.

Frederick K. Rupprecht is well known in New York as an officer and director of many leading cotton goods organizations. He is President and a director of Converse & Co., has similar relations with the Anglo-American Cotton Products Corporation, the Apex Manufacturing Company and the Bristol Fibre Company. He is a director of Claflin's, Incorporated, and is identified with many other important concerns operating in this field.

Among some of his other affiliations are the Defender Manufacturing Company, of which he is President; the Kelsey Textile Corporation, the Pilot Cotton Mills, the Alliance Export Corporation, the Erie Specialty Corporation and the Cotton Lighterage Corporation. He is also a director of the Chase Securities Corporation.

THE CONDITION OF TRADE.

General business in the past week showed some slight indications of seasonal improvement although the basic underlying situation was but slightly changed, according to Dun's Review, which said in part:

While occasional spurts of activity may develop in certain basic lines in which prices have become more attractive to buyers, there has been no departure from the attitude of conservatism and caution, and the monetary stringency and the approaching national elections are important restraining elements. The present hesitation and waiting find reflection in the continued policy of many interests of purchasing only as immediate and well-defined requirements necessitate, and the constructive influence of abundant crops and improvement in transportation is less evident than would be the case if fewer factors of uncertainty existed. After eighteen consecutive weeks, during which declines in wholesale commodity quotations have predominated, there is no mistaking the character of the current price movement; but it is not plain as to how far the readjustment will be carried, and many prospective purchasers are deferring commitments until such time as the future becomes clearer.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

John J. Conway, William Bode, Clarence J. McGowan and Norman K. Beams were appointed assistant cashiers of the North Side Bank of Brooklyn yesterday.

At a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Dodge Mfg. Company, payment of the regular 1¾ per cent. dividend on the preferred stock payable Oct. 1, 1920, to holders of record Sept. 24, 1920, on which date they have ordered the Preferred Stock books closed to be reopened Oct. 1, 1920, was authorized.

Chas. H. Jones & Co. have compiled a list of investment suggestions for September, embracing municipal, railroad, public utility and foreign Government bonds, yielding from 6 per cent to 10 per cent.

Kenneth D. Hull has been appointed an assistant secretary of the Fidelity-International Trust Company. Mr. Hull is to be in charge of the new business department of the branch of the company to be opened shortly at 110 William Street.

Jefferson M. Levy was selected yesterday as Chairman of the Stockholders' Protective Committee of the Denver & Rio Grande Railroad Company.

FINDS ALABAMA LAWS WEAK IN COAL CRISIS

State Commission Reports Public Is Gouged in Operator-Miner Deadlock.

Special to The New York Times.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Sept. 17.—The Coal Commission named by Governor Kirby to effect an agreement between the operators and soft coal miners formally reported tonight and the document was sent to the Legislature.

The report says at the outset:

"With recognition of the United Mine Workers of America as the paramount issue between striking coal miners and coal operators of the bituminous coal fields of Alabama and the policies of both peculiarly directed to hampering distribution of domestic coal, the miners' strike has reached such proportions that it cannot be settled amicably under existing State laws, and the public is perhaps the chief victim of the tragedy being enacted."

These were the high points of the report of the Bituminous Coal Commission named by Governor Thomas E. Kilby to effect an agreement between the opposing factions, rendered to him today by the Commissioners, George Denny, President of the University of Alabama; James J. Mayfield, former Supreme Court Justice, and Charles Henderson, former Governor, and in turn transmitted to the Legislature in extraordinary session.

Refusal of the coal operators to treat with officials of the United Mine Workers or recognize their organization, and the steadfast adherence to the "blue book" contract, insisted upon by union leaders in the face of the putting into force of all awards, made by the National Coal Commission, by the operators, are called the stumbling block. Union officials, the report asserts, direct their efforts toward winning the strike at mines producing domestic coal while the operators confine their shipments to other grades and then allege a shortage of cars. The document continues:

"The claims of the opposing parties to the controversy are widely divergent, both as to production and number of men on strike. One thing, however, is quite clear as a result of present conditions. The public is not getting an adequate supply of coal on the one hand, and is being required on the other hand to pay an exorbitant price for what it gets. Figures submitted by the operators, covering production for the first eight months of the year, indicate a satisfactory output. During this period the production has been substantially equivalent to the production covering the same period in 1919. Such a showing makes it difficult to understand the present status of the coal market and constantly soaring prices.

"It has been well established that there are individual instances of sheer profiteering in the coal industry. The public is the victim. This phase of the situation ought to be promptly and thoroughly investigated."

BRAUN GIVES UP PAPER.

Finds He Cannot Under Austrian Law Get Rid of Bolshevist Staff.

Copyright, 1920, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

VIENNA, Sept. 16.—Marcus Braun, who two months ago acquired the capital stock of The Vienna Hungarian News, forced the cancellation of the deal today, stating as the ground that a majority of the editorial staff were Bolshevist refugees from Budapest who, according to the present Austrian press law, cannot be discharged nor can the course of the paper be changed without the consent of the editorial staff.

Braun will return to America shortly.

Agricultural Profits Grow.

The International Agricultural Corporation in its report for the year ended June 30 shows a surplus after Federal taxes and all charges of $2,049,888, the equivalent of $15.70 a share on the preferred stock as compared with $11.78 a share in 1919. The gross profits were $5,735,562 or an increase of about $1,000,000 over the preceding year. During the fiscal year $404,500 in bonds was retired. The profit and loss surplus now amounts to $4,073,234.

DELIVER HOUSING REPORT.

Recommendations by the Mayors to be Made Public Monday.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Sept. 17.—Recommendations to the Rockwood Housing Committee as prepared by the New York State conference of Mayors, were delivered to Chairman Lockwood this afternoon, but were not made public. A draft of them will be given out Monday afternoon, it was said.

Senator Lockwood and members of the committee worked all of today on the housing bills which are to be presented to the Legislature next Monday night. It is understood that there will be at least six bills handed in Monday night carrying out the committee's views. Governor Smith, who is to return to Albany tomorrow, will be asked to look the measure over and give his opinion as to whether they cover the ground.

Fire Destroys Ship at Baltimore.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 17.—The steamer Kershaw of the Merchants' and Miners' Line was badly damaged by fire of undetermined origin and sank early today at the yards of the Baltimore Dry Docks and Shipbuilding Company, where she had been undergoing repairs. It was reported that six members of the crew were missing, but officials of the steamship company said they were reasonably certain that no lives were lost. The ship was valued at $400,000.

VOLUNTEER HOSPITAL PLEA.

General Booth Says Institution Is in Dire Need of Funds.

Pointing to the praise of the Volunteer Hospital for its quick work in aiding the wounded victims of the Wall Street bomb explosion, General Ballington Booth, President of the institution, yesterday appealed to the public for $5,000, which is badly needed for the general work of the institution. General Booth said that the money was required "for immediate needs."

General Booth says that, "fortunately, our four new stories of the Volunteer Hospital were just finished and available for the accommodation and treatment of the many victims of the liability brought to our wards. These number fifty patients, and our outdoor patient department was able to minister to scores of minor cases of injury.

"In this emergency we trust that thousands of firms and gentlemen who had heard of the splendid service rendered by the Volunteer Hospital in this district will recognize that at this time as never before, we need financial assistance for increased equipment and facilities. Checks or money orders may be addressed to the Volunteer Hospital, at Beekman and Water Streets."

SECRETARY WILSON WILL MEET MINERS

Commends Decision Ordering Men Back and Promises to Consider Their Claims.

MEN SLOW IN RETURNING

Union Leaders Do Not Look for a General Resumption of Work Before Monday.

HAZLETON, Pa., Sept. 17.—Secretary of Labor Wilson replied tonight to the telegram of the Policy Committee of the United Mine Workers of America, sent on Sept. 13. He promises immediate consideration of the claims of the miners and is ready to meet with their committee. The telegram reads:

Washington, Sept. 17, 1920.

Have just returned to Washington and find your telegram of the 13th awaiting me. In view of the fact that your Policy Committee has taken the wise and honorable position of advising the idle mine workers to return to work, I shall be glad to meet the committee and carefully consider any claims of the mine workers which it may have to present.

I sincerely congratulate you upon the decision you have arrived at. It is the only course to protect the just interests of the mine owners and the welfare of the public, which is composed in great part of people who have to work for wages.

W. B. WILSON.

Reports from the anthracite coal districts received here tonight by mine operators and officials of the United Mine Workers indicate that there would be no general resumption of work by the "vacation" strikers before next Monday.

The "vacationists," throughout the region appeared to be in no hurry to go back to work in accordance with the proclamation issued last night by the Policy Committee, urging them to fulfill their contract in order that the request of President Wilson for a reopening of wage negotiations may be renewed.

Union leaders agreed that normal production of coal in the anthracite fields could not be expected before the latter part of next week.

Mass meetings were held throughout the three districts today and tonight at which union officials informed the "vacationists" of the proclamation and urged them to return to work. With few exceptions the vote to resume operations was unanimous.

Only 1,200 Back in Hazleton.

Less than 1,200 miners reported for work today in the Hazleton district. Four collieries were able to operate, but other workings were unable to get started because of the lack of sufficient forces. In many cases less than 20 per cent. of the men reported for work. Normally there are approximately 17,000 workers employed in this district.

All mines in the Shamokin-Schuylkill district remained idle. Less than 250 of the 24,000 miners on "vacation" reported for work this morning.

In District 1, which includes the Scranton-Wilkes-Barre coal fields, the situation showed improvement, and more than 75 per cent. of the collieries were reported operating.

Railroad officials said that they had distributed but forty cars to mines in the Hazleton and Shamokin districts today. Normally they are called upon to supply 800 cars daily, it was stated.

"We do not expect to get things started before Monday," said Thomas Kennedy, President of District 7 and Chairman of the Policy Committee, "but feel confident that the men will obey the proclamation, and that operations will soon be moving, providing the operators do not attempt to discriminate against our workers."

Union leaders asserted tonight that the outcome of the whole situation depended upon the position taken by operators in District 9, where the pumpmen, engineers and monthly men quit in sympathy with the miners.

Mine workers officials of District 9 are empowered by the Policy Committee's proclamation to call a tri-district convention to take whatever action is necessary at once if the operators attempt discrimination against the "sympathy strikers."

Investigating Manila Banks.

MANILA, Sept. 16.—The Attorney General has begun to investigate an alleged agreement among Manila banks to regulate interest and exchange rates. In a letter addressed to the banks he says that, "having learned that the associated banks of Manila have agreed to regulate interest and exchange rates under what is apparently a combination in restraint of trade, the Secretary of Justice has directed that an investigation be made to determine whether criminal prosecution or action looking to forfeiture of the banks' charters should be undertaken."

RESERVE BANK VACANCIES.

Committees Named to Nominate Men for Two Directorships.

The New York State Bankers' Association has appointed a committee to select nominees for the two vacancies which will occur in the Board of Directors of the New York Federal Reserve Bank at the end of this year. The committee is composed of Howard Bissell, President of the People's Bank of Buffalo; William Woodward, President of the Hanover National Bank of this city; D. E. McKinstry, President of the Highland National Bank of Newburgh; J. F. Day, President of the Utica Trust Company, Utica, and Edward Allen, President of the Second National Bank of Cortland. The Connecticut Bankers' Association has appointed E. S. Wolfe, President of the First Bridgeport National Bank, and the New Jersey Bankers' Association has appointed C. L. Farrell, President of the National Newark and Essex Banking Corporation, to act with the New York committee.

The two vacancies which will occur December 31, next, will be due to the expiration of the terms of Robert H. Treman, a Class A Director, and Richard H. Williams, a Class B Director. Mr. Treman will have served his full term, while Mr. Williams was elected in May last to fill the unexpired term of William B. Thompson, who resigned at that time. The election will take place the latter part of November.

WOULD LIFT GOLD BAN.

Argentine Committee Urges Repeal of Export Restriction.

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina, Sept. 16.—The special committee appointed by the Chamber of Deputies to study the questions of exchange and the exportation of gold, reported today recommending the repeal of the law against gold leaving the country. It also recommended authorization for the Banco de la Nacion to withdraw from the "Caja de Conversion," where the gold reserve is deposited, 64,000,000 pesos in gold, which amount could be exported. According to this plan, with the exception of the sum stated, only gold held by the banks could be exported.

It is forecast in political circles that the report probably will be adopted, with the result, it is believed, of an improvement in the exchange situation and consequent relief for North American business, which has been seriously affected by the cheapness of Argentine money.

German Wireless to South America.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—The organization of a company to establish direct radio service between Germany and the southern countries of South America was announced in advices received today by the Department of Commerce. About one-half of the capital stock will be held in Germany. Service is expected to be opened in 1922, and commercial messages will be sent at approximately one-third of the present cable rates.

LACKAWANNA ASKS TO DIVIDE HOLDINGS

SAYS EXPANSION IS HALTED

Laws Prevent Enlarging of Capitalization—Wants to Remove Distrust About Earnings.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—The Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad applied to the Interstate Commerce Commission today for permission to segregate its rail from its coal properties.

The company also asked permission to issue additional capital stock to the full amount of its surplus, now estimated at about $90,000,000. Its present capitalization is less than $43,000,000, the application said, while its rail investment exceeds $87,000,000.

"Since early in its history," the application continued, "applicant has been functioning in the dual capacity of coal mining company, holding in fee and by lease and operating large tracts of anthracite coal lands, and of transportation company, operating an important system of railroads.

"Such ownership and operation of coal lands has subjected it to laws preventing it from expanding its capitalization to keep pace with the growth of its assets as it would otherwise have had the right to do. It is now ready to segregate its coal properties from its rail properties and thereafter to continue as a transportation company only, and thus place itself in position, subject to this commission's assent, to accept the benefits of general laws of Pennsylvania permitting it to increase its capitalization to more nearly conform to its assets and to what such capitalization would doubtless have been but for the operation of such restrictive laws.

"The declaration of dividends at a rate abnormally high when compared with the dividend rate of other railroads operating in the same territory, has led to the unwarranted conclusion on the part of the public that applicant has earned and is earning a grossly excessive return on its investment in property devoted to public use. An increase in capital stock as is here proposed would tend to remove this source of distrust and suspicion."

China to Adopt Income Tax.

PEKING, Sept. 15.—An income tax, effective in January, was decreed today by the Peking Government. This is the first effort in that direction to obtain funds usable for educational purposes.

COTTON PRICES RISE IN STEADY MARKET

Strength of Stock Market, Easy Money and Good Foreign News Are Factors.

OCTOBER OPTION GAINS 83

December and January Advance 53 —10 to 15 Points Lost at Close, but List Holds Strong.

There was a strong tone to the cotton market from the outset, and although there were occasional setbacks, mostly caused by professional raids, there was no serious interruption to the upward swing. The October option rose a maximum of 83 points from Thursday's closing, while the others were up 53 points for December and January, 48 for March and 35 for July; the latter being very quiet, at the best prices of the day. At the close 10 to 15 points of these extreme gains had been lost, but the market still was strong and substantially advanced.

Both domestic and foreign events in the days' news budget were good. The pronounced strength of the stock market and the ease in money conditions helped cotton considerably. Not the least of this help came in the form of diminished selling, and even through some actual buying by the Wall Street houses, which have a tendency at times to regulate their cotton market commitments by the trend of the stock market, and have of late been manifesting this tendency most pronouncedly. Then, too, the South sold less than it had been accustomed to sell lately, possibly because of the continued strength of the Southern spot markets, some of which reported further slight advances yesterday.

The foreign news as to trade conditions in Europe was good and the reports of the probable avoidance of the threatened British coal miners' strike exerted a very good influence here, as it did also in the Liverpool market. Added to this, sterling and French exchanges both continued their advance of the last week, and this helped sentiment. Spot prices at Liverpool were down 30 points, but futures were strong at closing advances of 20 to more than 30 points.

PRIVATE DWELLINGS IN GOOD DEMAND

Joseph C. Abramson, the Operator, Adds to His East Side Residential Holdings.

BUYS $45,000 HOUSE

Halsey & Flint Acquire Property on East Sixteenth Street from Realty Company.

The market for private houses maintained its strength yesterday, the business being featured by a goodly number of transactions whereby New Yorkers acquired buildings for their own occupancy.

Pease & Elliman sold for John A. Wesser, President of the Wesser Piano Company, 164 East Eightieth Street, 30 by 100, a four-story house. Joseph G. Abramson, the operator, is the purchaser of this property, which was held at $45,000.

Charles B. Halsey and T. J. S. Flint bought from the Bancroft Realty Company the five-story dwelling at 37 East Sixtieth Street, on a lot 20 by 100.5.

Henry Hess, Jr., sold to Louis H. Nordlinger 29 East Seventy-seventh Street, a five-story dwelling, 25 by 102.2.

The Corfran Realty Corporation bought from Hayne Davis the five-story dwelling at 318 West 107th Street, 20 by 100.11.

Schindler & Liebler sold for the estate of Sarah H. Crosby, George P. Hotaling, trustee, two three-story dwellings, at 135 and 137 East Ninety-fourth Street, in conjunction with T. F. Keating.

Mrs. Dorothy Straight, widow of Major Willard D. Straight, has bought from John C. Oakes and others the four-story dwelling at 423 West Twenty-first Street, on a lot 20.5 by 104, opposite the Union Theological Seminary, which occupies the block between Ninth and Tenth Avenues. Recently Mrs. Straight bought a similar house at 423, and is also understood to have purchased the intervening house at 421. Nothing could be learned regarding her plans.

Payson McL. Merrill Company sold for the Central Union Trust Company, trustee for Frederick F. Trowbridge, to a client for occupancy, 115 East Thirty-seventh Street, a four-story dwelling on lot 21 by one-half block. Early in the year the same brokers sold for the Trowbridge estate four houses on Thirty-eighth Street directly abutting the above dwelling, all for private occupancy.

Mary L. Smith sold to Emma V. Parr the four-story dwelling at 140 West Seventy-third Street, 20 by 102.2.

Mary E. Humason sold to Louisa A. Adam the three-story dwelling at 135 West Eighty-fifth Street, 20 by 97.6.

Cornelia C. Stafford sold 116 West Seventy-first Street, a four-story dwelling, 19.6 by 100.5.

James L. Van Sant sold the three-story house at 108 West 118th Street, on lot 17 by 100, to James Hunter for occupancy.

Frank F. Woolston and A. La Rose sold through A. H. Stout the three-story dwelling, 18 by 100, at 235 West 129th Street.

NEWS COMPANY BUYS.

Butler Estate Sells Former Home of Morgen Journal.

The Nassau News Company has purchased from Grace N. Butler and others the former Morgen Journal Building at 18 Spruce Street, extending through the block to 26 Beekman Street.

The property consists of a six-story structure, on a plot fronting 23.5 and 24.7 feet respectively, with a depth of 184 feet, and is located between Nassau and William Streets. The property had been in the possession of the selling family for a great many years. The buyers are at present located at 8 Spruce Street, in the same block.

Westchester County.

Bryan L. Kennelly sold for Mrs. William A. Read the handsome three-story dwelling with garage, barn and outbuildings, and about twenty-four acres on Cottage Street, Purchase, N. Y., opposite the entrance to "Hill Crest," Mrs. Read's residence and adjoining the William A. Read Memorial Community House, to William M. Lesher of the firm of Lesher, Whitman & Co. The property was held at $40,000.

Fish & Marvin sold for John N. Thompson his residence at 542 Pelham Road, New Rochelle, to C. C. Drew of Narberth, Pa.; sold for Francis M. White his residence on Greenridge Avenue at White Plains to Simon Roberts of New York City.

Commercial Leases.

The Brett and Goode Company leased the store, third, fourth, fifth, sixth and eighth floors at 132-8 King Street for the William S. Pyle estate and Coastwise Warehouse Company to the International Western Electric Company at an annual rent of over $35,000. The International Western Electric Company now occupies the Russell Building at 152-6 West Thirty-sixth Street, sold recently to the Board of Education of the City of New York.

A. V. Amy & Co. leased to the Edward A. Kellar Company the ground floor south store at 160 West Seventy-second Street.

European Bank Leases Here.

The Bank Marmorasch, Blank & Co., one of the largest banking institutions in Continental Europe, with headquarters in Bucharest, Rumania, has leased the front half of the tenth floor in the United States Realty Building, at 115 Broadway. The lease is for four years and eight months and was negotiated by the Brown, Wheelock Company, with Fluegelman & Trosk, attorneys for the bank in this city.

Bronx Landlords Will Meet.

An important mass meeting under the auspices of the Federation of Bronx Real Estate Owners will be held at the Hunts Point Palace, 163d Street and Southern Boulevard, the Bronx, this evening at 8:30 o'clock, at which Municipal Court Judge Peter A. Shell, Dr. Henry W. Berg, Bernard S. Deutch and Senator Peter Abeles and others will speak.

Dr. Hoenig Realty Buyer.

Dr. Edward Hoenig, now at 507 West 142d Street, is the buyer of the three-story house at 530 West 142d Street, which he will use as his office and residence. He takes possession about Oct. 1.

Warns on Patent Motor Fuels.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—Warning against the purchase of patent motor fuels and other products advertised as having been tested and approved by the Bureau of Mines was given in a statement issued today by that bureau. In several instances, the warning said, companies had so advertised products of very different composition from those submitted to the bureau for test.

Another Dead in Ithaca Crash.

ITHACA, Sept. 17.—Miss Mary Moe, of this city, died in the City Hospital this morning, from injuries received yesterday when she jumped from a runaway trolley car on the Eddy Street hill. Her death is the second to result from the accident in which more than twenty persons were injured. Coroner Smith has ordered an inquest tomorrow morning.

DIRECTS SALE OF REALTY.

Court Issues Foreclosure Decree on Five Railways Co. Parcels.

Judge Julius M. Mayer in the United States District Court yesterday issued a decree of foreclosure and sale, directing that five parcels of property now in possession of the Receiver for the New York Railways Company be sold for the benefit of first mortgage holders. The parcels to be sold are:

Parcel A, known as the Lexington Avenue and Thirty-third Street property, comprising the entire block between Thirty-second and Thirty-third Streets and Fourth and Lexington Avenues. Size approximately 197 feet 6 inches by 425 feet.

Parcel B, comprising Nos. 711 to 717 East Eleventh Street. Size, 100 feet front by 103 feet 3 inches in depth, including a garage and laundry business.

Parcel C, comprising most of the block between East Tenth and Eleventh Streets, Avenue C and Dry Dock Street, and containing about twelve city lots, covered with garages.

Parcel D, comprising the block front on the west side of Madison Avenue between East Eighty-fifth and Eighty-sixth Streets. Size, 204 feet by 220 feet.

Parcel E, situated at No. 17 Front Street between Broad and Moore Streets and comprising a storage warehouse building on a lot 65 feet front by 105 feet deep. Irregular.

Francis M. Scott is appointed Special Master to conduct the sale. An upset price of $2,500,000 is put upon the property in parcel A.

NEW $1,000,000 FACTORY.

To be Erected in Long Island City by Western Firm.

As a site for a million dollar factory building the Roman-Callman Company sold a plot of 60,000 square feet, with railroad siding, in Long Island City, to the Sawyer Biscuit Company of Chicago.

The new structure will be a seven-story fireproof building from plans of Ballinger & Perrot, architects, containing over 200,000 square feet of space.

The property has a frontage of 200 feet on the north side of the Long Island Railroad right of way, and runs back 300 feet on Pearson Street and 300 feet on Anable Avenue.

The railroad siding frontage, containing 12,500 square feet, was sold for A. H. Hews Company, Boston, Mass.; 7,500 feet adjoining for the Carney Body Company; 5,000 feet for Toomey & Williamson and the remaining 35,000 square feet for the Everhold Realty Company.

The property is west of the Court House and one block from the new $2,500,000 printing plant of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company.

Buyers in the Bronx.

Koelble & Schuyler sold for the Summit Holding Company the three-story loft building, 200 by 100, covering the block front on the east side of Lincoln Avenue, between 132d and 133d Streets. The purchaser will occupy part of the building.

The Harlem River Realty Company sold to Courtlandt Palmer the two-story dwelling on the east side of Nelson Avenue, 108.3 feet north of 167th Street, 25 by 115.2.

George E. Heuther sold to Hans C. Kochler 1,027 Forest Avenue, northwest corner of 165th Street, a two-story dwelling, 90.1 by 20.2.

William F. Landgrebe sold to Giovanni Demaria 298 East 151st Street, a three-story dwelling, 25 by 136.10.

Armstrong Brothers sold the two-story dwellings at 3,161 and 3,163 Hull Avenue for Mrs. Schneinin to M. Hirsch and Mrs. M. Allen.

Morris Sax sold for Ed. Schoren the five-story apartment house at 2,461 Elm Place, on plot 29 by 100, to an investor.

Auction Result.

By Joseph P. Day.

JACKSON HEIGHTS
and The Need for Homes

RENT LAWS do not build houses but, if anything, tend to stop building. Meanwhile New York continues to grow and the demand for houses is getting greater and greater. Rents go up.

The farsighted man realizes that rent laws give only a temporary relief and the best thing he can do is to buy somewhere and recover his peace of mind. This he can do at Jackson Heights.

Under the Tenant-Ownership plan, as inaugurated at Jackson Heights, Borough of Queens, only a comparatively small initial investment is necessary to obtain a permanent home in a highly restricted community and to minimize your future rental payments.

New Garden Apartments, of 4, 5 and 6 rooms, will be ready for occupancy this Fall. They are offered for sale on the 100 per cent Jackson Heights Plan of Tenant-Ownership, under which more than 400 apartments, valued at approximately $2,000,000, have been sold recently to selected tenant-owners.

Community Golf Course, Tennis Courts, Gardens, Children's Playgrounds, Casino, Churches, etc., are a few of the unique advantages of residence at Jackson Heights.

Exterior, tapestry brick and white stucco; a large open fireplace, hardwood double floors; white enamel trim; tiled bathrooms with Mott plumbing; steam heat and electric fixtures. Fifteen minutes from Grand Central subway station and Times Square five cent fare. Restricted neighborhood. Price $15,000, on easy terms; balance 15 year mortgage, with payments, including interest, no more than rent.

Take Ditmars Avenue Queensboro subway train from Grand Central subway station to Grand Avenue station, thence east three minutes' walk to Seventh Avenue; or take B. R. T Broadway subway train to Queensboro Plaza station and change to Ditmars Avenue train. Full particulars on request. Brokers protected. Do not fail to send for floor plans of this unique house. The Civil Service.

City.

Applications will be received for structural steel draftsman, Grade B, until 4 P. M., on Sept. 22. The subjects of the examination will be experience, technical, mathematics and citizenship. There is a vacancy in the Plant and Structures Department at $1,800 a year.

United States.

The Commission announces an examination for commercial telephone engineer, men or women, regardless of age, in the Signal Service at Large, for duty at Washington, D. C.; New York, N. Y., and Chicago, Ill., at entrance salaries ranging from $3,000 to $4,000 a year. The entrance salary will depend upon qualifications of the appointee. Competitors will not be required to report for examination at any place, but will be rated on education and preliminary experience, 50; responsible experience in telephone exchange management, 50. Applicants must show that they have had at least five years telephone experience, involving experience as plant engineer. The completion of each year of a course in electrical or telephone engineering in a college or university of recognized standing will be accepted in lieu of six months of this experience. Classified employees who have reached the retirement age and have served fifteen years are entitled to retirement with an annuity.

B. R. T. STRIKERS BEAT INTRUDER

ROAD'S FORCE NOW 6,000

Trolley Hits Bus, Throwing Out Its 20 Passengers and Severely Injuring Three.

After James M. Sheridan, leader of the striking B. R. T. men, had announced that the strikers had voted to remain out on strike a man among the 1,500 gathered at last night's meeting in the Brooklyn Labor Lyceum, Myrtle and Willoughby Avenues, asked that the meeting vote to go back to work, in a body or individually. The result of the suggestion was a near riot, in which the author of the suggestion was roughly handled.

In the absences of Vice President Patrick J. Shea and Louis D. Fridiger, counsel to the Amalgamated, who were in Jersey seeking further financial aid from unions, Sheridan was in command at the gathering. He had been speaking only a few minutes when he was interrupted by the man in the gallery. The meeting heard the man's suggestion and growls went up everywhere. There were demands that he display his union card. The best he could offer was correspondence connecting him with the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, an organization of the B. R. T. not out on strike.

"Put him out!" "Wallop him!" were shouts that arose. Strikers near the man wrenched off his collar and a few blows were landed on him. Thomas Lassey, a former policeman and now a striking conductor, rescued the object of the strikers' wrath and turned him over to the safety of Patrolman John Sandhoff outside the hall.

The B. R. T. now has 6,000 men permanently employed, according to Lindley M. Garrison, receiver of the Brooklyn transit system, and yesterday 800 former employes returned, making a total of 3,542 returned strikers.

Several threatening and abusive letters have been received by Mr. Garrison, it was said at the company's offices, but none mentioned violence. One writer, however, invited the former Secretary of War to don boxing gloves and fight him in a room somewhere. Investigation disclosed that the addresses on the letters were fictitious.

The second strike benefit of $10,000 was distributed yesterday at the strikers' headquarters in the Brooklyn Labor Lyceum, Myrtle and Willoughby Avenues. The single men were paid $3 each and the married men got $5 each. A total of $22,000 has been paid out to the strikers so far.

Three persons were severely injured and seventeen others bruised and shaken when a municipal bus collided with a trolley car and turned over yesterday at De Kalb Avenue and Irving Avenue, Brooklyn.

Henry Homberger of 1,635 Eighth Avenue, a striking B. R. T. conductor; fracture of left ankle and possible internal injuries.

Miss Anna Manning of 420 Knickerbocker Avenue; fractured wrist and severe bruises.

When the trolley stopped at Irving Avenue, according to Patrolman Eckedt, who was in the bus, Daniel Barber, the bus driver, drew up alongside the car and shouted to the motorman: "I'm going to beat you and get all the nickels!" The motorman made no reply.

As the car started, the bus driver tried to cut into the track ahead of it, according to the officer, and the car struck a rear wheel. The bus plunged fifteen feet and turned over onto the sidewalk, throwing its twenty passengers in a heap.

A summons charging violation of the eight-foot law and reckless driving was served on Barber.

An eastbound Bay Ridge trolley yesterday crashed into the rear of a car on the same line at Sixteenth Avenue and Eighty-eighth Street, slightly injuring the conductor and a policeman. There were no passengers on either car.

Laws Agree with Amendment.

BOSTON, Sept. 17.—The full bench of the Massachusetts Supreme Court, in a decision handed down late today, ruled that Massachusetts laws relating to the sale of intoxicating liquors were not in conflict with the Eighteenth Amendment to the Federal Constitution or with the Volstead Enforcement act.

LAMBS EXPEL McGRAW.

Boyd Suspended a Year—Result of Fight in Club Last Month.

Expulsion for John J. McGraw, manager and part owner of the New York Giants, and suspension for William H. Boyd, the actor, was the punishment meted out by the council of The Lambs for the row and fight in the clubhouse last month, which gained much notoriety for the organization. A notice posted on the bulletin board in the clubhouse in West Forty-fourth Street yesterday told of the decision of the council. Boyd is out of the club for a year.

According to report, the council sent out notices to both men to appear at a meeting to explain their conduct that night so that the blame might be fixed. McGraw didn't appear. He had been suspended once previously, but Boyd's record in the club has always been clear. David Warfield, Frank Bacon, Rupert Hughes and William Collier are among the members of the council. R. H. Burnside is the Shepherd of the club, and another officer is Irvin S. Cobb.

BRAKE SHOE HITS TRAIN.

Passengers Frightened by Odd Mishap on Pennsylvania Flier.

Passengers from the North Jersey coast on the Pennsylvania Railroad Bankers Express were frightened yesterday morning when a red-hot brake shoe came flying into the train and fell on a seat, burning a great hole in the cushion. One man was cut by flying glass, and others narrowly escaped injury. The train was filled with pungent smoke.

The incident happened while the train was running over the Woodbridge division, soon after passing Perth Amboy, at top speed. The shoe first cut a steel window frame, smashing the glass, then glanced off and re-entered the car at the rear end, where it broke two more windows before dropping on the seat. The intervening seats were occupied by players in a card game. The passengers, with the Wall Street explosion in mind, plainly showed their alarm.

REV. DR. STURGES RETIRES.

Will Preach Farewell Sermon After 44 Years' Service Here.

The Rev. Dr. Isaac C. Sturges will deliver his farewell sermon tomorrow as rector of the Episcopal Church of St. Cornelius, West Forty-sixth Street, between Ninth and Tenth Avenues. He has preached in this same neighborhood for forty-four years and has been rector of St. Cornelius's for twenty-three years.

St. Cornelius's Church is to consolidate with St. Clement's, which has been at 136 West Third Street. The new congregation, which will be known as St. Clement's, will occupy St. Cornelius's edifice, which will be renovated.

Dr. Sturges has married 1,155 couples, has officiated at 1,408 funerals and has baptized 1,845 persons. He will go to live on his farm at Wilton, Conn.

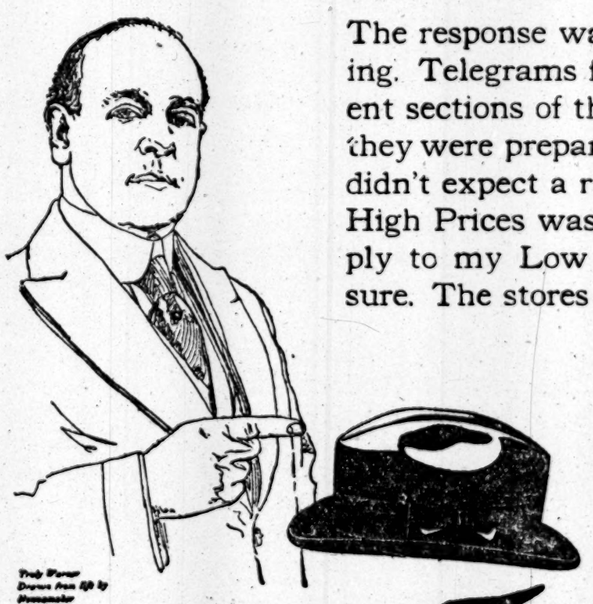
APPRECIATION

A happy throng of satisfied customers is the only reward that I wanted when I published an announcement two weeks ago that I was going to do business without profit this Fall and asked your co-operation to help me give the final blow to the High Cost of Living in the High Price of Hats.

The response was almost over-whelming. Telegrams from my men in different sections of the country advised me they were prepared for a rush, but they didn't expect a riot. The revolt against High Prices was spontaneous. The reply to my Low Price was quick and sure. The stores were crowded.

There's a spirit of enthusiasm that permeates the whole Company when you're playing to full houses in every city. This is tempered by a feeling of renewed responsibility and a resolve to do your utmost to deserve the approval of the Public.

Old customers told their friends. New customers told others of the wonderful values. The Hat Trade was sad and the Public was glad to see the High Prices shrink. It was a merry Thrift Carnival Crowd that made it necessary to play to Standing Room Only.



The hats in my window talk Quality and Style louder than Price, but the Price ($3.85) speaks in a language all its own this Fall. It sounds strange but it's true.
